GIRL SCOUT NEWS

At our meeting Thursday evening we chose our committees for our Hallowe'en Party. Maxine Barz and Delores Thieman on the string game committee; Charolotte Neuhring and Elaine Neuberger on games; Janice Hummel and Janice Swanson on decorations; Iris Schaefer, Neva Anderson, Sharon Bridges and Lois Jacobs on eats.

We are looking forward to a fine party.

At our meeting we made several new rules, including not chewing gum at meetings. We may not like this rule.

We all enjoy our Girl Scout work. Iris Schaefer, Scribe

4-H ENROLLMENT DUE NOW

4-H enrollments are due now. October is the last month of the 4-H year according to Paul Henderson, Hancock County Extension Director. 4-H leaders are anxious to have new members enroll now so they can get them started planning 1947 projects.

Your local leader or county extension office will be glad to assist you with your enrollment. Old 4-H members are urged to invite new members to their October and November meetings. Remember that the ages for boys and girls in the Farm Project 4-H clubs are 10 to 21 years as of January 1st, 1947.

CONCORD, AVERY AND ELL TOWNSHIP FARM BUREAU ELECT 1947 OFFICERS

Concord township Farm Bureau elected Lowell Maley, director, and Carl Woiwod, secretary.

Ell township elected Ed Thiemann, director, and Mrs. John Humphrey, secretary.

Avery township elected Walter Koehler, director, and Vera Schluter, secretary.

Resolution were discussed by County Organization Director Chas. F. Jackson, at all of the meetings.

The film, "Phosphorous Key to Life" was shown by Paul Henderson, County Extension Director.

Thanks for sending in your news items.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Want a Vacation from Marriage?

Alvin Blake went south on his vacation, for some fishing, and left his Missus to enjoy a vacation from the corncob pipe, clothes in a heap, and solos on the harmonica.

First few days, Martha enjoyed it—house neat and quiet, top back on the toothpaste, no morning mess from Alvin's midnight snacks (Al's partial to a bit of cheese and beer at bedtime).

Come the end of the week, she began to fidget; couldn't even read the Clarion, it looked so unmussed; didn't have any appetite with nobody to cook for. She was about to wire Al, when he barges home a week ahead of time, and she almost cries for gratitude. ("Felt the same way myself," says Al.)

From where I sit, those differences of habit and opinion — whether they have to do with corncob pipes, a glass of beer, or playing the harmonica, seem mighty trivial when you're separated. And they are, too!

The Once Over

by H. I. Phillips

THE CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS A PAIN IN THE NECK

What's become of the old-fashioned American who wanted more work? The fellow who was out to increase his business? The man who wanted to hold his customers?

Have you tried to get anything done lately? Have you needed a paperhanger, a painter, a plumber, an electrician, a mason or even somebody to cut the lawn? If so, you know what we're driving at.

Nothing seems to startle a business man like the prospect of some new business. "Can you do it right away?" has become a phrase from a dead language. "Immediately" has become the most futile word in English. "Soon" is almost as meaningless.

Once every community was full of alert, good-natured proprietors of their own businesses, all eager for customers. You could get the pipes fixed, the walls papered, the porch repaired, the roof shingled and the lights fixed any time.

Today these very same people put on a sourpuss at your approach, freeze if you enter the office and register a complete lack of interest if you start telling them that you are in a jam and want something done.

The plumber tells the help, when the phone rings, "If it's an old customer, hang up." The electrician exclaims "You mean this year!" when Mrs. Trooksey phones and says: "All my lights are out! Will you please come over and fix them?"

Your chimney collapses and you rush to the mason. There's a young lady reading a book. She looks up after the book begins to bore her. You tell her you have a chimney emergency and would like to get the boss. Her expression tells you "Haven't you heard? Mr. Spinellio isn't interested in new chimney troubles. He has a waiting list."

The water pipes spring a leak. You phone your old friend Gus Hofnagle, who was your first plumber. You have been giving him your work for years. Good old Gus Hofnagle.

"Gus, there's two feet of water in the living room, I'm sinking," you say.

"What is the name again?" asks Gus.

You have to spell it for him. He says languidly that there are 18 flooded living rooms ahead of you and that he couldn't possibly get around to an old reliable customer before Christmas Eve.

And carpenters! You can get only as far as "One of my front stairs needs a . . ." before he pulls his whole head and neck in like a turtle and starts backing away across country.

This "Customers are such pests" attitude is sweeping the country. Only this morning we watched a waitress in a chain restaurant perform in the 1946 pattern. She glared at you as you took a table; she put on a "Dare give me an order" expression; she took it down reluctantly, and when she returned after an hour or so she slammed the food in front of you and seemed to say "I'll teach customers not to come in this place twice!"

What's come over people? Are they all sore doing what they are doing? We pause for a reply. And we expect an insult!

Juvenile Delinquency, Didja Say?

There will be a national conference on the control of—guess what?—juvenile delinquency in Washington next month. President Truman has declared that "juvenile delinquency is of serious concern to the whole country," and Attorney-General Tom Clark, who has called the conference, says 500 delegates from 48 states will "pool their forces to meet squarely this grave problem."

We will bet right now that within a stone's throw of the conference hall there will be at least six movie theaters instructing the kiddies in the fine art of murder, gunplay and general lawlessness. In technicolor!

Heigh ho and alackaday! Also a heigh nonny nonny and a hot cha cha. . (Is Eric Johnson, the chief of the board of movie censorship, in the house. And if so, what for?)

Gobbler Reigns Supreme At King Turkey Day Fete

By WNU Features.

WORTHINGTON, MINN.—The turkey may gobble his last come the traditional holidays of November and December—but in October he reigns as king in Worthington, "turkey capital of the world."

An annual event of October is King Turkey Day, when this small midwestern community of 8,000 is host to approximately 50,000 visitors at its major entertainment attraction of the year.

Highlight of this year's King Turkey Day, revived after a wartime lapse, was an address by Clinton P. Anderson, secretary of agriculture. With the celebration of the diamond jubilee of the city's founding also incorporated with the observance, special attention was placed on historical aspects of the city's growth.

Provide Entertainment.

To satisfy hearty appetites induced by the sharp tang of the autumn air, free pancakes and coffee were served throughout the day under the "big top." The tent also served as site for a vaudeville performance, an evening stage show and a free dance.

Other attractions included a street parade and a concert by the 80-piece Washington high school band of Sioux Falls, S. D.

Worthington Civic and Commerce association is general sponsor of the observance, assisted by other civic groups.

Worthington is the center of a turkey - raising community where flocks range in number from 250 to more than a thousand. Largest flock in the area contains 40,000 birds.

To provide poults for the turkey raisers of Worthington and other Midwestern areas, three large turkey hatcheries are located here. They have a total egg setting capacity of 3,580,000 eggs. In addition to the turkey hatcheries, several chicken hatcheries and two large poultry processing plants are located here.

Returns are High.

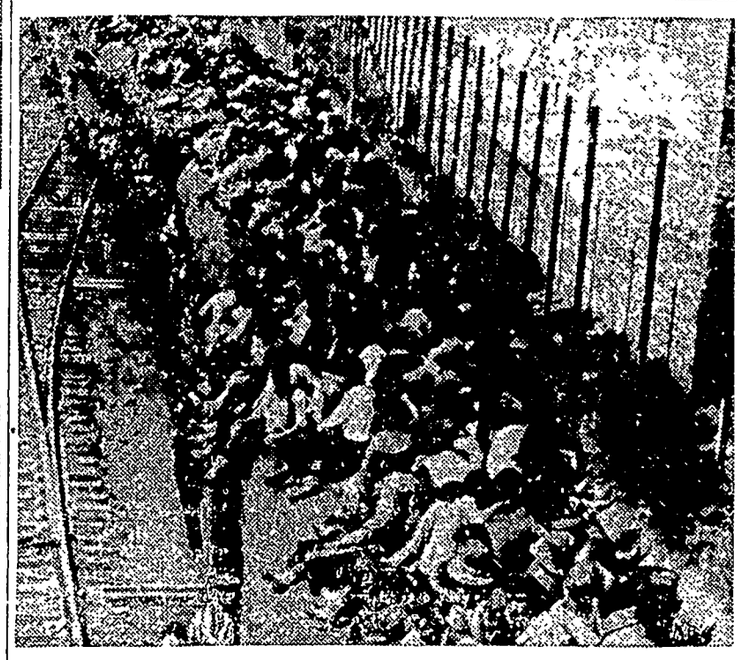
From the Worthington turkey hatcheries, approximately three and one-half million turkey poults valued at about two and one-half million dollars were hatched last year. The hatcheries' output was distributed to 40 states as well as to Central and South America.

Taking advantage of modern modes of transportation, hatchery operators utilize air transportation to rush the poults to their destination. Largest single air shipment involved the transportation of 15,525 poults from Worthington to New Orleans and thence to Mexico and South America.

Pack 20,000 Daily.

King Turkey Day is held annually during the marketing operations preceding the holiday season. From Worthington's processing plants approximately 15 million pounds of turkeys valued at 6½ million dollars are marketed each year. During the peak of the season, 20,000 birds are packed and boxed ready for shipment daily.

During the war Worthington did its bit to provide a home-like touch to holiday dinners for fighting men on all fronts. The turkey which featured many holiday dinners came from this Minnesota area, the two Worthington processing concerns packing almost exclusively for the army throughout war years.



STILL FEEL LIKE GRIPING? . . . Accommodations may be a bit crowded on American trains, but this scene shows real overcrowding on a Rumanian railroad. One train has to do the work of four, with fully as many passengers riding on the roofs of the cars and hanging onto the sides as are riding inside the cars.

Tattoo File Aids in Identification

EAST LANSING, MICH.—As a further means of identification for criminals, a tattoo file is being established by Michigan state police. The file will list all designs known to be on the person of criminals.

"The new addition to the regular stock of identification records should make Michigan definitely not a healthy area for criminals' activities," Capt. Harold Mulbar, chief of the state police detective division, declared.

Created by the state legislature in 1921, the Michigan state identification bureau is considered one of the largest of its kind. It also has maintained a nickname file alphabetically arranged.

Records of the bureau are used to help identify criminals and to enable penal institutions to get a complete history of an inmate's life.

Household Hints

If a door sags, just a wee bit, throwing the bolt out of line with the striker plate, you can correct the difficulty quickly by filing the striker plate.

Get Bromegrass Early For Seeding In Spring

Prospects for adequate bromegrass seed supplies in the nation remain gloomy this fall, says M. L. Peterson, Iowa State College agronomist. Although Iowa's own seed crop has increased over last year, the shortage already has been felt in the Hawkeye state.

The farmer who has obtained his seed for fall sowing is fortunate, Peterson says. Those who still plan to seed next spring should make every effont to obtain their seed as soon as possible.

Nebraska, which furnishes a large part of Iowa's seed, reports that the seed crop in that state is far below previous years. And the national crop is only 5½ million pounds as compared with 12 million pounds last year, a 56 percent drop.

The seed shortage, especially of the southern type seed, may tempt some farmers to hold over their old stands another year even though the legumes may be gone, Peterson points out. They may feel this is better than using Canadian or northern seed.

This probably is not justifiable however, except possibly in the southwestern and western Iowa where hot, dry weather often prevails. A new seeding of northern bromegrass with ample legumes to furnish nitrogen can be expected to outyield the sod-bound stand of the southern types which might be left.

Deep Plowing Garden In Late Fall Is Best

Larry Grove, Iowa State College garden specialist, says that deep fall plowing of gardens just before freezing weather sets in is helpful in killing soil-borne diseases and insects.

Fall-plowed gardens usually can be planted several weeks earlier in the spring. The ground dries out faster and is easier to work. Early planted vegetables are not as likely to be injured by early summer diseases. Peas, potatoes and other cool-loving vegetables are likely to be more thrifty and produce more, because they will mature before hot weather sets in.

Roughly plowed ground tends to collect more snow and water for the subsoil. More moisture can be secured by erecting snow fences to collect snow on the ground. No gardener needs to wait for the plowman in the spring if the gardens have been fall-plowed.

LOTS OF LIGHTING

A lot of thunder-bolts seem to be hitting Iowa recently. At Grinnell, a flash caused by a bolt of lighting completely destroyed a new lunch room, recently started by two veterans, Cleo and George Strawser. Flames completely enveloped the interior within five minutes from the time the bolt hit.

Forty-three percent of Iowa's farm building fires are caused by defective flues and heating systems. Thirty-three percent are caused by sparks lighting on roofs.

INFLATION IS NOW PEOPLE'S PROBLEM

Whether Cash and Savings Will Speed Boom Along Deciding Issue

Edward D. Allen, Iowa State College farm economist, said this week that with the removal of most price controls further fight against inflation is up to the people themselves.

While admitting the mounting pressure to remove ceilings on meat may have forced the government to take the action it did, Allen indicated that many people may have lost sight of the real purpose of price controls.

Their big job was to curb spiraling prices, and now they will have to be a voluntary one by the people. The way in which they react to free prices will do much to determine whether or not the big boom is on.

Still Higher Prices—?

Allen points out that there still is a great inflationary pressure that could result in a spiral of rising prices much more serious than what we have experienced so far. While he agrees that rapid increases in production are part of the answer to inflation, he emphasizes that the production of durable goods and housing can't possibly be increased fast enough to meet the demand at present prices. We have nearly full employment now, which means that little additional labor is available for expanded production.

The inflationary pressure lies in the current high level of earnings and the increase in liquid assets in the hands of the people. Most surveys indicate that liquid assets—cash and items that can be turned quickly into cash—have increased from 3 to 3 and one half times since prewar days.

Intentions Good

Studies made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics show that most families who hold considerable cash or bonds don't intend to use them this year or in the immediate future. They indicated that they would use installment plans and mortgage credit, however, in purchasing durable goods such as stoves, refrigerators and cars. And while they may not cash in their bonds, they probably are more inclined to spend current income more rapidly, knowing that they have a backlog of security.

While there seems to be rather firm control over savings, it would be a mistake to assume that this control can be maintained now that price ceilings have been tossed out.

MRS. KERAUS HAD BIRTHDAY SATURDAY

Mrs. Antonio Keraus had a birthday Saturday and in honor of the event Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman entertained at a dinner Sunday Mrs. Keraus, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Keraus, Otho Keraus of Osage and Mrs. Rosa Mitchell of Swea City.

JOBS AWAIT YOUNG MEN FOR COW TESTING WORK

There's still urgent need for unmarried high school graduates to fill positions as supervisors of Iowa Dairy Herd Improvement Associations.

Lyle Jackson, dairy husbandry extension specialist of Iowa State College, says 61 associations are now in operation, and 28 of them need men to serve as supervisors. The positions pay from $135 to $150 per month plus board and room. The supervisor furnishes his own car and travel.

The supervisors visit the farm of each association member once a month. Their job is to weigh the milk, determine the amount of butterfat and keep production and feed records on each cow in the herd. These records enable the member to do a better job of dairy herd management. And, as Jackson points out, these jobs give the supervisor valuable experience in sound dairy feeding and management practices.

To train men for these supervisory positions, the Extension Dairy Husbandry Department is offering a free 3-weeks' training course at Ames. This course will be held on the Iowa State campus, Oct. 9 to 29. Young men who would like to learn more about the positions and the course should write directly to the Extension Dairy Husbandry Department in Ames.

The Rev. Carnell Wilson, 73, father of Mrs. Earl Schaefer of Forest City, died in a hospital at Storm Lake Monday from injuries received when he was struck by a car.

Graveside services will be held at 3:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the north cemetary at Forest City.

CREAMERY ADDS NEW VA TO PLANT EQUIPMENT

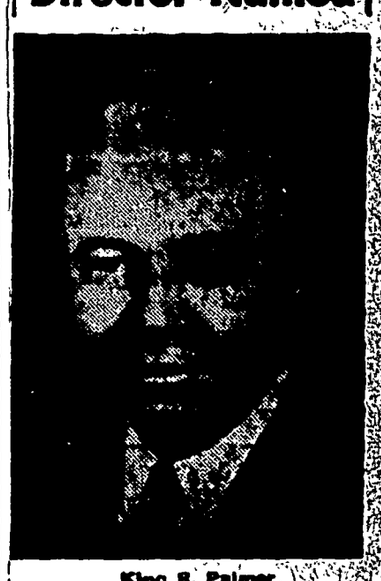
A new 900-gallon stainless steel vat arrived at the Klemme creamery last week to be added to the plant equipment and to replace two out-moded vats of smaller capacity.

The new vat is of the latest type, all steel construction; with enameled white outside and stainless steel inside, and cork insulated between the two walls of steel. This new vat will replace two of the three smaller vats and still give the plant greater capacity.

Other improvements being made at the plant include the removing of a line shaft and belting to the various machines and having individual electric motor drive and control on each machine. The plant has also been recently repainted with gleaming white enamel.

A building formerly used for storage at the rear of the plant is being remodeled into a double garage and will house their trucks, as well as giving some storage space.

March of Dimes Director Named



King R. Palmer

King R. Palmer, Des Moines has been named Iowa State Chairman of the 1947 March of Dimes which takes place Jan. 15-30, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, has announced.

A former superintendent of schools in Iowa, Mr. Palmer has long been prominent in educational, fraternal and civic affairs. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Upper Iowa University.

Mr. O'Conner, in making known Mr. Palmer's acceptance of the chairmanship, revealed that in coping with the 1946 outbreaks of infantile paralysis the National Foundation sent to its chapters in the field more than two and a half million dollars in epidemic aid through the end of September.

"Many of this year's polio patients," Mr. O'Connor said, "will require hospitalization and care for a long period of time. The aftercare of these patients will be more expensive than treatment in the acute stage of the disease. The high cost of epidemics points up the real need for the services of publi-spirited men such as Mr. Palmer. His efforts will prove of great value in the forthcoming appeal."

Mr. Palmer served as chairman of the Iowa Board of Social Welfare from 1939 to 1945. A former insurance man, he is currently a public relations representative for the "Household Finance Corporation."

U. S. Faces Crisis in School System

Nation Suffers Scarcity Of Competent Teachers

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Less than a year and a half after the question of which would triumph, naziism or democracy, was settled, the United States is being forced to meet a crisis in its competitive struggle to maintain its way of life.

Baukhage

Two years ago the prediction, based on trends of that moment, was made that "our school system faces one of the greatest crises in its history—American schools have lost 200,000 competent, well-prepared teachers since Pearl Harbor." (That was in June, 1944.)

At that time only one out of a hundred school teachers held "emergency certificates"—certificates issued to persons admittedly not in the "competent, well-prepared" class.

Today, according to an estimate made in an article in the October issue of Coronet magazine, one out of every eight hold such certificates and out of the 200,000 teachers lost to war industries, the draft and other wartime activities, Coronet finds at least 75,000 of those teachers "lost" for good. Stuart Chase, economist, sets 500,000 as the number needed before the present teaching staff of the nation is brought up to what he calls "adequate."

Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of National Educational association in Washington, who has been busy trying to wake the educational world to its danger, quotes reports that Russia today is spending 20 per cent of her comparatively low national income on education, while we spend only two per cent of ours for the same purpose.

And not satisfied with what is now being done, the Soviets are demanding still higher standards of "ideological and political" knowledge for their teachers. The party paper, Izvestia, announced in a recent article that students from Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and other Slav countries were being brought into the institutions of higher learning in Moscow, Leningrad and other cities.

The office of education of the United States government is fully aware of the danger facing our public schools. Its functions are strictly limited, however, to the acquisition and distribution of information. Actual promotional activities are forbidden and improvement of conditions rests fundamentally with the states and local communities. The office of education is doing all it can. Full co-operation in the gathering of data is provided and for the last six weeks or so special efforts have been made to bring information on this subject up to date for distribution. Actual statistics of the varying needs of various communities now are being compiled.

National Education association, which began an intensive campaign two years ago to assist in the recruitment of teachers, improvement of working conditions and higher salaries, has renewed its efforts as a result of action taken at the organization's convention this July. A slogan which they have adopted runs: "We must have federal aid before we can have equalization of opportunity." But federal "interference" in America's school system has always been a bogey.

Cheat Pupils Out Of Proper Education

Meanwhile, as Charles Harris says in the previously quoted Coronet article, "we are cheating our boys and girls of their right to the kind of an education they desire," by permitting this teacher shortage which has closed more than 7,000 class rooms and over-expanded classes so that individual attention to pupils has virtually vanished. Many vital subjects have been dropped.

The worst phase of the situation is the turnover. As is evidenced by the number of "emergency certificates" issued, the standard has fallen sharply. Harris mentions one school which permitted a convict to be released from jail because no one else could be found to teach the pupils. I was told of a case where a teacher teaching sixth grade pupils had never had more than a fourth grade education herself.

Low pay is, as it has always been, one of the chief difficulties. It is a strange paradox that the business and industrial groups, who are most anxious that the principles of democracy and free enterprise be thoroughly taught, are the greatest competitors of the schoolhouse.

Here in Washington the minimum wage of teachers is below that of lower grade clerical assistants and file clerks in the government. In industrial centers, the gap is wider. In business, there is more of a demand today for college-trained personnel. Many teachers, both male and female, who went into the services held college degrees, and when discharged were eagerly snapped up by businesses requiring higher education.

Chambers of commerce, disturbed by the threat of untrained minds in their communities, have appealed to the government to promote special teachers' programs as a part of the veterans' re-training programs but here again the federal government would be treading on thin ice. That isn't in the law. Private institutions and the community itself are responsible for this type of effort, and congress always puts its foot down when there is anything that even hints at federal activity in connection with the public school system. The office of education leans over backward to keep away from anything that might be labeled "interference."

Not only poor pay but also lack of social life drives many prospective teachers into other fields. That is something that only the community can change.

If the teacher's position is not changed for the better and the public school system is not restored to its normal place in our democracy we will have lost the one thing without which democracy cannot grow.

NEWS REVIEW

Army Alters Draft Plan; Navy Sets Flight Record

DRAFT:
Modify Plan

In modifying its postwar draft plans for teen-agers, the army improved the prospects for eventual congressional adoption. The statement of Rep. Dewey Short (Rep., Mo.) that he would consider a modified draft after having been convinced of its necessity by General Eisenhower indicated which way the wind was blowing.

While the new plan calls for the induction of 18-year-olds, it differed from previous proposals in that it confined intensive training to six months and gives the draftee a number of alternatives in completing the remainder of his service. He could:

—Continue his specialized military training for six months.

—Enlist in any of the regular military services, national guard or reserve corps.

—Enter West Point or Annapolis.

—Enlist in the reserve corps and take up an approved college course, including R.O.T.C. training, or a technical course in an authorized school.

Inductees would not be subject to military law but a special code of conduct and receive a monthly allowance of $30 plus subsistence, dependents' benefits, insurance and disability compensation, if eligible.

TURTLE:
Long Jump

The big, blue, two-motored "Truculent Turtle" circled in a steep bank at 2,000 feet and one engine sputtered. The crowd at the Columbus, Ohio, airport watched anxiously in fear that the plane's tanks were running dry. Then, Comdr. Thomas D. Davies, 32, leveled off the ship, the motor picked up, and he made a safe landing to complete a record-breaking 11,236-mile flight in 55 hours and 17 minutes.

The temporary engine trouble at the airport was not the only anxious moment the "Truculent Turtle" caused on the long haul from Perth, Australia. In the Bougainville-New Guinea area, the crew rode out heavy weather; 200 miles off California, they ran into thick clouds and flew on instruments; north of San Francisco, ice formations on the wings cut speed to 150 m.p.h.

Although Commander Davies and his three-man crew were not fazed by the mechanical rigidities of their flight, they intimated that the 35-pound baby kangaroo they carted as a gift to a Washington, D. C., zoo was more than their match as he fussed in his cage.

RECONVERSION:
Steelman Reports

The wartime economy of the U. S has reached a fork in the road, Reconversion Director John R. Steelman declared in his quarterly report to the President and congress In one direction lies unprecedented, stable prosperity; in the other, boom and bust.

Steelman pleaded with business, labor, agriculture and consumers to avert an inflationary spiral. He asked business to hold down prices, labor to refrain from making unsound wage demands; agriculture to continue to produce at a record clip, and consumers to desist from spending freely.

Despite record employment of 56 million and an annual production rate of 172 billion dollars, many key commodities remain scarce, Steelman said. Accumulation of inventories at a rate of 6½ billion dollars yearly indicates there is some speculative hoarding, he added. The meat shortage promises to worsen this winter and supplies of fats, oils and sugars will remain tight for many months. Up 23 per cent from 1943, clothing prices are expected to go up another 10 per cent by the end of 1946.

NOT A BRIDE . . . Rice, probably intended for several bridal showers, went to Diana Michal, 21 - month - old Baltimore girl, through public response to an appeal. Rice is needed in special diet for the youngster, suffering from a rare kidney ailment.

READY, SET . . .

Safety Precautions Listed As Hunters Flock to Fields

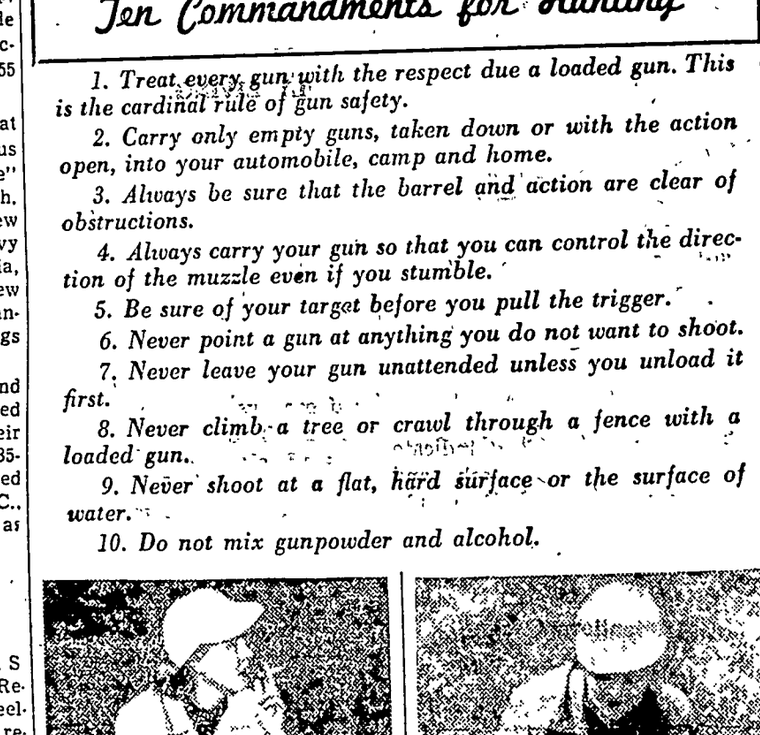
WNU Features

With thousands of ex-G.I.s joining the nation's estimated eight million hunters who will take to the field this fall, observance of safety precautions becomes more necessary than ever before if hunting is to uphold its record as one of the nation's safest sports.

This is the caution sounded by Dot and Ernie Lind, famous exhibition shooters, who have taken time out from their coast-to-coast tour to show hunters how to avoid some of the common causes of accidents in the field.

Best short-cut to a safe hunting trip is to observe the "Ten Commandments of Safety." It's a good idea, Dot Lind suggests, to clip out the rules and to put them in your hunting case to read before unlimbering for action.

When the observance of these fundamental rules becomes second nature, hunting easily can become the safest sport in America.



POINTER . . . Point your gun away from your companions when in the field so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble.

Ten Commandments for Hunting

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule of gun safety.

2. Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the action open, into your automobile, camp and home.

3. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.

4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble.

5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.

6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.

8. Never climb a tree or crawl through a fence with a loaded gun.

9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or the surface of water.

10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

AT EASE . . . Always unload your gun when you're resting after long tramps through the field.

NO BARBS . . . Crossing fences, unload gun, open the action and place it through the fence first.

Scores Censorship 'Beat'

One of the few joys left to a newspaper correspondent in one of the foreign cities where censorship still prevails is trying to beat the censor. One of the most amusing "beats" of this kind was scored by Drew Middleton writing from Moscow for the New York Times.

Perhaps it fooled many American readers, too. It reads:

"Ilya Ehrenburg, writing in Izvestia, continued his long series of articles on the United States, a group of articles which for depth and understanding are superior to anything written on these lines since the works of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson.

The dispatch was passed by the censor who didn't know that Dodgson was the real name of Lewis Carroll who wrote, "Alice in Wonderland," some of the most delightful nonsense ever penned.

I do not know whether Ehrenburg's articles as published in Moscow differed from those which he published in the United States, but I must say that some of them reflected life in America as truly as the scene at the Mad Hatter's tea party followed the pattern of an ordinary tea party in England. You remember that there was a table set under a tree in front of the house and the March Hare and the Hatter were having tea at it; a Dormouse was asleep, and the other two were using him as a cushion, resting their elbows on it and talking over its head.

"Very uncomfortable for the Dormouse," thought Alice; "only it's asleep, I suppose it doesn't mind."

The Hatter was the first to break the silence. "What day of the month is it?" he said, turning to Alice. He had taken out his watch and was looking at it uneasily, shaking it every now and then and putting it to his ear.

Alice considered a little and said, "The Fourth."

"Two days wrong!" sighed the Hatter. "I told you butter wouldn't suit the works," angrily looking at the March Hare.

"It was the best of butter," the March Hare meekly replied.

Although Middleton's comparison between Dodgson and Ehrenburg was probably well-chosen, I doubt if the censor would have passed the comment had he ever read "Alice in Wonderland."

BIG BUSINESS

Farm Value Hits Billion Dollars

WASHINGTON.—Farmers of the United States are operating a 100 billion dollar business, it is revealed in a report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Total value of the nation's farm plant, including all assets held by farm owners, amounted to 101.5 billion dollars on January 1, 1946, the bureau estimates. The valuation of net worth of agriculture showed a gain of nearly 12 per cent over the estimate for January 1, 1945, and about 90 per cent since the beginning of 1940.

The increase since January, 1945, was attributed largely to price increases for agriculture's physical assets and accumulations of financial assets, resulting from a large volume of sales. Comparatively little of the increase came from improvements to the farm establishment, the report stated.

Real Estate Gains.

Of the total value of the nation's agricultural plant at the beginning of this year, farm real estate accounted for 56.6 billion dollars, compared with 50.3 billion dollars on January 1, 1945. Other physical assets made up 24.9 billion dollars, compared with 24.4 billion dollars a year before. Financial assets of farm operators totaled more than 20 billion dollars compared with 16.2 billion dollars a year earlier.

The value of holdings of farmers and other owners of farms accounted for 93.2 billion dollars of the total value of the farm plant. This compares with holdings estimated to be worth 81.3 billion dollars on January 1, 1945. In addition, creditors' claims were calculated this year at 8.3 billion dollars, a decrease of 700 million dollars from the year before.

Assets Listed.

Financial assets of farmers in January this year were estimated to include nearly 14 billion dollars in deposits and currency, compared with 11.3 billion dollars the year before; about 5 billion dollars in war bonds, up 1 billion dollars from a year earlier, and about 1 billion dollars invested in co-operatives, a slight increase during the year.

The large increase in holdings of cash and government bonds during the war years, the bureau said, probably reflected some deterioration of the farm plant. Failure to maintain farms and equipment at prewar levels contributed about 800 million dollars to cash holdings of farmers in the period 1942-45, which will need to be reinvested now.

Gun-totin' Woman Is Town 'Flatfoot'

CARRIER MILLS, ILL.—A gun-totin' policewoman is "the law" on the east side here. She is Mrs. Mary Brown, a Negro widow, who long has been interested in social work.

Regularly she patrols her beat from 4 p. m. to midnight but she insists she "hasn't been scared yet." Decked out in the customary blue suit and visored cap, Mrs. Brown sports a shiny new badge, club and pistol.

Previously employed as a guard at the state training school for girls, she was unable to get another job with the state and decided to work as a "flatfoot" instead.

No Fun in Own Job, Resorts to Clowning

SHREWSBURY, MASS.—Because he doesn't have any fun on his own job, Walter Gleason likes to put on a clown suit and lead a parade. Gleason, 72, distinguished and graying, is the town's undertaker.

For many years drum major in the Shrewsbury brass band, he took up clowning as a hobby two decades ago. He has led parades in clown costumes some 15 times this year.

Although townfolk find it hard to realize that the local undertaker is one and the same person as the nimbly prancing clown, Gleason chuckles, "but the kids always know me."

'Honor' Parking Pays Dividend

ST. LOUIS, MO.—If Diogenes were to come to St. Louis, he would not need his famous lantern to find an honest man. All it would take would be a trip to one of the two "honor system" parking lots operated in downtown St. Louis.

After three years of operation, owners of the parking lots conclude that 95 per cent of their customers are honest. That percentage, they declare, voluntarily deposit their nickels and dimes in rusty, country-style mailboxes.

"The customers are so honest," Lewis J. Drury, who manages one of the lots, reports "that those who don't happen to have the exact change will drop a promissory note for the next day in the box."

High cost of attendants plus faith in their fellow man prompted the owners to install the system in April, 1943.

When Your Back Hurts
And Your Strength & Energy Is Below Par
It may be caused by disordered kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt about it—if such troubles are due to kidney disorders, treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less widely known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all druggists. Get Doan's today.

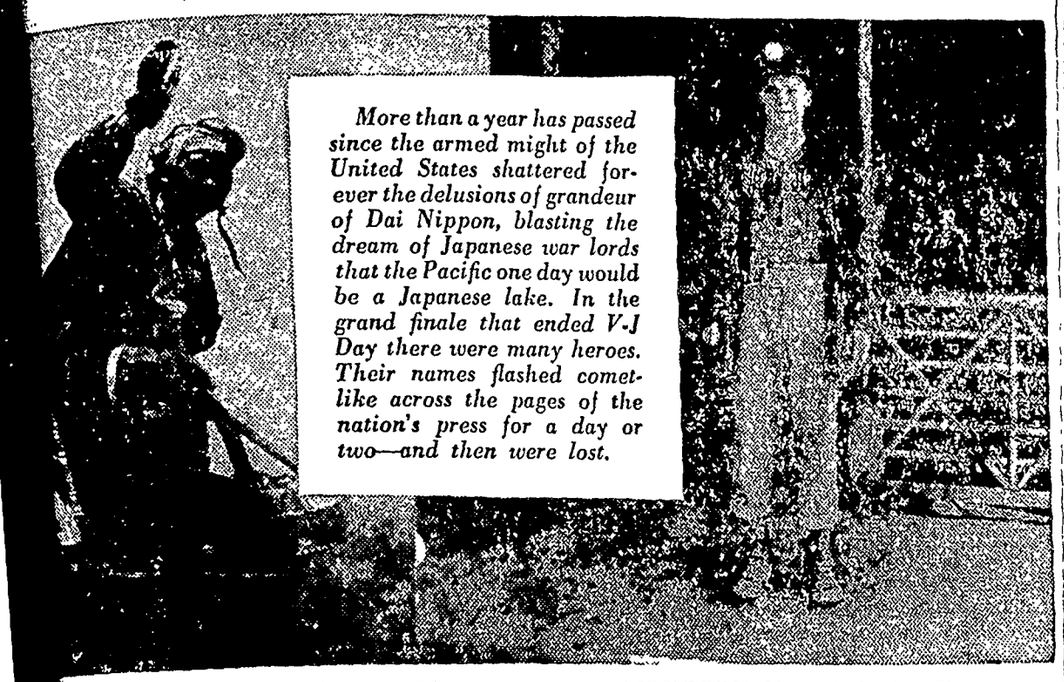
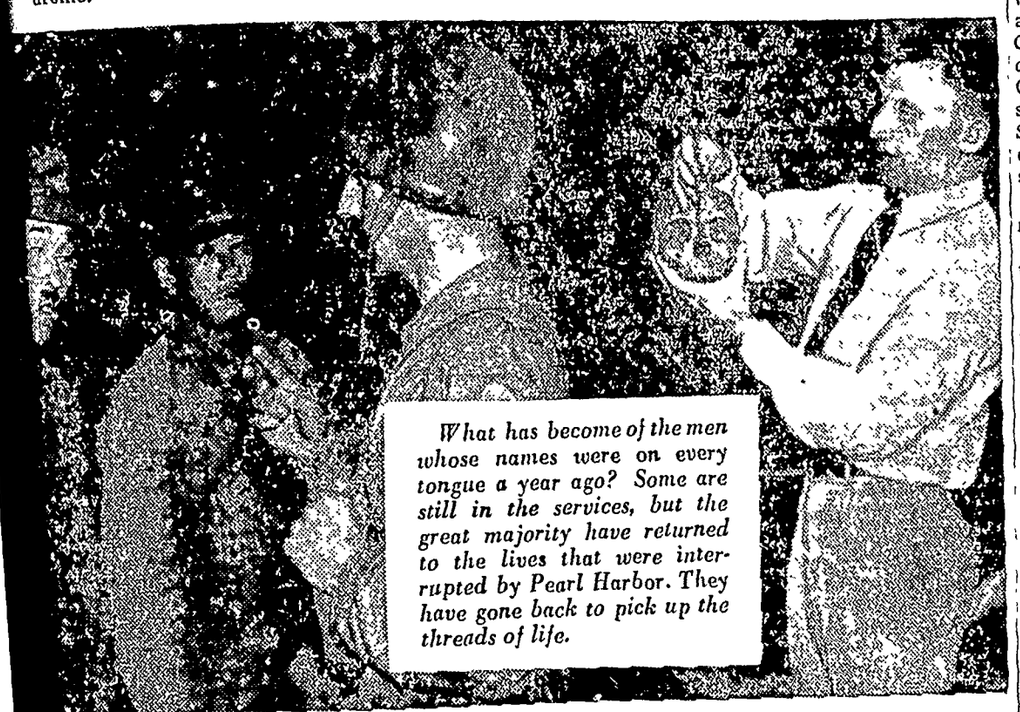
HEROES
Then and Now



More than a year has passed since the armed might of the United States shattered forever the delusions of grandeur of Dai Nippon, blasting the dream of Japanese war lords that the Pacific one day would be a Japanese lake. In the grand finale that ended V-J Day there were many heroes. Their names flashed comet-like across the pages of the nation's press for a day or two—and then were lost.

VICTORY SPEARHEAD . . . The name of Capt. Donald McMillan of New York City was headlined when he piloted the first plane load of American personnel to Japan's Atsuki aerodrome.

RECONVERSION . . . And this is McMillan today, one year after his historic flight to Tokyo. He is shown in his working clothes as a geologist at Anaconda Copper company, Butte, Mont.



What has become of the men whose names were on every tongue a year ago? Some are still in the services, but the great majority have returned to the lives that were interrupted by Pearl Harbor. They have gone back to pick up the threads of life.

CONNECTICUT YANKEE . . . A Yankee who speaks Japanese fluently is a rare bird indeed. Such a one was Lt. A. H. Smith of West Haven, Conn., marine corps interpreter during victory operations.

ALAS, POOR YORICK! . . . Reminiscent of the graveyard scene in Hamlet is this one showing Smith back at his job as assistant professor of anthropology at University of Texas at Austin.

The few modest heroes presented here are typical of the men who finished the job in Japan. A year ago they made headlines. Today they are working quietly in peaceful pursuits, proud of what they accomplished but not expecting to be hailed as world saviours. There was a job to do that necessitated a detour from the life they had planned.

FIRST FIFTY . . . Among the first men of the U. S. occupation forces to land on Japanese soil was Sgt. Joseph Archosky, radio operator of the 8th army group, army airways communications system.

STILL TEAMWORK . . . Archosky is a firm believer in teamwork. He saw what it did to Japan. So he still practices it. He and his bride team up here to unravel a college homework problem.

California's Lure Proves No Magnet In Three States

LOS ANGELES.—The magic lure of California has little effect on residents of Maine, New Hampshire and Wyoming, chamber of commerce officials regretfully admit.

Reporting that its mail volume has increased fourfold during the past year, the chamber says the least number of inquiries come from those three states. Greatest percentage comes from New York and Illinois.

Not Only Girls Bewail Current High Doll Costs

WASHINGTON. — Members of Washington Council of Church Women are awaiting return of the 29-cent doll as impatiently as any child ever awaited Santa Claus.

The reason is that the current high price of dolls is holding up plans for the council to extend its famous "doll adoption" plan to children abroad.

Now the council wants to inaugurate a doll adoption program in Latin America and China, but its plans are stymied by the high cost of dolls.

officials estimate every five eligible got overseas during d with a wife. When completed, officials 45,000 women and dren will have en- tered Canada.

The war brides, in effect, are the forerunners of what Canadian officials hope will be a continued and selected movement into this vast nation. Indications are that Europeans in impressive numbers have "got the word about Canada."

Except for residents of the enemy nations of Germany, Japan, Italy, Romania, Hungary and Austria, as well as Asiatics, there are hardly any restrictions to entry here. About all one has to show is a sound mind and body and the ability to support oneself.

Immigration to Canada was heavy in the '20s, reaching a peak of 167,723 in the fiscal year 1928-29. It dropped to 88,223 in 1930-31. From 1931 to 1938 only about 95,000 entered and after that immigration practically stopped, with even illegal entries negligible.

WHO'S DOIN' WHAT?
By NANCY PEPPER

If it weren't for your high school scandal sheet, how would you know what was going on? How would you know who's a onezy-twozy with whom? How could you tell who's back and who's got him? In fact, you can't be sure whom you're going steady with yourself till you see it in the gossip column.

Cute columns—Some of the tricky titles we like for special features are "Cat Nips by Kitten" and "Forever Ambush" for the Gossip columns, "Peas in a Pod" for the Girl-Meets-Boy column and "Hall of Femme" for the fashion column.

For Headline Hunters — There have been so many complaints from the Lesser Lights who never get their names in their school papers, that some Big Brain thought up the idea of leaving a blank space on the front page with the heading, "If you want to see your name in print—print it here." Now, is everybody happy?

"G.I." Stands for Gag Issue—Did your school paper put out a Gag Issue, just for laughs? For instance, we saw one with headlines like this all over the front page: "School to Close for Repairs," "Teachers Go on Strike," "Van Johnson, Clark Gable, Lana Turner and June Allyson to take over classes," "Tardy Students to Receive Awards," "Escalators Installed." It was a Joke, son—a Joke, that is!

Number, Please—Print telephone numbers with descriptions of their owners next to them and let the kids guess who.

Always use your foundation very sparingly. Blend evenly all over the surface of throat and face. Use a light circular movement, stroking the cream into the skin. Be sure to blend foundation into all lines and wrinkles, else it will collect there and highlight the very lines that you wish to hide. Pat throat and face gently to insure an even distribution of your foundation. If the foundation cream seems stiff, dip fingertips into warm water, scatter a few drops on the skin and smooth the foundation.

Sportlight
by GRANTLAND RICE

THE Big Nine, the South, the Southwest and the Far West are not the only sections that have returned to prewar speed and power in football.

In this connection, we'd like to call your attention to the Ivy league, too often underrated by football camp followers around the map.

Grantland Rice

In the last few years strength in the Ivy circuit has belonged largely to Army and Navy, who may be considered part of this roundup, since there is no such official organization. To this pair in 1946 you can add Pennsylvania, Yale, Columbia, Cornell and a greatly improved Harvard squad. Outside of this circuit, Holy Cross is the East's best bowl prospect.

Excluding Army and Navy, Pennsylvania has a Red and Blue squad this fall that should be an even match for any team in the country, not barring the prides of the Big Nine or the pick of the South. Munger has a terrific line, averaging around 212 pounds, loaded with experience. The Penn coach also has at least 8 or 10 high-class backs who can match any set in football today. They have speed, weight, running and passing strength far beyond the average.

Pennsylvania will be something for any team to manhandle this fall, and that includes Army.

Best Yale Squad

But the Red and Blue doesn't stand alone. Howie Odell has the best-looking squad Yale has known in years. The combination of Eli and Levi can be sensational, Levi being Levi Jackson, the dark antelope who gives promise of a big year.

In 220-pound Barzilauskas, Yale has one of the best linemen that ever wore the Blue, looking back to such stars as Pudge Heffelfinger, Eddie Glass, Gordon Brown and a long parade of others from forgotten years.

But Jackson and Barzilauskas are not the only two Yale stars. The alert Odell has one of the biggest and most capable lines that Yale has known in years, plus a well-rounded backfield that might easily give Eli her best team since Bill Mallory's outfit back in 1923.

Yale also would be a match for the prides of the South and the pick of the West.

You can add Lou Little and the Columbia Lion to this group. Little's Lions won eight out of nine games last fall, losing only to Pennsylvania.

This season Columbia has an even better team with Kasprzak added to Rossides and Kusserow in the backfield, a speed back, a power back and one of the best passers that ever chucked a pigskin. So far as the college game goes, Coach Little doesn't bar either Luckman or Governali in this Kasprzak comparison.

"One more tackle," Lou tells you, "and we might worry somebody." Lou and his Lions worry everybody, even if they drop a game or two.

Cornell Has Power

Ed McKeever's Cornell squad is no "shove around" for anybody. The Big Red from Ithaca and Cayuga's Waters has a star tackle in Wydo and a star back in Martin. Columbia just missed getting Wydo, who fills half a line. McKeever, like Little, is another coach who can lose three games and still look good.

Which reminds me of an interview I once had with Bob Zuppke at Illinois. "How do things look?" I asked.

"I can lose every game and still look good," Zup answered.

Dick Harlow's Harvard team is the dark horse. Give Harlow any sort of material and he can jolt your teeth out. He has a star fullback in Moravic, a star tackle and a much improved squad. Syracuse can be another dark horse under Clarence Munn.

So far as the East is concerned, we string with Army. As Rip Miller of Navy told me at West Point, "As long as you have Blanchard and Davis, you have a real football team."

I'd like to add Tucker at quarter to this pair. There is a pretty fair chance that he is the best all-around quarterback in college football.

Tom Hamilton's Navy team took the leading losses in material. Navy material may be doubtful, but Hamilton, plus Rip Miller, are not.

Amazing Greenberg

When the season started, all American league batting talk was banked around Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Dick Wakefield.

No one gave Long Hank Greenberg a half tumble. He had been away too long. He was too old. His legs were no good. Neither was his arm.

But in the power rush dowu the stretch Williams, DiMaggio and Wakefield couldn't even follow Hank's dust.

STRUCK IN ATTIC

When Bob Weber, electrician, of Clarinda, crawled up through an attic trap door recently to do some work, he forgot to allow for the extra bulk caused by the tools in his overralls pockets. Result: he became wedged tight, unable to go either up or down finally solved the dilemma by kicking off his overalls which permitted him to go on up in the attic. Retrieving them without alarming the lady of the house was more of a problem.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

On Playing the Fiddle Badly

A favorite recreation in our town is getting together in one or another's home and making music. There's somebody at the piano; a guitar; a fiddle player; and Molly Bittles even has a harp!

What comes out isn't the best music in the whole world. In fact, a lot of it is downright bad. But nobody even thinks to question or to criticize.

Because the spirit of harmony is there—harmony between folks who like each other's company, who enjoy the simple, homey atmosphere—with nothing more exciting than old songs, and a glass of moderate beer or cider.

From where I sit, it's a heap more important to be a poor fiddle player, than not to play at all. More important to be a part of the American scene—with its community music, home entertainment, friendly glass of beer—than to hold out for professional perfection. (Besides, I like to play the fiddle—even badly!)

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

Miss Seim

This week we colored dogs and squirrels and made pumpkins out of permoplast.

We have learned the pledge to the flag.

We are not planning to get our report cards until the second six weeks.

First And Second Grade News

Miss Halfwasseen

The second grades were very happy with their Spelling grades this week. All of the pupils had 100 for the week.

The first grade have started in their primer called "Our New Friend."

They have finished reading three pre-primers.

Third And Fourth Grade News

Miss Heinrich

Those in the Third Grade who were neither absent nor tardy the past six weeks are: Roger Bachman, Shirley Barz, Paul Gilpin, Margaret Haefner, Lois Heginger, Lyle Heginger, Raymond Helps, Douglas Jones, Ione Rosendahl, and David Waddingham.

Those in the Fourth Grade who were neither absent or tardy the past six weeks are: Graydon Barz, Lois Boland, Cecil Jacobs, Gerald Kastler, Terry Koerner, Donald Kramer, Joan Lemke, Carole Ann Montgomery, and Donald Thieman.

Gold stars in Spelling were received this week by, Third Grade: Robert Arnold, Shirley Barz, Ione Rosendahl, Margaret Terhafen. In the Fourth Grade: Lois Boland, Carole Ann Montgomery, and Faye Jannsen.

We began a new reader this week in both grades, "If I Were Going." and "On The Trail Of Adventure.

In History we have completed the story of Christopher Columbus.

Fifth And Sixth Grade News

Mrs. H. G. Voetberg

We were sorry to hear that Daisy Schaefer was in the hospital. Wendesday we wrote letters to her. We hope that she will soon be able to be back in school with us.

Neva Ann Anderson has been absent the past week.

The following people in the fifth grade were neither absent or tardy the first siks weeks:

Richard Baack
Delwyn Brede
Ronald Karsjens
Roger Terhufen
Melbourn Trample
Thomas Waddingham
Jo Ann Burgess
Lois Ann Jacobs

The following people in the sixth grade were neither absent or tardy the first six weeks:

Galen Gruis
Lu Verne Heginger
Reverdy Mace
Larry Stille
Billy Waddingham

We were happy to welcome Thomas Heivilin in the fifth grade on Monday. We now have fourteen members in our class.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News

Clara Smith

Delores Thieman was absent two days last week due to illness.

Norene and Luverne set up an experiment for us Thursday to show how water is distilled. Red ink was put in the water beforehand, but we noticed that only clear water collected in the tube of distilled water.

In seventh literature we enjoyed reading humorous poems and limericks one day last week. We tried writing a few limericks of our own. Here are a few we enjoyed.

There was a young man named Fuddle,
Who slipped and sat in a puddle.
He looked up with a sigh,
Then started to cry,
And nevermore sat in a puddle.
—Delores Thieman

A little dog ran down the road,
A chasing a fat little toad.
On and on they went,
Until both became spent.
Then the dog came back up the road.
—Doris Gruis

In geography we are now studying about Latin America, our southern neighbors. Thus far we have learned about the A-B-C Countries.

We are now studying about the causes of the Revolutionary War in history.

In Art we made pencil drawing of animals and birds, Friday. We are trying to center the object drawn and make the background of lesser importance.

OUR SCHOOL PARTY

After a long wait Friday night came, and with it the school party. We all had an excellent time dancing. There was a slight interruption due to a burned out tube in the amplifier system.

A delicious lunch was served and the party was over and it was time to go home.

Freshman Report

Reporter, Dorance Baack

In English class we have been studying verbs, nouns, pronouns, and other parts of speech, so that we can speak better English.

In Algebra we have been studying positive and negative numbers.

In Science Jerry Finders had the experiments to see if fire will burn without air, and we found that it woudn't.

Wednesday Mr. Patterson took all the boys in high school and choose four different teams to play touch football. The different teams will play each other in P. T. hours to see which is the better team of the four.

We got our report cards on Wednesday night after school and none of them were very good. The way we were marked down everyone wants to get better grades for the next six weeks.

Our Sophomore Class

Reporter, Iris Rosendahl

Six weeks tests passed, report cards out and everyone's happy?

In English we have been reading stories and studying about some famous authors. This is much more interesting than studying so hard to diagram sentences.

In Biology we have been studying about the struoture of roots and stems of plants.

Geometry is still theroms and Exercises. I wonder how many really understand these or are good actors.

In World Hisory we are back at the beginning of the Roman Empire and the Punic Wars.

The Seniors

Reporter, Jean Kurtz

Most of the K. H. S. students have been going to Garner to hear some very educational speeches.

Monday we heard a talk by Mr. Bell. He served in both World Wars. He told us some interesting as well as amusing tales of experiences in Egypt, Asia, and Africa.

A week before we heard accounts by Geraldine Townsend Fitch, a well known author and lecturer, who's husband is a well known Y. M. C. A. secretary. She spent much time in China. She was chosen as a member of the Chinese delegation to the Pan—Pacific Women's Conference in Honolulu and testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

On October 21 we plan to go to Garner and hear John A. Marsh of Canada. His talk will be on the subject of, "On Vehicle of World Cooperation."

We wish to thank Mr. Tweed and Mr. Berg for the invitation to attend these interesting and educational speeches.

We'll take our place

BEHIND THE 4-H FLAG

And behind the organization which it stands. Behind the girls and boys, too, who have pledged their hearts, hands and health to better their club, community, country and world.

They're leaders—these 4-H'ers. When the nation cried for food to meet the wartime crisis, 4-H was among the first to step up production. 4-H pushed war bond sales—and they bought bonds. The scrap drives, fat collections, the Red Cross needs, the USO campaigns—4-H was behind them all. So now, during their enrollment drive, we're ready to stand "pat" back of them. Good luck, 4-H'ers! May your membership roll grow longer and stronger.

YEAR REVIEVED BY FARM BUREAU

Hank Hook Gives Talk —Resolutions Adopted

Jack Dethmers, living 2 miles east of Garner, was re-elected president of the Hancock county Farm Bureau at the annual meeting at Garner last Tuesday evening in the high school auditorium. Erwin Kahl, Britt, was named vice president; Rudy Ulrich, secretary; George J. Ulrich, treasurer; Mrs. Haold Oxley, Corwith, women's chairman; Mrs. Frank Bredlow, women's vice chairman; and Mrs. C. J. Willie, Klemme, 4-H girls club chairman.

Speaker for the evening was H. B. "ank" Hook, public relations director of KGLO, who discussed agricultural practices in Europe as he had observed them during his tour with the army there. He stressed that use of commercial fertilizers just coming into general practice in this country, has been acepteded thing in European countries for generations.

As a token of appreciation for the home economist services of Miss Hazel Grimes, who leaves here Nov. 1 to take a position with the state extension nutrition department, the county organization presented her with a handsome lapel pin.

Instrumental music was provided by Mrs. Claudine Edmundson of Clear Lake. Vocal numbers were given by the Hauge trio—Gary, Cynthia and Susan.

Extension Director Paul Henderson reported that 2 big projects initiated by the county Farm Bureau during the year were the rural health improvement program and soil conservation district. He called for increased activity in the 4-H club program next year. Leaders and members of the county organization were commended for their loyal service in the resolutions report, read by Alfred Josten.

In resolutions adopted the bureau urged that the state legislature review the present drainage laws revising and bringing them up to date, eliminating contradicting provisions in the present laws.

A resolution stated: "We do not favor co-ordinating the soil conservation activities of the U. S. department of agriculture by giving primary responsibility for soil conservation program to the extension service and having assistant county extension directors especially trained for this work employed to assist with the work.

The nation's dairy farmers are expected to get as muck milk next year as they did this year.

Why the Surprise Over Horse Meat Sales?

In Newark, N. J., butchers insist that the sales of horse meat are up 50 to 75 per cent, and that, as a matter of fact, customers like it. "There is nothing bad about horse meat," says one butcher. "It is just a question of mind over matter." Boston, too, is eating horse meat. No horse is really safe in the present crisis.

Elmer Twitchell declared today that horse meat is not to be belittled. "I have had beefsteaks lately that I am quite sure were in the racing entries once," he said.

"The reason people go for sow meat and not for horse meat is one of sentiment and custom. If we gave names like Blue Larkspur, Old Rosebud, Eternal and Bimelech to cows, folks would feel differently toward beef," continued Elmer.

"Why do people shudder at the mention of a tenderloin of horse and thrill to it from cattle? Because no general was ever photographed coming home from the wars on the back of a cow! Because Black Beauty wasn't a bovine! Because the poets, authors and movie writers get romantic over horses, but never over heifers."

"The whole history of meat as a food might have been different if Washington had ever ridden a cow or if Ben-Hur had driven a team of longhorns."

"Suppose the 'Charge of the Light Brigade' had been an epic of the cow country, instead of cavalry mounts? What if Napoleon's cow had been stuffed and put in a museum instead of his horse?"

"Have you eaten many horses?" we asked.

"I'm afraid so," he replied. "In fact, I haven't had a steak in months that didn't strike me as once having had a saddle on it. Only last night the waiter pointed to a club steak on the menu, and when I asked if it was good he started to HANDICAP IT!"

BACK HOME STUFF

Well, ye ed has realized a lifelong yen, one dating from boyhood: to get inside the Nathaniel Kendall mansion on the heights beyond Fair Haven. . . . Nate Kendall was one of the richest men in the community, a brewery and traction mogul, and looked the part, huge, commanding and autocratic. . . .

His castle, a massive place of red granite, stood on a high hill from what then was a view of 40 miles down Long Island sound. . . . As a kid we used to gaze in awe as the Kendalls drove out of the broad driveway behind a span of horses. . . . But nobody, not even playfully brash kids, crashed the Kendall grounds. . . . They seemed part of a baronial fortress.

Last week you could have knocked us over with a zither when we saw a huge electric sign "The Castle" over the mansion. . . . The "Kendall Place" is now a restaurant, and a pretty unusual one. . . .

We made for it at top speed and at last motored up the curved driveway, ordered "Boy, put this car up!" roamed the broad verandas and had a fine dinner where our earliest idea of a millionaire once slept.

MORE PLANE MODELS

Forty-seven different models of personal and transport planes currently are in production by 29 American aircraft manufacturers, a directory of civil aircraft performance specifications issued by Aircraft Industries association reveals Planes range from two-passenger, 90-miles per hour personal planes to 200-passenger transports capable of 400 miles per hour.

Most of the 1946 planes, as well as models subsequently tested and approved for production, will be shown at the Cleveland National Aircraft show Nov. 15-24. This will be the first postwar industry-wide exhibition of new models.

Some new experimental and production models are not yet listed in the directory because it covers only models approved for quantity production or undergoing government approval tests on Aug. 31.

A similar publication recently released in Britain disclosed that 14 British manufacturers had announced 28 models of civilian planes.

FARES SLASHED

Substantial reductions in trans-Atlantic air passenger rates became effective with approval by Civil Aeronautics board of fares adopted by International Air Transport association's North Atlantic conference. Reductions average 12½ per cent but will be effective only until Feb. 28, 1947, when the one-year IATA agreement expires. Represented in the conference are American Overseas Air Lines, Pan American Airways and Transcontinental & Western Air Lines.

PAUL'S WIDENING FIELD OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:1-5, 13, 14, 44-46, 48, 49; 14:26, 27.

MEMORY SELECTION—But when it pleased God . . . to reveal his Son in me that I might preach him among the heathen.—Galatians 1:15, 16.

God uses men to accomplish his high and holy purpose of preaching the gospel in all the world. They must, however, be men who have been called by the Holy Spirit, prepared and sent out by him. They must be willing to labor and to sacrifice without limit for his glory.

Paul was such a man, and as we study the widening sphere of his service and influence, we catch a vision of what missions should mean in the church.

I. A Missionary Call (Acts 13:1-4).

Much discussed among earnest Christians is the question of what constitutes a missionary call

The need must be brought home to the individual believer's heart by the Holy Spirit, and he must give a conviction that one is to go out to meet that need.

Note that the call came through a live, active and well-equipped church in Antioch, a city of Syria. It was a cosmopolitan church—read the names of those who served there. They were of many nationalities and of various occupations and social positions. In the midst of that group were two exceptionally able preachers, Barnabas and Paul. They all loved the Lord and served him.

To such a church the Holy Spirit can speak, be heard and obeyed. Notice that they gave of their best, at the direction of the Spirit, not withholding it for themselves (cf. II Sam. 24:24). God wants our best.

Sent forth by the Holy Spirit these men went promptly and willingly. Why should the Lord have to plead, and prod, and wait for his people to obey him?

II. A Missionary Conquest (Acts 13:4, 5, 13, 14, 44-46, 48, 49.

To trace this first missionary journey it is well to look at the map illustrating the Acts and epistles at the back of most Bibles.

It will appear at once that it was not an easy itinerary these men undertook. It involved travel by sea, through difficult country, and often among hostile and hateful peoples.

God does not call his servants to an air-conditioned arm-chair evangelism. His Word must go out where it has never been heard, and that means pioneering among the most backward of peoples, the neediest of this earth. It means working in rescue missions, in thankless and difficult pastorates; yes, anywhere the Divine Executive, the Holy Spirit, may direct.

Paul met both popularity and persecution, and that not far apart. After the experience of acceptance and rejection on the island of Cyprus (Acts 13:7, 8), Barnabas and Paul went to Antioch in Pisidia (a different city than Antioch in Syria; see map). Here they were invited to preach in the synagogue and Paul was blessed in the presentation of a powerful gospel message. Read it in Acts 13:16-41. It met with such a response that the people "besought that these words might be preached to them the next Sabbath" (v. 42). So great was the popularity of Paul's message that the whole city came the next Sabbath "to hear the Word of God." What a wonderful sight that must have been.

But wait—there is something else here beside popularity, and its name is jealousy (v. 45). It caused the Jews to blaspheme as they contradicted Paul's preaching.

Jealousy always makes a fool out of the one who yields to it. Yet this green-eyed monster is permitted to go right on hindering the work of God. The result in this case was that Paul turned from the Jews to the Gentiles with the gospel, to their great joy and delight. This is a great turning point in the history of the church.

Now the preachers turn homeward to Antioch in Syria, and there they had

III. A Missionary Conference (Acts 14:26, 27).

Nothing stimulates missionary giving, and praying, and going in a local church like a live missionary conference, where those who have been on the field come back and tell what the Lord has done as they went out to serve him.

It is good to know that what the Lord led men out to do has been fulfilled. That completes the circle of divine guidance and blessing, and strongly encourages us to go again —and others to go for the first time—to do missionary work for God.

The church which does not have such an annual missionary conference misses a blessing and an opportunity for enlarged vision and service. No pastor or church can afford to miss such an open door for the working of the Holy Spirit of God.

Firestone
A REVOLUTIONARY NEW
that OUTCLEANS-OUTPULLS
ANY OTHER TRACTOR TIRE

FIRESTONE scores again with a revolutionary new tractor tire . . . the FIRESTONE CHAMPION GROUND GRIP . . . which outcleans, outpulls, and outlasts every other tractor tire. The results of actual field tests, shown below, prove what this tire will do for you on your tractor.
CLEAN UP TO 100% MORE EFFECTIVELY . . . The traction bars curve like a plowshare . . . flare outward to make a wider exit for mud and trash. The bars join in the center — no open centers to pick up trash and clog the whole tread. When the going is really tough, that's when Champion Ground Grips clean up to 100% more effectively.
PULL UP TO 62% MORE AT THE DRAWBAR . . . The pyramid-type, curved traction bars cut deeply into the soil with wedge-like action. The joined bars provide a powerful "center bite" right in the heart of the traction zone. This patented tread design gives up to 62% more drawbar pull.
LAST UP TO 91% LONGER . . . Extra high traction bars, buttressed at the base and Triple-Braced in the center, have greater strength and stability. They don't bend, break nor push through the cord body. They last longer on the highway because they don't bounce nor wobble like unconnected bars. Under extreme conditions they give up to 91% longer traction life.
See the new Firestone Champion Ground Grip at your nearest Implement Dealer, Firestone Dealer Store or Firestone Store today. And when you order a new tractor, be sure to specify Firestone Champion Ground Grips.

ASK THE FARMER FIRST

With the 1946 pheasant season opening at ten o'clock October 28 in 59 Iowa counties many hunters have not yet decided where they will hunt. The problem of where unacquainted hunters can hunt is complicated by "no hunting" signs. Most of these "keep out" signs are the direct result of lack of sportsmanship and fair play on the part of the hunters at one time or another.

It is the responsibility of the individual sportsman to make himself welcome in the pheasant territory. It is a mistake and a violation of the Iowa statutes to tresspass with dog or gun on any closed or cultivated lands other than state owned public shooting grounds without first asking permission of the owner. Hunters are urged to go to their prospective hunting territory in plenty of time and contact the land-owner on whose property they desire to shoot and make the necessary arrangements.

The importance of farmer-sportsman relation can not be stressed too greatly. One careless or malicious act on the part of a single hunter may close a given area for a long period of time to all hunters. If every hunter conducts himself as a true sportsman, the farmer-sportsman problem will disapear into thin air.

A recent survey made by conservation officers on 3200 farms in north Iowa revealed that on 66 percent of the farms in the pheasant territory hunting is permitted, even if the land is posted, when permission is secured from the land-owner.

In the 3200 interviews, 11 percent of the land-owners allowed hunting without restrictions, 55 percent ollowed hunting if permission was asked, 20 percent allowed only their friends to hunt, and 14 percent prohibited hunting. The 3200 interviews represent approximately 2 percent of all the farmers in these counties. The 14 percent prohibiting hunting is an extremely low figure and each year more and more farmers are allowing hunting. This more amiable relationship is gradually being built up because of increased courtesy on the part of the hunter and an increased respect for the land-owner's property rights. Do your share this year to increase this favorable trend.

WAR YEARS TOOK MUCH FROM LAND

Corn, Soybeans, Oats Crowded Hay and Pasture From

On a sample of 105 farms in northwest Iowa, 68 percent of the land in corn this year had been in corn, oats, or beans for the past 5 years, without the benefit of hay or pasture in the rotation.

That's an indication of how hard much of Iowa's lands has been farmed during the war years. The study of wartime cropping practices was made by a group of Iowa State College specialists and reported by Earl Heady and A. J. Englehorn in the current college magazine, Iowa Farm Science.

The study was made to find out how hard the land had been farmed that way and what cropping changes could be expected in the future.

Level-Land Farmers

One of the most important findings was that more than half of the farmers contacted did not feel that their cropping practices during the war were any different from the program followed. The lack of hay or pasture in their crop rotation was not unusual to them. They live in an area where the land is level, and soil erosion is not a serious problem.

Those who indicated they were aware of a heavier-than-usual cropping program said the high wartime prices, the need for food and the shortage of labor caused them to put more land in grain and less in hay and pasture. They expressed the opinion that it was a wise policy to make as much off the land as possible when prices were high and to rebuild the fertility in the soil when prices started to fall.

Soil conservation specialists point out that while this program can be followed in sections of the state where erosion is not a factor, there is danger of losing soil that can't be replaced if erosion is a factor.

Future Plans

The study showed that owners who planned to move in 3 year or less farmed the land harder than those who planned to operate the farms they were on for a longer period.

As to plans for the future, the farmers indicated that much would depend upon farm prices, especially corn prices. If corn prices remain high, there probably will be only a slight reduction in corn acreage. But, if corn prices fall, a considerable shift away from corn could be expected, in their opinion.

When prices fell after the last war, however, farmers increased their corn acreage in order to get as much land in cash cops as possible to pay off debts contracted during the war.

TWO TOWNSHIP VOTERS ARE TO VOTE NOV. 5TH FIRE PROTECTION PLAN

Two towships voters, Ellington and Madison, will vote on the proposition of purchasing, owning and operating fire equipment and apparatus at the general election November 5.

These townships plan to cooperate with the Forest City fire department and two rural townships in Winnebago county provide fire protection for their communities. The plan is that the equipment would be housed and serviced by the Forest City fire department.

Other rural areas in Hancock county now having inaugurated Britt, Klemme, and Kanawha is considering a similar program.

Klemme and community has had this service for 8 years, being the first town in the county to cooperate with the farmers in giving fire protection.

MERLYN KAYE TRAMPEL HAD BIRTHDAY DINNER

Last Friday, October 25th, was the first birthday anniversary of Merlyn Kaye, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Trampel.

In honor of the event Mrs. Trampel had a birthday dinner for him with the following as guests:

Mr. and Mrs. Harmen Trampel and Larry; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Conners; Mrs. Peter Trampel; Mrs. Paul Cavitt, and Clarence Trampel.

A decorated birthday cake, baked by Mrs. John Waddingham was used as the centerpiece on the table. Merlyn received some nice gifts on his first birthday.

AVERY SUNBEAMS MET

The Avery Sunbeams 4-H club met at the home of Harriet Ostendorf, October 26, 1946.

This was our organization meeting for the new year. Harriet Ostendorf presided. Mrs. Roy Arnold is our leader. Joan Lowenberg was elected president, Betty Ann Kramer, vice-president, Harriet Osterdorf, secretary and treasurer, Iris Rosendahl, historian, and Lillian Wille reporter.

Plans were discussed for the new project which is Home Furnishing.

Six members and four prospective members attended. Miss Grimes, Mrs. V. A. Cook, and Irene Marshall were visitors.

A little more sweetclover seed was produced in 1946 than in 1945.

Former Klemme High School Boys Meet In Rome, Italy

Have you ever thought of what it would be like to be in a strange country, where you could not read the newspapers, understand the radio, nor converse with the natives, and then suddenly meet someone from your own home town?

On October 5th, Elwood Harvey and Donald Schaefer met in Rome, Italy while each was on a sight seeing tour.

Don has been in service since September, 1943 and has been stationed at the Naval Air Base at Casablanca, French Morocco, North Africa. He has the position of tail gunner in a navy plane and has been in Rome 4 or 5 times.

Elwood enlisted in the service early in January of this year. He is in the Secret Service department as a cryptographer and is now stationd in the message center of the Canipiana Air Base at Rome.

Both boys seem to enjoy their work in the service. They are looking forward to get together in the future.

FEEDERS BIDDING AGAINST RANCHERS

Bumper Corn Crop Has Made Farmers of Corn Belt Cattle Hungry

Corn Belt cattle feeders are competing against themselves and against ranchers for the available supply of feeder cattle, Rex Beresford, Iowa State College cattle specialist, believes.

Beresford points out that the bidding for cattle has shoved prices as much as $4 and $5 higher than a year ago. The big corn crop has made Corn Belt farmers cattle hungry, and while many ranchers who have sold heavy cattle are looking for calves and light yearlings to eat grass next season.

There is some "black market" activity in the feeder cattle picture and some buying of feeders by slaughteres for short feeding purposes. But most of the demand is coming from farmers themselves and the ranchers, Beresford says.

Grades Wanted

The demand has been fairly well distributed over the various kinds and grades of cattle. During September, steers of all weights made up 65 percent of the shipment from the four main terminal markets. Cows and heifers made up 18 percent and calves 16 percent.

While there has been a big increase in calf purchases over a year ago, Beresford says the increase merely brings calves back to their prewar relationship with other cattle. Feeder cow buying, however, has been up, and a part of this demand is coming from chain stores and slaughteres who will put the animals on contract for a short feed to insure themselves of a meat supply later on.

Most farmers realize that the margin between cost of feeder cattle and fat cattle selling prices required to break even varies with the kind and weight of cattle, feed prices and many other factors, including the feeding efficiency of the farmer himself.

Watch Margins

C. C. Culbertson, of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, has worked out some necessary margins based on feeding trials at the college. Culbertson's figures are based on the following feed prices—corn, $1.25 per bushel; protein supplement, $80 per ton; alfalfa hay $16 per ton; and salt, $20 per ton. He figures that feed costs make about 85 percent of the total cost of gains.

Two-year-old steers bought at $16 and fed 4 months would have to bring $17.88 to break even. If they cost $17, they would have to sell for $18.59. If they cost $18, they would have to sell for $19.29, while at a cost of $19, the selling price at the end of four months would have to be an even $20.

Yearlings bought at $16 and fed 6 months would have to bring $17.46 as fat cattle. If they cost $17, the selling price would have to be $18.01, while at a cost of $18 the fat cattle price would have to be $18.57. Nineteen-dollar yearlings should bring $19.12 at 6 months.

Attended Rev. Carnell Wilson Services At Forest City

The following from Klemme attended the graveside services for Rev. Carnell E. Wilson of Storm Lake at the Forest City cemetery Thursday afternoon:

Mrs. A. J. Kudje, Mrs. E. J. Arnold, Mrs. C. A. Larson, Mrs. C. G. Waterman, Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch and Mrs. Clarence Lenz.

Rev. Wilson was the father of Mrs. E. G. Schaeffer, of Foerst City, but formerly of Klemme.

Will Have Training School For 4-H Club Leaders

DEAR DRIVER:

A wave of the hand, a kiss blown on the breeze — from the sweetest little pal in all the world.

I stood for some moments watching her, a chubby little figure in blue and white, an extremely important little person on her way to school.

And then she turned the corner. . . . . .

It must have been about four o'clock — my mind has been sort of deadened since — that the boss sent for me. "Bob," he said, laying his hand on my shoulder, "there's been an accident and you'd better hurry up to the house."

Well — there isn't much to tell. That little pal of mine. . . . she wasn't at the window watching for me as usual. For an instant I faltered. It seemed as though something within me went dead, and I had to fight for breath.

A little while later I went out to the gate, just as I had that very morning, and I looked down the street as best I could. Right over there, a short block away, was where she turned the corner — and passed out of my life.

Today it was my little girl. Tomorrow, or the next day, it will be some other little pal quite as dear.

And so on, and on, until the conscience of men shall cry a halt to this passion of fast driving in localities where danger — obvious danger — stares drivers straight in the eye.

Sincerely,
A Father.

FACULTY NEWS

We thought it would be very interesting to find out what some of the faculty members were doing in their spare time when they are not checking our papers.

From an interview with Mrs. Leith we learned that her husband was home from the Iowa City Hospital to rest between his minor and major operations. She has been very busy taking care of him, entertaining company, and attending to her school duties. We hope Mr. Leith's health will improve soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingery, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Patterson to dinner on Thursday evening.

Wednesday afternoon, Rev. and Mrs. Harvey went to Mason City to hear a talk by Dr. E. Stanley Jones. They found it so interesting they stayed for the evening services and listened to a lecture on India. Therefore we found it necessary to excuse Mrs. Harvey for not having our test papers corrected Thursday morning.

When we asked Mr. Rector what he had been doing outside of school, he informed us that he had been directing play practice three evenings of each week and making out tests the rest of the time. We do not quite believe him for we are sure that he must seek more enjoyable diversion once in a while.

We had a visitor in school Thursday afternoon. Little Paige Patterson insisted on accompanying her mother to school and helping with the singing. She seemed to enjoy it and we enjoyed having her.

TO HOLD SCHOOL FOR COUNTY 4-H OFFICERS

The job of being an effective 4-H club officer will be discussed at a series of nine 2-day training schools during the 2-week period which starts November 4th. Announcement of the meetings was made this week by Paul C. Taff, in charge of rural youth work for the Agricultural Extension Service of Iowa State College.

Training schools have been arranged for November 4th and 5th at Waterloo; November 5th and 6th at Cedar Rapids; November 6th and 7th at Burlington; November 7th and 8th at Chariton; and November 8th and 9th at Fort Dodge. Second-week sessions will be November 12 and 13 at Mason City; November 13 and 14 at Spencer; November 14 and 15 at Sioux City; and November 15 and 16 at Atlantic.

Each district meeting is to be attended by officers of the county girls' and boys' organizations, by a women and man adult leader and the extension workers from each county in the district.

Following the district meetings the county delegations are expected to assist with the holding of an officers' training school for local club officers and leaders of their county.

Delegates to the training schools will receive instruction in their duties as officers and will discuss a number of topics designed to strengthen the 4-H program. These include such topics as "Why Am I a 4-H Member" and "What Is My Place In Making A Better World."

The first day of each conference will wind up with a recreational party which will lay a pattern for similiar county events. Other topics to be considered are parliamentary procedures, use of individuals and team demonstrations, 4-H club ceremonies and 4-H activities for 1946.

Members of the state 4-H club staff will be in charge of the meetings.

IOWAN'S NET INCOME BELOW U. S. AVERAGE

Because Iowa is one of the richest agricultural states in the nation, some people have the idea that the citizens of this state are rolling in wealth.

A study by Malcolm Clough, research economist at Iowa State College, says this "isn't exactly so."

As a matter of fact, Clough says his studies show the average income of Iowans in 1944 was 12 percent below the average income of the rest of the people in the United States. The figures are $951 per person for Iowa and $1,082 per person for the entire country.

Clough points out that farm income per person is high in Iowa compared with other states, but the non-farm income falls far below the average.

Main reason for the low average nonfarm income income is the lack of industry activity in the state, which means there are relatively few people with incomes over the $10,000-a-year mark.

White House Needs Business Basis

President of the U. S. Has Biggest Job in the World

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Once more events bring up the so far unanswered problem, how can the White House be put on a business basis?

Baukhage.

The White House executive offices are the headquarters of the biggest organization in the world. The President of the United States is the head of this tremendous administrative set-up. Few people realize the extent of his functions, most of which aren't even suggested in the constitution, and few laws define them. They have grown like Topsy.

We are reminded of the scope of the presidential duties by Willard Kiplinger in his "Washington Is Like That." He points out that the President as leader of his party runs the party policies through the national committee. Some times the party line isn't working. You recall the stew over meat? A meeting of Democratic party leaders, at the moment when the President was preparing to announce at a news conference that he opposed removing the controls on meat prices, passed a resolution asking Chairman Hannegan to confer with administrative officials concerning the removal of such controls.

The President, as the top executive, heads the executive set-up and he appoints the men who run the executive machinery. He can't talk to each one every day. When there is friction a hot-box often develops. There are plenty of examples in history from Ickes and Wallace, back to Lincoln and Seward, and before.

Chief Executive's Task Never Ends

The President issues "executive orders"—which someone has to write for him but which have the force of law—and the President must see that they are properly interpreted. Again there is trouble if these decrees tread on congressional prerogatives.

He has to get bills which he favors passed. Frequently he writes the first drafts of such bills with the help of his legal advisors. He is expected, if necessary, to "put the heat on" to get them through congress. This means a lot of work in conference with congressional leaders on the phone and through his personal agents. A tactless agent can easily upset the applecart. Remember how Tommy Corcoran used to get under the skin of congress? Many others, well intentioned and otherwise, who came and went, might be named.

The President has to make up the budget, with the help of the budget director. If the director makes mistakes or asks for too much or too little, it is the White House that takes the rap. This involves billions.

He appoints the Justices of the Supreme court and federal judges. A bad choice may be fatal, and yet one person can't know the personal history of every likely candidate. In this sense the President forms the legal thinking of his era.

He is not only his own and his party's but also the nation's chief publicity man. A slip of the tongue not only can lose an election, but also could start a war. If war comes, he has to run it, for the strategy in the field is based on broad objectives decided at home. It was by no means merely military opinion which decided when and where the invasion of Europe took place.

These are only a few of the things a President has to think about. We have omitted mention of many minor but time-consuming matters such as whether the architectural beauty of the White House shall be altered with a new wing, or where some visiting potentate shall sit at the table. All full of dynamite.

It was the death of Woodrow Wilson which brought the presidential workload to public attention. He died, as much from overwork as from his disappointment over repudiation of the League of Nations. Serious study of the problem of furnishing a means to lighten the presidential burden began shortly thereafter, but it was not until 1939 that a specific plan was drawn up and submitted to congress. Among other suggestions for various departmental reorganizations, the plan created a presidential staff of "executive assistants."

About all the public knows about this corps of assistants is that they are supposed to possess a "passion for anonymity." The other thing about them, which isn't usually admitted, is that they have never functioned properly. That, at least, is the private opinion of one insider who has watched them come and go from the beginning. The reason is simple: People who expect a decision on an important matter won't take it from anyone but the President himself.

Must Keep Close Check on Aides

A pitiful example of the breakdown of the White House machinery was the recent Wallace ruckus. The President never need have been placed in the position he was.

It is not a President's job to read over every document submitted to him. No head of a business as big as the government would dream of trying to do that. But somebody should have read both the Wallace memorandum on foreign policy and the Wallace speech and apprised the President of what they contained and implied. Whether it is the President's fault that he didn't have properly experienced hired help, is another matter. That his hired help didn't function, caused the damage.

An explanation, if not an excuse, has been offered in this case. The job of reading over public statements of administration members to see that they didn't conflict was handled by the OWI during the war. Before that the White House machinery had always taken care of such matters. That machinery had not been again set in motion when OWI ceased to function.

The fault was not that the President didn't prevent the Wallace-Byrnes clash, but that he was not prevented from preventing it.

I can think of only one similar bad mistake made by President Roosevelt which parallels the Wallace mix-up and it was due to a similar but not the same cause. It involved the highly technical question of the public debt. An "assistant," supposed to be an expert, furnished the figures on which the President based an important public statement. The eagle-eyed financial writers caught it. The "expert" was called to account; he furnished new figures, was wrong again and caught again. The President was forced to make a second public correction.

The duties of a President are simply too great for any one man. So Presidents have always had personal advisors, some times they were given an office, some times they had no official title—like Colonel House in the Wilson regime. Today we hear little about presidential "administrative assistants" but we hear a great deal about a group of "advisors" who have failed to function properly in spite of the fact that unlike the executive assistants they lack authority. These advisors are too "close" to the President. And they have been criticized by other members of the administration for standing between department heads, the congressional and party leaders. They are all old, close, personal friends of the President. They are inexperienced in government.

Whether President Truman's little circle of "cronies" has helped or hindered him is beside the question. No one can dispute the fact that they were chosen because of their loyalty rather than because of their experience. The question is whether presidential duties, as they exist today, can be delegated even to a well-trained, highly capable staff.

They can, is the answer, IF such a staff is not blocked by higher authorities who, from motives of love, hate, politics, religion, temperament, taste or previous condition of servitude, use such authority, other than in the public good.

Parley Approves Italian Peace over Red Protest

PARIS:
Italian Pact

Following a pitched warning from Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov against the division of the world into eastern and western blocs, the Paris peace conference approved the proposed treaty for Italy.

Molotov

Because it considered the treaty opposed to the interests of its Yugoslav ally, Russia led the bitter fight against adoption of the pact. Championing Yugoslavia's cause, Molotov shouted that Russia would not permit the western powers to dictate to the "new Slavic democracies," and reiterated Lenin's axiom that "a people which takes its destiny into its own hands is invincible."

The Russian bloc's objections to the treaty centered against establishment of a strong, neutral governor for the key port of Trieste, and creation of a new Italo-Yugoslav border.

A strong governor would deprive the mixed Italian-Yugoslav population of its self-rule, Molotov declared in calling for a powerful constituent assembly. An alliance of Italian Yugoslav Communists would have given the Reds control of the strategic city.

MEAT:
Predict Plenty

In pressing the administration to decontrol livestock, the beef industry advisory committee declared that there were sufficient cattle in the country to meet the requirements of the next 12 months but they were being kept from market because of price inequities.

Citing department of agriculture statistics, the committee said there were 80 million head of cattle and calves on farms Jan. 1, of which 40 million were available for meat. Despite heavy marketings this summer, 52 million head of cattle were available for meat by Sept. 24-30.

Estimating that supplies will be fully 15 per cent above requirements, the committee concluded that there would be 72.5 pounds of beef and veal per person from Oct. 1, 1946, to Oct. 1, 1947. This compares with 60.6 pounds per capita in the 15 year prewar base period.

GREECE:
Inflation-Ridden

With goods and "hard" money scarce, inflation is riding high in Greece. A full meal without wine now costs more than $4 and second-hand clothing sells at $150 to $200 and shoes at $30.

As in all inflation-ridden countries, the dollar commands a premium in national exchange. While the official rate is 500 drachmas to the dollar, speculators offer as much as 6,500 drachmas for a dollar. By selling dollars, then reconverting their drachmas to U. S. currency again, Americans can make a pretty profit.

Indicative of the Greek government's desire for "hard" money, employees of the American embassy who are paid in gold flown from the U. S. receive 17,000 drachmas per dollar. This is three times the ordinary official rate.

Because there is no food rationing or price control over staple items, Greek white collar workers paid on fixed salaries are especially hit. To procure essentials, they must deal in the black market, make connections with government or business officials, or sell personal belongings to obtain sufficient money for purchases.

WAGES:
Production Bonus

In addressing the American Management association in Boston, F. D. Newbury, vice president of Westinghouse Electric corporation, advanced a new formula for keeping postwar wages and prices within bounds.

Newbury's plan calls for maintaining basic wage and salary rates at their present level and payment to employees of additional income in proportion to increased volume of production, ability to pay and efficiency of the individual organization.

Stating that the proposal could not be called a profit-sharing plan, he said that the bonus payments would be considered as part of operating costs, with employees entitled to the maximum a company could afford to pay. Terming the plan highly flexible, Newbury said that an enterprise could easily readjust its wages if business declined.

OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK

Peak Income Predicted in 1947

WASHINGTON.—Our national income will climb to a peak of 175 billion dollars in 1947 but will start tapering off toward the end of that year, according to a prediction of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The predicted income would represent an increase of six per cent over this year's estimated 165 billion dollars, which is highest on record to date.

The bureau's 1947 estimates were contained in a report prepared for the agriculture department's outlook conference of farm officials. The bureau said a high level of domestic industrial activity and relatively full employment in most of 1947 will contribute substantially to higher consumer incomes.

It said industrial production, as measured by the Federal Reserve board index, may average as much as 10 per cent higher than this year and close to 85 per cent above the 1935-39 average. This prediction was hedged with the provision that production is not retarded by major labor-management disputes.

The bureau looks, however, for somewhat of a decline in industrial production in the latter part of the year, as a backlog of consumer demand for industrial products becomes more nearly satisfied. Such a downturn in production would be reflected in lower incomes of workers in affected industries.

Farm Income Drops.

While forecasting the rise in national income, the bureau said the net income of agriculture may be reduced as much as 10 to 15 per cent from 1946.

The farm income forecast is based on: (1) the premise that consumers will devote a larger part of their buying power to industrial goods which have been in short supply and less to food; (2) higher farm production costs.

Income of non-agricultural labor, on the other hand, is expected to increase 10 per cent next year, the bureau said, reflecting higher employment in the major part of the year and higher wages. The bureau said unemployment is expected to be somewhat heavier in 1947 than at present.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

BEFORE the record season just closed, it had always seemed to us that baseball's 154-game schedule should have been cut to 140 games. As a general rule all interest has been withering on the September vine for 12 or 14 of the major league entries. The year 1946 has told a different story in the way of attendance figures, but certainly not enough to justify any 14-game increase to 168 contests as proposed by a few club owners.

Ty Cobb

With the wild rush to sport after the war, this has been an abnormal year. You get the main idea when the Phillies, a tail-end contender, could approach the million mark at home. Most major league clubs play at least 32 exhibition games. The 168-game menu would therefore give ball players 200 games to handle between early March and October. This is more than most ball players can absorb without going stale. Three hours of baseball each day seems easy work. But three hours of hustling competitive sport each afternoon or night is another story.

Even with the 154-game schedule the number of weary, injured, bedraggled ball players is something greater than you might think. Ty Cobb told me once that 154 games was about all any hard-playing hustler could handle.

"In the old days," Ty said, "I wasn't a hold out. I simply didn't need or want all that early training and all of those exhibition games. I hunted all winter and kept my legs in shape. I remember in 1911 I didn't join the Tigers until they reached Evansville, six days before the season opened. That year I hit for .420 and stole 83 bases as I recall it. One answer was that I was still keen and fresh in August and September when a lot of the others were stale and tired."

Danger of Staleness

This seems to make sense. No athlete who has lost his keenness, who has grown stale, can be of much help. The right sort of ball player will keep in shape all winter, through golf or hunting. The spring training and the spring exhibition campaign has been badly overdone. Add 14 extra ball games to the present list and it will mean more baseball than most players could handle—and still retain the badly needed hustle.

Also with the additional 14 games suggested, ball players' salaries should be lifted from 10 to 15 per cent over the 154-game pay. With the record attendances 1946 has offered, you can look for a rousing scrap on the part of the ball player for a big jump, even at 154 games. But who is going to see that the ball player gets this percentage increase above the demand he might make for the present schedule?

Roughnecks in the Ring

It was James J. Corbett, a great boxer and the smartest fighter the game has ever known in or out of the ring, who first set a rather sour example by being known as "Gentleman Jim."

For the ring is no spot for a gentleman, or anything approaching the same. And Jim Corbett was no gentleman in any ring. He told me this himself. The gentleman has his club or his box at the opera or track, but he is out of place.

It remained for Hughey Keogh, years ago, to tell the true story:

"There was no high finance about
The game of spoiling mugs,
When the dear old tub from Boston
Was the King,
When we paid our honest tribute
To the other tanks and jugs
And the soiree with the raw 'uns
Was the thing.

"Fighting bade adieu to its Traditions long ago,
And kissed its grimy hand
To sentiment,
When they took it to the steam heat
From the hail and rain and snow
And a champion aspired
To be a gent."

I still recall a story Jim Corbett once told me. Jim was fighting Joe Choynski on a barge.

"I nailed him in the ninth round," Jim said, "and Joe fell to the floor. I stooped and lifted him up. The cheers were terrific. But I lifted him so I could nail him again before he recovered. Then the boos were terrific." Gentleman Jim Corbett also knew his game.

Dempsey the Killer

Jack Dempsey, at heart, was about as close to being a gentleman, outside the ring, as anyone I've known. But only outside the ring. There he was kind, generous, thoughtful and courteous. Inside the ring he was a killer. Anything went. I saw him once giving Max Baer a few lessons.

"You can't do that," Baer said. "It's illegal."

"You can get away with it once," Dempsey said. "I have"

Unique Floating Hospital Combines Gaiety, Health

NEW YORK.—Multiply the ecstatic shrieks of any youngster on a boat ride by about 800 and you have some idea of the happy pandemonium which prevails aboard a unique floating hospital which provides a mixture of gaiety and health for thousands of New York youngsters every summer.

For 70 years, hundreds of squealing youngsters of all sizes and descriptions have collected on an East river pier every summer day. Eagerly they clamber aboard the big white ship, which furnishes a combination joy ride and health checkup for youngsters and their mothers.

Some three million passengers recommended by various social agencies have contributed to the confusion during the 70 years of the ship's operation by St. John's guild, nonsectarian philanthropic organization.

Mothers preceded by four or five youngsters try vainly to keep their broods together as they board the $65,000, specially-built Lloyd I. Seamen. The kids are up the gangplank and hanging over the ship's rails before their mothers have a chance to set foot on board. The corps of Girl Scout mariners on hand doubles between making sure no one falls overboard and carrying babes-in-arms up the gangplank—first step in giving the mothers as well as the children a complete change of scene and rest.

As the floating hospital is pulled out of its berth by a tug—used to avoid any upsetting vibrations that might make the passengers seasick—there is a chorus of "hurrays" and "here we go." From that moment until the ship docks again six or seven hours later, there isn't a moment's quiet on board—not even at lunchtime.

The more than 900 mothers and children on board include social service agency clients, crippled and disabled youngsters, and families recommended by churches, settlement houses and other community agencies. Wherever they come from, the youngsters are in holiday mood and garb.

Head of Salvation Army Visiting U. S. On Postwar Tour

CHICAGO.—Plans for promoting the Salvation Army's expanded postwar program on the general theme of "Marching Forward to a Better World" are being advanced during a three months' tour of the United States and other western hemisphere countries by Gen. Albert Orsborn, international head of the organization.

Orsborn, whose headquarters are in England, is in charge of Salvation Army activities in 97 countries. His itinerary on the United States visit calls for stops in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, St.

ALBERT ORSBORN

Louis, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles, Long Beach, Houston, Atlanta and Miami. He also will visit the West Indies, Central and South America on his 20,000-mile tour of the western hemisphere.

Orsborn, who recently was elected international head of the organization, has spent 41 of his 59 years working in the Salvation Army. His parents before him pointed the way, both having worked with the founder, Gen. William Booth.

The new leader stresses the youth program and internationalism in the organization's postwar policy.

Archers Join Deer Quest in Missouri

STEELVILLE, MO. — Marking the opening of the first special area for archery deer hunting in Missouri, bow and arrow hunters will invade Crawford county October 24-26 for a three-day season.

Crawford county, containing 760 square miles of wooded hills and clear, spring-fed streams, is located in east central Missouri. It was selected as site for the archery hunting by the state conservation commission because of its easy access, good deer population and local cooperation.

Popularity of the bow and arrow has grown considerably in recent years. As early as the 11th century the long bow had its converts. As a weapon of war it served through the Crusades, often accounting for many of the royal stags when not more usefully employed against the king.

Today several adaptations, such as the bow sight and the backed bow, have served to increase its range and accuracy. Although the modern hunting bow and broadhead arrow are vastly superior to those used by the Indians, the hunting methods have changed little.

Slip of Pillow Shows Woman's 'Condition'

NEW YORK. — Lined up at a well-stocked Brooklyn meat market, 2,000 women took it calmly when the management singled out pregnant women and put them at the head of the line. That is, they offered no objection until one woman, whose condition seemed obvious, dropped a pillow she had concealed under her coat. Her face crimson, the woman hurried off amid threats.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

'COLOR CRUISE'

Early season visits from Jack Frost turned Michigan forests into a spectrum of reds, yellows and greens to provide brilliant hues for the state-sponsored aviation "color cruise" over the northern peninsula. Woods were at their peak of glorious autumn color for the trip.

The cruise was an all-expense trip, an entry fee of $50 paying for meals, lodgings and entertainment for six days. The flight coincided with opening of the partridge hunting season, hunting guides being provided for fliers who desired them.

Nearly 100 pilots gathered at Traverse City for opening of the "color tour."

The conviction that he "can do anything the young ones can" has earned 69-year-old Bertram M. Allen of Detroit the distinction of being one of Michigan's oldest licensed pilots. Allen learned to fly six years go when his granddaughter, Marcella Allen, began flying at the age of 16. Recently he mustered sufficient courage to execute aerial cut-ups required by Civil Aeronautics authority for his license.

Eighty-four years of age means nothing to James M. Montee of Santa Monica, Calif. The point is, he's again licensed to fly—and flying!

Oldest pilot in the country, "Dad" Montee is one of the pioneer air enthusiasts of California, the man who leased a Santa Monica barley field in 1922 and turned it into what today is Clover field, home of Douglas Aircraft company.

A photographer in his younger years, Montee later took up stage coach driving in Dodge City, Kans. His interest in aviation began when one of his three sons hopped him in and out of the barley field in a rickety old Jenny

That same son, Kenneth, taught him to fly. He soloed on his 60th birthday anniversary at Clover field and soon inaugurated the Montee Aircraft company. "Dad" Montee with his three sons, Kenneth, Ralph and Harold, became known as the "Flying Family."

"Dad" Montee has 3,000 hours in his log book. His license lapsed at outbreak of war, but he recently returned to the air to get a renewal.

FLYING MAIL CAR . . . Outfitted with special mail car equipment for sorting letters during flight, this Fairchild Packet made the flight from New York to San Francisco, marking inaugural of five-cent airmail service.

CHANGE IN NUMBERS

Another letter is being added to civilian aircraft license numbers. Instead of the five numerals after the familiar "NC" prefix, new aircraft now coming off production lines will have four numerals ending with the letter "H." Since NC license numbers have entered the 100,000 bracket, the "H" eliminates the necessity of placing six numerals on wings of registered aircraft. It is presumed that the suffix "H" was chosen because its straight lines made for simpler lettering.

MINISTER AT WORK . . . James W. Carty, 21-year-old minister, contends that ministers should learn at first hand the problems of the working man. He proves his contention by working on the assembly line of the Ford Rouge plant.

'GOOD FELLOW'

Minister Takes Factory Job To Study Workers' Problems

WNU Features

DEARBORN, MICH.—To prove his contention that ministers should learn at first hand the problems besetting the working man, James W. Carty, 21, of Hastings, Neb., theological student at disciples divinity house, University of Chicago, spent his vacation working on the assembly line at the Rouge plant of Ford Motor company.

Carty, who believes that ministers in middle class parishes should spend more time working alongside their parishioners to learn their problems intimately, was one of four theological students employed at the plant.

Exchanging their ministerial garb for work clothes, the four theological students took their places beside the regular working man on an assembly line in the production foundry. Like their fellow workers, they were paid at the regular hourly rate of $1.25.

To round out their experiment in intimate contact with the working man, the students spent a week at the CIO summer camp at Port Huron, Mich., after completing three months' work in the foundry.

Smart and likable, Carty was popular with his fellow workers, who invariably would gather round him at lunch period to hear a simple explanation of religion.

"He seems like a good fellow," fellow assembly line workers agreed.

Carty also preached every Sunday in Detroit while working here.

Although he has no parish, Carty, who is a member of the Christian church denomination, has preached at "about 30 churches in Chicago of Christian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist faiths."

He has compressed four years of college and three years of divinity school into three years. He received his A.B. degree from Culver Stockton college, Canton, Mo. Several of his articles on various phases of religion have been published in religious journals.

Foul Trick Scares Turkey to Death, Biologist Reveals

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. — The native wild turkey of the Southwest can be scared to death. But, for the benefit of anyone who might hope to get a Thanksgiving feast that way, J. Stockley Ligon, field biologist of the Fish and Wildlife service, adds, the turkey first must be trapped and then scared on a full stomach.

Alone in a trap and approached by human beings, the turkey becomes crazed with shock and, if his crop is full, digestion stops and he soon dies.

The native turkey reached all-time lows of 20,000 in Arizona, 16,000 in New Mexico and 3,400 in Colorado between 1935 and 1940. Ligon reports, the total representing only 15 per cent of the number when Coronado and the first white men began their slaughter 400 years ago.

Hair-raising Data Disclosed in Bald Facts on Women

CHICAGO. — One of the nation's best-kept secrets — although it had no bearing on the war or politics—finally has leaked out.

At least 500,000 women are bald and more are getting that way, it was disclosed by a veteran wigmaker, George Henri, who revealed the hair-raising statistics after 40 years of hiding women's lights under bushels of artificial hair.

"Few of the women are totally bald," he reports, "but they do need wigs. Quite a few wear toupees."

"Some of the women say they prefer wigs to their own hair," according to Henri. "They don't have to bother with beauty parlors and they can hang their hair on the bedpost at night so it won't get mussed."

He points out that most hair-shedding among the fair sex is a result of illness.

NO FORKS NEEDED . . . Youngsters gulped pies with a vengeance at the pie-eating contest which was among the features of the pumpkin festival at Eureka, Ill., self-styled "pumpkin center of the world." Kenneth Remmert (third from right) won the contest by consuming a standard 12-inch pie in 4 minutes, 10 seconds.

Civilians Eat More Than Soldiers

WASHINGTON. — A soldier eats less food than the average active civilian, figures compiled by the army quartermaster corps show.

The army's master menu for troops allots an average of 3,780 calories a day, according to the quartermaster, while many non-soldiers burn up 4,500 calories.

Left out of account, however, the war department acknowledges, are the candies and other sweets which soldiers buy at post exchanges or elsewhere to round out their daily eating.

The master menu, which lays out meals three months in advance, provides the soldier with 273 pounds a year of meat, poultry and fish—100 pounds more than the average for the civilian group with the highest consumption rate. The master menu serves as a guide for messes in all army establishments.

MUSICAL MIXERS

An icebreaker is a powerful boat that cracks the ice so that ships can get through; but to a teener an icebreaker is some trick that will get the Janes and Joes to acting human at a party. Here are a few nifty ways to crack the old freezy stuff:

Wandering Minstrel—That's what the boy will be at your party when they play the Words and Music Mixer. You ask each girl to select a record from a special pile on a table (you have as many records there as you have girls). Then you ask the boys to pick slips of paper on which the corresponding song titles are written. Each boy must go 'round the room singing his song until he finds the girl who holds the corresponding record. They take off from there and usually make a three-point landing before the last dance.

Record Rotation—Whenever the music stops suddenly, each girl and boy must change partners with the nearest couple. Everybody gets to know everybody else and it's close harmony until the End of Time.

Title Teasers—Divide the gang into two teams on account of you're going to play a new kind of charade. One team decides upon a song title and one person acts it out for the other team to guess. How would you depict "Fry Me, Cookie, with a Can of Lard"? Or would you rather try your talents on "Chickery Chick?"

Sound Effects—You pass out two sets of slips with corresponding song titles on them—one set to the boys, one to the girls. Couples not only pair off for the next dance—but they first have to make like a duet with their song. Oh, Bing—where is thy sting?

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

So you're the agreeable kind; you'll do anything that pleases YOU. When the rest of the crowd wants to go bowling, you hold out for movies. When the other three on your double date vote for Cheeseburgers at the roadside stand, you insist upon a Banana Split at the Soda Fountain. If the gang wants Bounce Music on the phonograph, you play a Sinatra Swoonsong. Better be careful—if you insist upon having everything your own way, you'll find yourself doing the one thing you want least to do—listening to the radio by yourself on Saturday nights.

Brief, Chic Raincoat

The "Pee Wee" raincoat, modeled after the brief topper, is popular on campuses this fall. It is made of water-proof koroseal, and comes in gay hues, such as coral reef, sea garden (misty blue) and lime green.

Minute Make-Ups
By GABRIELLE

Tired from sitting at a desk all day? Feel at closing time that you just can't go anywhere in the evening? Your neck stiff and the muscles tense? Then relax—just sit quietly for five minutes. Slowly turn your head from right to left, left to right. Now clasp your hands behind your head. Bend your head back. Press your fingers gently on the tight muscles. You will feel rested and your neck less tense.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Tips For Tots

Here are some tips about what to feed the young fry it's hard to find meat. Nurtritionists of the Children's u tell us that "everything meat has that children need ilable in other foods. Used in the right combinations, will supply meat's nutrients, chief of which is high- y protein." Here's what they advice:

1. A quart of milk a day supplies considerable protein, st half the amount needed for children from 3 to 13.

2. All kinds of cheese are concentrated source of high- protein. And contrary to the old belief, even young en can digest cheese easily. Just be sure it doesn't get and stringy from overheating. Eggs are another good source, and so is fish.

3. If you can find any liver sausage, frankfurters or on meat, their protein content compares favorably hat in a prime rib roast.

4. Some of the vegetable foods that contain protein are beans and peas, peanut butter, bread, macaroni and ast cereals. Be sure, if you depend on vegetable pro- that your child gets at least a pint of milk a day. This nation is important.

Normally, a youngster of ten would get about 40 per f his protein from milk, 25 percent from meat, fish and nd close to 25 per cent from bread and other cereals. t is absent, you can increase the amount of their pro- ods to make up the deficit.

In Art we are making a Hallowe'en Poster, entitled, "Hallowe'en Games."

Fifth And Sixth Grade News

Mrs. H. G. Voetberg

As a result of an error the following names were omitted last week, as people having a perfect attendance for the first six weeks.

Sharon Bridges
Margaret Boland
Eunice Helps
Elaine Neuberger
Miriam Priebe

The sixth grade has completed their unit on Australia and New Zealand. Our new unit will be India.

In health we have been learning about the digestive system. We have some large wall charts showing this material. We enjoy looking at them.

Thursday morning we sang some Hallowe'en songs for Mrs. Voetberg that we had learned in music.

The fifth grade is learning to mulitply by two figures. We have found out that errors are very easily made. We're all going to have to review our multiplication combinations.

Friday in Art we made masks that we are going to wear at the Hallowe'en party on Thursday afternoon.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News

Clara Smith
Reporter, Shirley Bisom

In Seventh Science they have been studying the unit on Health. Monday they plan to make posters of the classes of foods.

We made pictures on black paper with colored chalk in our Art class this week.

We have some new reading books in our eighth grade. They are called Driving the Reading Road.

The freshman class invited us to the science room Thusrday to see how cells look through a microscope. We saw the cells in a tiny piece of skin.

Freshman Report

The past week the freshmen have been having very interesting assignments in history. We studied about how Julius Caesar ruled Rome. Caesar was always in debt so the First Triumvirate was formed. It consisted of Caesar, Pompey who was very popluar with the people and Crossus a millionaire. Later Caesar was stabbed to death by Brutus. In the days of Augusta the classes of people of Rome were aristocrats, equestrians, middle class, rabbles, and slaves. Aristocrates and equestrians were rich noble people. The middle class consisted of professional men and women. Rabbles were people who depended upon the state for food and we also covered many more interesting topics.

Yesterday Jerry Finders brought a salamander to science class.

Algebra is becoming quite easy for most of us.

In English we have been diagraming sentences. This has also been very easy.

On Monday afternoon the entire high school went to Garner to listen to an educational talk on International Relations. The speaker was Mr. John Marsh who spoke on Canada and the United States. Altho a Canadian himself, Mr. Marsh has traveled extensively throughout our country having been in 31 of the 48 states. He has acquainted himself with the assets and liabilities of the respective countries and in each the beauty and wealth which calls for the admiration and loyalty of her citizens.

REAL LIQUOR!

For Christmas we gave an aged servant a quart of whisky as a present. About a week later I asked him how it was. He replied: "It was jes' right, Boss."

To make conversation, I asked him what he meant by "jes' right."

"Well," he rejoined, "if it would have been any better, Boss, you would have kept it for yourself, and if it would have been any worse, it would have killed me. That's why I say it was jes' right."

Slow Romance

Charlie was the most bashful lad in the village. Naturally the family were astonished when he told them one evening that he was going courting. After spending over an hour getting ready, he set out. Half an hour later he returned, looking very pleased with himself.

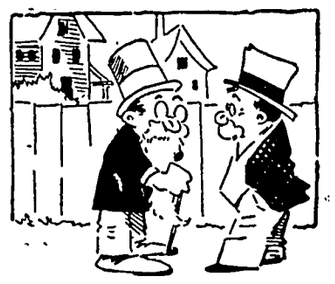
"You're back soon," said his mother. "How did you get on?"

"All right," replied Charlie with a grin.

"Did you see her?"

"Yes, I did. An' if I hadn't ducked down behind the hedge she'd have seen me, too."

SALES TALK



A wealthy man, intent on matrimony, told his friend one day that he was 60 years old, and asked: "Would it be better if I told a young lady whom I'd like to marry that I'm only 50?"

"I'll be perfectly frank with you," his friend replied. "Your chances would be better if you'd tell her you were 75."

Good References

Concerned about the happiness of her maid, Mrs. Jones inquired anxiously, "Jennie, do you think it is wise to marry that young man on such short acquaintance? You've only known him for a few weeks."

"Well," replied Jennie, after a thoughtful pause, "it isn't as if he was some new fellow. He's well recommended. A girl I know was engaged to him for quite a long time."

Easy Coasting

A rich man lying on his death bed called his chauffeur, who had been in his service for years, and said:

"Ah, Sykes, I am going on a long and rugged journey, worse than ever you drove me."

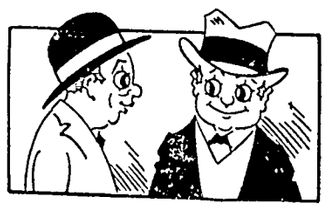
"Well, sir," consoled the chauffeur, "there's one comfort—it's all downhill and you won't need any gasoline."

What Was It?

A young bride was annoyed by her husband's presence in the kitchen while she was preparing dinner. And when he accidentally knocked her cook book to the floor, she flared up.

"Now look what you've done. You've lost the place and I haven't the least idea what I'm cooking."

EXPENSIVE WAY OUT



Two husbands were discussing their wives. "I wish I could find a way to stop my wife from spending so much on gloves," said one.

"I've got an idea," replied the other. "Ever try buying her a diamond ring?"

A Bit Dumb

A father shook his head sadly as his son left the room. For the fourth successive month his report card had shown nothing but D's.

"I am finally convinced," he told his wife, "that our son must have a sixth sense. There's certainly no sign of the other five."

General Grant first learned about golf in Scotland. His host took him out to the links for a demonstration, and placing the ball on the tee, took a mighty swing. The club hit the turf with a heavy thud, sending chunks of earth flying. The ball remained on the tee. Again the host took a nasty slice at the ball. Again it did not budge.

MOPSY by GLADYS PARKER

Variable Value

A New England farmer was approached by a stranger, who asked: "How much is that prize Jersey cow of yours worth?"

The farmer thought a moment.

"That depends," he answered. "Be you the tax-assessor or has the cow been killed by a train?"

Finders Keepers

Boss—Simpkins, isn't that your cigarette lying there on the floor?

Simpkins—No, sir. You can have it. Your saw it first.

Turn About

It was pouring. Two men who had quarreled went out in the rain to settle their differences. They fought until one got the other on his back and held him there. "Will you give up?" he asked, and the reply was "No."

After a time he said, "Gonna say 'Uncle?'" The reply again was a determined "No."

"Then," said the other, "will you get on top for awhile and let me get under? I'm getting soaked."

Red Feather Flown as Symbol In Social Service Fund Drives

Badge Is Beacon Of Hope To Sick, Weary, Homeless

For centuries the red feather has been accepted as a badge of courage and generosity. Robin Hood awarded red feathers to his followers for heroic and generous deeds; outstanding Indian braves often were the recipients of red feather awards for feats of valor and acts of kindness.

This year, in cities throughout the United States, the Red Feather will mean hope for the sick, homeless and friendless. Community Chests of the country have adopted the Red Feather to designate services to orphans, the aged, the blind, crippled children and the sick.

In previous years the welfare fund raising organizations from coast to coast have been known by a variety of names and their symbols have been many and varied. In 1946, for the first time, practically all of them are known as Community Chests and all fly the Red Feather.

Many Join Movement.

Last year, 849 cities in the country raised close to a quarter billion dollars through community fund raising campaigns. These cities each conducted a single campaign to raise funds to support multiple welfare agencies.

It was in Cleveland, Ohio, that the Community Chest plan was born in 1913. A group of Cleveland business men, aware of the many fund drives held each year and of the vast sums spent annually to raise money for welfare purposes, evolved a plan to budget the city's welfare needs and to hold one campaign annually to obtain the money to meet these needs.

Before Cleveland held the first Community Chest campaign, 6,000 persons were contributing money for welfare purposes. During the 1945 Community Chest campaign, 606,000 residents of Greater Cleveland made pledges to support 100 home front agencies and 22 units of the national war fund.

Support 100 Agencies.

This year, the Cleveland Community Chest is campaigning in October for a goal of $4,880,000. Proceeds will be used for the support of 100 Red Feather agencies, including 21 youth and recreation groups, 19 organizations aiding dependent children, 17 hospitals, 14 family welfare services and other welfare organizations.

Throughout the nation, the story of the Red Feather is being told as Community Chests wage their annual fund-raising campaigns in October.

Chicago, which has the largest Community Chest fund in the nation, has a goal of $7,939,000 in the current drive. From Community Chest coffers will come 50 per cent of the operating costs of 192 Red Feather agencies. An additional $906,000 is sought to continue USO activities for the final year.

THEY NEED "HELPING HAND" . . . Typical of the millions of children throughout the United States who receive aid through Red Feather agencies supported by Community chests are these youngsters from Cleveland. Top left, a poignant appeal for aid is mirrored in the face of Virginia at Goodrich house; top right, Jimmie, patient at Rose-Mary Home for Crippled Children, is overcoming the crippling effects of spastic paralysis; bottom: Lillian, resident at Cleveland Christian home orphanage, gives dolly the kind of care the home gives her; right: 5-year-old Jerry is going to walk some day, thanks to treatment he is receiving at Cleveland rehabilitation center.

One of the main objectives of Community Chests is to assure a good start in life for all children. Red Feather youth agencies universally strive to prepare the boys and girls of today for their responsibilities as citizens of tomorrow.

To carry out this objective, Philadelphia, for example, will allot the largest percentage of its campaign funds, more than 20 per cent, to its Red Feather youth recreation services and another 11 per cent to its child care agencies. Last year, the city's 39 Red Feather youth agencies served more than 189,714 boys and girls and provided 183,593 days in camps.

Returns Near Peak.

As the birthplace of the Community Chest idea, Cleveland has attained one of the best records in the nation for its annual fund drive. Total goal of the past 27 Community Chest campaigns there was $115,888,545, of which $113,243,489, or 97.7 per cent, actually was raised.

In Cleveland Community Chest hospitals contain two-thirds of all the city's public and private hospital capacity; their dispensaries annually give approximately 200,000 free or low cost treatments; all of the maternity homes for unwed mothers are chest supported; institutional care of 1,125 Cleveland orphans is given only by chest agencies, and 672 children are under foster home care through chest auspices.

A high degree of co-operation is essential to success of the Community Chest drive. That sort of co-operation is characteristic of Cleveland's annual fund raising event. Solicitation of chest pledges is carried out by a corps of 25,000 volunteer workers. City officials authorize decoration of downtown thoroughfares; the transit system and railroads permit campaign advertising; stores feature window displays stressing the work of chest agencies; radio stations, newspapers and theaters tell the story of the Red Feather organizations.

For the sick and troubled of Cleveland, as well as those of 849 other cities in the United States, the Red Feather this year means hope. For the greater number of persons who wear the Red Feather as Community Chest contributors, the brighter the outlook for those who need a "helping hand."

Vet Students Replace Navy 'Boots'

FARRAGUT, IDAHO.—In an attempt to crack the national bottleneck in educational facilities, particularly for ex-G.I.s, education-hungry veterans have opened their own college here.

At the site of the sprawling naval training station here, the veterans opened a privately operated, nonprofit, co-educational college and technical institute this month.

When the navy declared the huge training station surplus, veterans' organizations went into immediate action. They saw the station's vast dormitories, apartments, classrooms, laboratories, machine shops and recreational facilities as the answer to two major veterans' problems: Lack of educational facilities and housing accommodations while attending school.

Raise $250,000 Fund.

Backed by local business men, encouraged by the United States department of education and other federal agencies, veterans' organizations in north Idaho and eastern Washington formed a private nonprofit corporation. They called it Farragut College and Technical Institute, Inc., and set out to raise an initial operating fund of $250,000.

Veterans' groups plunked down sums like $10,000 and $15,000 to start the ball rolling. Private clubs and individual citizens came across. The veterans hired a college president, Dr. Joseph H. Kusner, formerly of Florida, who is a veteran. He rounded up a faculty.

The school was chartered by the state of Idaho and acceptable credits were assured. Federal problems of acquiring the property were hurdled.

In Picturesque Country.

Farragut, where hundreds of thousands of United States naval men were trained during the war, is on the shores of Lake Pend Oreille—a picturesque spot in the heart of north Idaho's timber and lake country. It has ample facilities for 15,000 students, including housing for single students, married students and faculty.

Courses in the liberal arts and in the technical and trade fields will be taught by streamlined methods.

Erosion Raids Take High Toll

CHICAGO. — Erosion's raids on soil fertility are costing the United States nearly four billion dollars annually, according to the Middle West Soil Improvement committee.

"The extent of this yearly damage is indicated by recent U. S. Soil Conservation service estimates that wind and water erosion removes 21 times as much plant food from the nation's farm soil each year as is taken out by crops sold off that land," the committee reports.

Dr. H. H. Bennett, chief of the conservation service, places the annual loss as a result of uncontrolled erosion and water runoff at $3,844,000,000. He estimates that nearly one billion acres of the nation's farm lands need soil conservation treatment to protect them from erosion and to maintain their productivity.

It is clearly evident that eternal vigilance is a 'must' if our greatest farm asset—soil fertility—is to be preserved," Dr. Bennett insists.

"The recent wartime burden on farm land to produce record yields to speed victory has been succeeded by an equally heavy peacetime load to produce crops to meet the world-wide food crisis," the soil improvement group declares, adding that "the only remedy that will rescue overworked farm land from eventual fertility exhaustion is a program of effective soil rebuilding."

Pointing out that any soil rehabilitating plan should be well-rounded, the committee says it should include the raising of legumes to improve soil tilth and to increase its resources of organic matter, regular crop rotation, steady use of mixed fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, and pasture improvement.

Water Brings $1 Barrel in Drouth

AUSTIN, TEXAS. — Fall rains have alleviated a drouth which turned up many eccentricities durging late summer months.

At Aspermont in the high plains area drinking water sold for a dollar a barrel.

Also near Aspermont, the Salt fork of the Brazos, the state's mightiest river, became a dry channel one day, then was running 25,000 cubic feet a second the following day.

Two large reservoirs of the Lower Colorado river system had evaporation in excess of inflow.

Wichita Falls, busy wheat and industrial city, prepared for a drouth by completing an additional reservoir capable of holding 100,000 acre-feet of water. But the branch of the Little Wichita river, which was expected to fill the reservoir, failed to respond.

Every Day Is July 4 At Ordnance Depot

TOOELE, UTAH.—Not once a year but every day it's Fourth of July at the Tooele ordnance depot, at least insofar as fireworks are concerned. Unserviceable explosives—American, German and Japanese—which have accumulated at the depot must be destroyed. Depot officers do the task scientifically, placing about 50 tons of explosives in a crater to detonate them.

PAUL CHAMPIONS FREEDOM AND BROTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:23b-29, Galatians 5 13-18.

MEMORY SELECTION — But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.—Acts 15:11.

Fundamental doctrine must be sound and true or the church will go astray. A question had arisen at Antioch which had to be answered authoritatively, and once for all.

The early converts of the church were naturally from among the Jews, and they carried with them into their new-found faith the traditions of their religion. Some of them did not recognize that the salvation they had in Christ was entirely by grace, apart from any works of the law. They not only felt that they must observe the law, but insisted that the Gentile believers must also fulfill the Jewish rite of circumcision. This promptly raised the question whether Christ alone could save, or if men were saved by grace plus works.

To settle this matter, Paul and Barnabas went up to the church at Jerusalem, and there a great council discussed it freely, and came to a decision which was then transmitted by letter and a committee.

That decision established an eternal

I. Principle—Believers Are Free from the Law (Acts 15:23b-29).

The believers at Antioch were to abstain from those things which would hinder their spiritual progress and harm their testimony. That was important and right, but it must not be allowed to confuse them regarding the basis of their salvation. They were not saved by works, not even though they were most commendable.

Salvation is by grace, through faith, "not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9). That principle, which is absolutely foundational in all Christian thinking, was established then, and is valid and blessedly true for all time.

Is it not strange, then, that all through the church's history there has been a determined effort on the part of some in the church to add something to God's redeeming grace as a ground for salvation?

Observe the plain rebuke given to teachers of error in verse 24. It is no light matter to trouble and mislead the souls of men by injecting our worldly wisdom or our opinions, when we should be teaching the truth of God's Word.

Salvation by grace and freedom from the law does not bring the believer into a place of license, but of liberty—and a liberty controlled by a new factor in his life. We note that in

II. Practice—Believers Are Bound by Love (Gal. 5:13-15).

The one who turns to Christ by faith is indwelt by the Holy Spirit and finds that, far from failing to keep the high moral principles of God's law, he is given grace to keep them more perfectly. This he does, not in order to be saved, but because he is saved.

He comes out of a bondage to legalism, which he could not bear, into a new bondage to the law of love, which his new nature in Christ delights to bear and in which it finds the fulfillment of its highest and holiest desires.

Note that this shows itself in the church and in the world in loving service to others in the absence of strife; in a word, in the practice of the admonition: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (v. 14; Lev. 19:18).

No one faces that life responsibility without realizing that he is evidently not able for it. God has provided for that need, for we note next that there is

III. Power—Believers Are Led by the Spirit (Gal. 5:16-18).

Being saved does not set us free from the conflict with sin, for the old nature declares itself at enmity with the Spirit. We find it often to be in our hearts to do right, and in the decisive moment we find the flesh taking control and we cannot do the things we would (v. 17).

What is the solution of that problem? An all-out attack on sin and sinful desires? That is commendable, but it somehow doesn't work. We need a superior power to work in and through us.

That's it! There is a power in us and ready to work through us—the matchless, victorious power of the Holy Spirit. He dwells in the heart of every believer (I Cor. 6:19) and only awaits our yielding to him that he may take control of our lives.

Walking in the Spirit (v. 16) is simply giving him the liberty to direct our lives after the will of God, day by day and moment by moment. This puts us in the way of victory, for as we walk in the Lord's way we may call on him for not only his grace, but also his strength.

Saved by grace to a life of liberty and power—such is the inestimable privilege of the Christian. Are we, are you, living up to it?

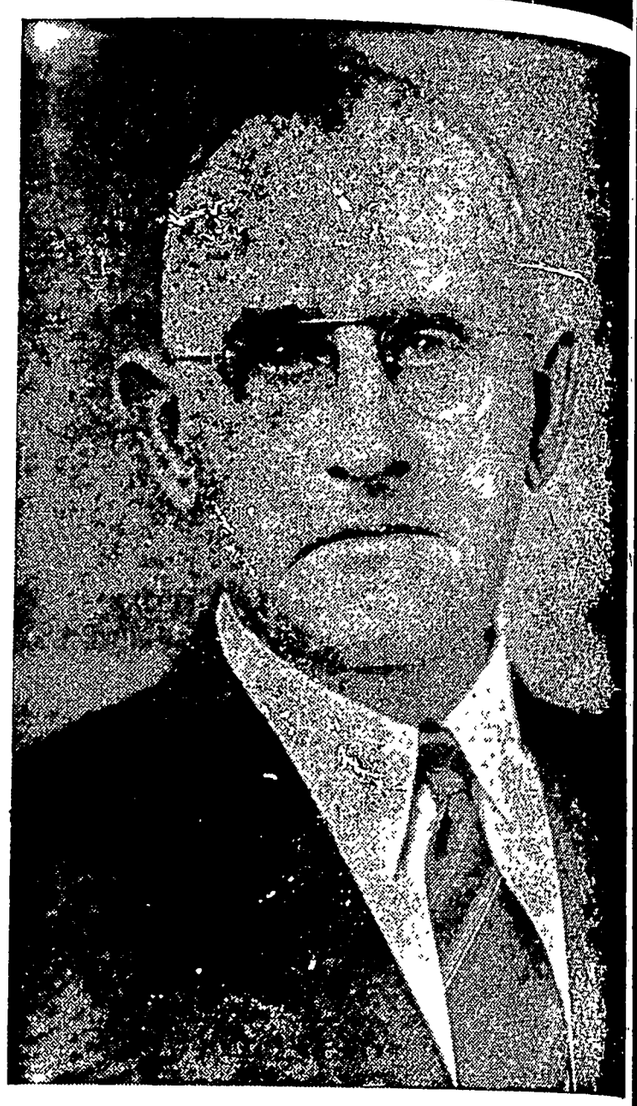
Read it first in The Times.



I feel as if I should call your attention to a few of the things for which I stand and also a little of my life history.

Hancock County is one of the few counties in the state of Iowa that elect their supervisors at large over the county. All the other counties that border on Hancock Couny and most of the other counties in the state, nominate and elect their supervisors from the district in which they serve, thereby making them responsible to the people of their own district.

With our present system in Hancock County, our supervisors are nominated and elected by the county as a whole after which the county is divided into three districts and each supervisor is given his district during his term of office. At the present time we have three districts. The one to the west side of the county now being supervised by Mr. Penn Eckels. The southeast part is being supervised by John Chambers while the northeast is being supervised by Frank Schoun.

I am in favor of setting Hancock County up into permanent districts. Thereby giving each district an opportunity to nominate and elect their own supervisor.

I am very much in favor of better drainage in Hancock County and will say that I have never opposed a drainage district in Hancock County. Drainage is the one thing that has made Hancock County what it is today.

As for myself, I was born and raised on a farm, received my education in Rockwell City High School. Operated a four hundred acre farm just west of Britt for thirty-three years. Served 9 years as member of the Britt Independent School Board. Served ten years as member of the Hancock County AAA Committee office located in Garner. Managed the only war plant built in Hancock County for the duration of the war. I am a member of the Hancock County Farm Bureau and Britt Commercial Club. I have been a supporter of all community and county enterprises. I am a land owner and tax payer. I am married, have three sons and two daughters. The 3 sons all left the farm to serve their country in the recent World War and are eligble to join both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

I feel that I am qualified to serve you in the capacity of your supervisor for the term beginning January 1, 1947 and will very much appreciate your vote on November 5th.

HAVE SEED TESTED NOW FOR PLANTING IN SPRING

Top job on the farm calender for Iowa farmers right now is having purity and germination tests run on seed that will be used for planting next spring, reminds E. P. Sylwester, acting head of the Seed Labratory at Iowa State College.

Sylwester emphasizes that creasing numbers of farmers realize the importance of testing home-grown seed, whether it's alfalfa, clover, soybeans, oats, flax or some other crop. The same thing is true of seed that will be offered for sale. If the seed is low in purity, it should be cleaned before sowing. If it is low in germination, the planting rate should be increased.

There has been a tendency, however, to wait until late winter or early spring before sending seed into the labratory for testing. This results in a piling up of work and a delay in getting the germination reports back to farmers.

Sywester emphasizes that there is nothing gained by waiting to have the testing job done later. Waiting increases the danger that the job won't be done at all.

The college labratory is equipped to run both purity and germination tests on all seed samples. Directions for making up the sample can be obtained from the county extension director's office.

It's especially important this year, Sylwester says, to test seed oats for germination because of the prevalence of Helminthosporium blight. Even though the oats are tested, they should be treated with New improved Ceresan before planting.

4-H ENROLLMENT AT RECORD HIGH

Iowa Members Measure Other Gains as Achievement Week Is Opened

Iowa 4-H members this week are measuring their achievements for 1946. The occasion is the annual observance of National 4-H Achievement Week, set for November 2 to 10.

Standing at the top of the list is the record enrollment of Iowa members which at the last count stood at 30,028. Thi s is 1,407 more members than were enrolled in 1945. It also exceeds 1940, the previous high year, by 1,162 members.

Activities of 4-H members in 1946 were directed toward helping to build peace. Iowa 4-H girls raised more than $3,500 for the relief of famine in Europe. Their gift was earmarked specifically for the relief of children.

Families Adopted

Girls' clubs adopted hundreds of families in some of the war-ravaged nations of Europe and sent them gifts of food and clothing. They have corresponded with some of these people and learned how great was the need for these gifts.

Maximum production of food was the 4-H watchword in 1946: Not food to win a war but food to preserve a peace. From the feedlots of Iowa 4-H members thousands of beef calves, hogs, lambs and chickens were sent to the nation's market places.

As Iowa 4-H members competed in the show ring and other events they won their full measure of prizes and recognitions. And at the Iowa State Fair and other shows which were restored to their prewar status, 4-H girls and boys again had an opportunity to show through exhibits and demonstrations improved homemaking and agricultural practices.

Conserved Food

4-H clubs cooperated with the government's food-saving campaign of the spring and summer. Members willingly adjusted their own diets so more wheat and fat might be exported. Clubs eliminated refreshments from their meetings or served food not in short supply.

This year saw Iowa 4-H members again represented at the National 4-H Club Camp in Washington, D. C. Iowa's 4-H president, Durward Lyon of Toledo, represented all 4-H boys of the nation at a meeting in the nation's capital, and a group of 4-H members attended the Encampment for Citizenship in New York City.

As 4-H members look back over the 1946 club year they find satisfaction in what they have contributed to their communities, their nation and their world.

Miss Vivian Harberts Weds Wayne Grieman, Garner

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Harberts of Goodell, announce the marriage of their daughter, Vivian June, to Wayne Warren Greiman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greiman of Garner, in a single ring ceremony performed by Rev. R. D. Stubbe, at the Peace Reformed parsonage in Ell township at 7:00 o'clock Thursday evening, October 31, 1946.

The couple were attended by Miss Anna Lee Brunes of Belmond, a friend of the bride, and Burtis Greiman, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a white wool street length dress, with black accessories and her corsage was of red roses and white baby mums.

Miss Brunes was attired in a medium blue wool dress with brown accessories. She also wore a corsage of white baby mums and red roses.

The groom and best man wore brown suits and had white carnation boutonieres.

Mrs. Greiman attended school at Klemme and graduated in 1943, and since resided at home.

Mr. Greiman attended school at Garner and graduated in1940, and has been farming with his brother Burtis.

Upon their return they will be at home on the bridegroom's farm south of Garner.

A reception and dance was held at the Surf Ballroom at Clear Lake, Tuesday evening in honor of the couple. A large crowd was present.

Three Churches Choir Practice Sunday Afternoon

The Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church, the Liberty and Klemme Methodist Churches will hold a joint choir practice for Armistice Day singing at the Klemme Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All members of the three choirs are urged to be present.

Mrs. Wesley Patterson will direct and Mrs. Wm. Reinhart will accompany the choir on the piano.

Ventilating Fan Good Buy For Dairy Farmer

Farmers who have electricity available or who are getting it this fall should consider the possibility of installing ventilating fans in their barns, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agriculture engineer.

Such fans will pay good dividends, especially for the dairy farmer, whose animals are kept indoors a good deal of the time.

Beaty says dairy cows won't do their best in stuffy, improperly ventilated quarters. And the lack of adequate circulation of fresh air also can damage the barn, causing decay of the barn timbers, corrosion of metal parts and in some cases spoilage of hay.

A stable housing up to 20 cows requires a fan which can handle 1,200 cubic feet of air a minute. Intake flues, according to federal REA specifications, require an opening of 60 square inches. One flue should be installed about every 15 feet along the wall.

Beaty says the fan motors should be inclosed and shuold draw air out from the floor level.

LIBERTY HOME BUILDERS MET AT LIBERTY CHURCH

The Liberty Home Builders met at the Liberty Methodist Church on Sunday evening with 39 people present. After a program and business meeting, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Blumer served an oyster stew to the group.

Mrs. Carol Brager, president, had charge of the business session, and appointed some committees. The next meeting will be at the church December 1st. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Pethick and Ronald of Thornton, were guests.

ELECTION

Late returns indicate a Republican landclide in the Nation, with Republicans taking over seats in both the House and Senate to give them a big majority.

Governer Blue polled more than 85,000 votes over Miles for Governor. All other State offices were again won by the Republicans.

In Hancock County Republican andidates were easy winners.

TRAPPING SEASON OPENS AT NOON NOVEMBER 10TH

Thousands of farm boys, as well as hundreds of professional trappers, begin the annual fur harvest at noon November 10th. Although some species of fur-bearer have decreased in numbers since a year ago it is expected that the value of furs taken during the open season will again exceed two million dollars. Fur prices are expected to open at approximately the same as in 1946, with short-haired furs such as mink and muskrat being in demand, with the long-haired fur animals, including fox, raccon, and skunk, continuing rather low in price.

The muskrat season, limited to thirty days, will close December 10, with other protected fur-bearing animals being on the open list until January 10. Beaver may be taken under special permit only and muskrat trapping is prohibited along the Mississippi River east of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad tracks from the north city limits of Muscatine to the Minn. state line.

DEFLATION HITS FARMER HARDEST

With rationing and most government price controls now a thing of the past, the pinch of inflation is increasing and can be eased only by individual effort, says R. K. Bliss, of the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service. And he points out that in the period of deflation which is almost bound to come, the farmer has the greatest difficulty protecting himself.

"In a period of falling prices the manufactor can stop work, the merchant can pass much of his trouble on to someone else because he buys and sells products," Bliss says.

Shock Absorber

"But the farmer cannot pass his costs along. In fact, he will serve as a shock absorber as far as production costs are concerned."

The farmer's best safeguard, Bliss says, is to provide his own protection against deflation. He can do this in several ways.

First he should be careful about going into debt at present prices, as these debts will have to be paid out of profits several years hence. This applies to permanent improvements, and "fancy" livestock and machinery, as well as land. And it applies to products outside agriculture which will be presented in glowing terms by high-pressure salesmen, if events follow those of the last postwar period.

Pay Personal Debts

As a second consideration, the farmer will find this a good time to pay personal debts. And it's a good time to prepare for deflation by laying up a reserve, such as government bonds, which can be turned into cash when going gets tough. This means buying as little as possible of the things which are clearly too high in price.

Bliss says if capital, labor and agriculture can get together to develop a united program, this also would greatly lesson the shock of any postwar deflation which may develop.

Concord 4-H Youth Wins Trip To National Congress

HEALTHY AT 93—MRS. D. H. Hammon celebrated her 93rd birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Lange, northwest of Klemme, where she makes her home. She is in excellent health and takes a keen interest in affairs of the day. She is the widow of D. H. Hammon who died about 20 years ago. Two brothers of Mrs. Hammon live at Walton, N. Y. One is 91, the other 89. She has 5 children, 14 great grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

Maynard W. Dorow, Hancock County 4-H member, this week was named Iowa's champion colt club member and winner of a trip to the National 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago, December 1 to 5. The trip is provided by the Horse and Mule Association of America.

Maynard's selection, announced by G. A. Lineweaver, state 4-H leader at Iowa State College, was based on his excellent 7-year membership record which includes project work with baby beeves, market pigs and horses and other 4-H activities.

The trip winner is a member of Concord Yanks 4-H Club led by his brother, Norbert. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dorow who operate a 240-acre farm east of Garner.

Maynard has been both president and vice-president of his local club. He was a member of demonstration teams in 1945 and 1946 and has entered judging contests each year since 1943.

His eight baby beeves, three pens of Market pigs and his saddle horse have given him an income of $2,225.

At Ventura High School where Maynard is enrolled in vocational agriculture, he plays basketball and baseball. He was editor of the school yearbook, plays in the band and takes part in dramatics.

Maynard is a member of his local Walther League.

Interest aroused by 4-H activities has resulted in the adoption, on his father's farm, of improved methods of livestock management. Included in the program are such practices as mange control, use of phenothiazine for worms and of rotenone dust to eliminate cattle grubs.

DISTINGUISHED GUEST

When Roger Newborn, of Eagle Grove, scholarship winner at the Citizenship Camp in Riverside, New York, was on his way home from the camp last summer, he stopped with other students in Washington and made a visit to Lord Inverchapel, British Ambassador. In leaving, Roger invited His Lordship to come out and visit him some time in Iowa. Recently Roger received a letter from the Ambassador, "accepting" the invitation and as a result the British Lord spent three days "on the farm" in Wright County. No publicity was given until after the return journey.

Lamb feeding in the Corn Belt has been declining since 1941. At least fewer lambs have been shipped into eight Corn Belt states during July and August. each year since 1941.

Times Print Shop Installing New Automatic Press

Last Friday the Times Print Shop loaded an automatic press on a truck for the Wright County Reporter at Dows. This press, which had been used in the Times Shop for the past three years on commercial printing, was sold to make room for the new and faster modern automatic press which is now being installed in the Times plant.

With this new press installed, the Times Shop will be one of the best equipped commerical printing plants in North Iowa.

Dinner And Family Reunion Held For Kermit Koerner

OCCASION WAS ALSO 43rd WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF ALBERT G. KOERNERS

Many Relatives At Combined Celebration At Koerner Home Sunday

Sgt. Kermit Koerner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Koerner, returned home from overseas on Saturday, November 2, 1945, but his home-coming was not celebrated until Sunday, November 3rd, 1946, when the 43rd anniversary of his parent's marriage was also celebrated at a family gathering at the Albert Koerner home.

Mr. and Mrs. Koerner were married on November 4th, 1903, at the Henry Lau home by the Rev. William Koerner, Sr.

Mr. Koerner two years before his marriage, organized and was the owner of Klemme's first telephone system. He remarked that it was so hard to get a good operator that he decided the best way to solve the situation was to marry one, which he did, and Mrs. Koerner for many years was the chief operator of the Koerner Exchange.

Their first home was the apartment above the State Savings Bank where they lived for 3 years, then moving to their present home where they continued in the telephone business which Mr. Koerner owned for a total of 25 years. Since selling the business the Koerners have been farming and have operated a dairy for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. Koerner are the parents of 5 children: Mrs. Delores Ridder, Gerald Koerner, Kermit Koerner, Mrs. Valera Bridges and Mrs. Orville Stokesbary, all residents of this community. All the children and their families were at home for the day.

A big dinner was served at noon and two special cakes had been prepared for the occasion. Bouquets of chrysanthemums served as decorations.

Other relatives present besides those mentioned above were E. J. Arnold and family; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Arnold; Mrs. Martha Bredbenner and daughter, Miss Nova; George, Irwin and Leona Lau; and Will Lau of Garner.

In the evening Kermit entertained by showing colored pictures which he took while overseas, and also showed pictures taken by Bruce Arnold, who is now overseas.

Occupation Forces Face Obstacles

Need Time for Democratic Roots to Take Hold in Japan

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON:—Recently one of Japan's liberal newspapers took occasion to admonish its readers against substituting General MacArthur for the emperor as an object of reverence. The paper pointed out that MacArthur was a symbol of democracy, but not a living god. In so doing, the editor touched on a matter of deep significance to the future of Japan and one which poses one of the greatest problems of the occupation. I doubt if most people realize it.

Baukhage

This situation was revealed to me by a very earnest and very widely experienced observer, just back from Japan. The burden of his theme was the strange unreality which seems to envelop the life of the Japanese people like a mist. Let me give you, as nearly as I am able, the gist of his impressions, supplemented by other current reports of on-the-spot observers.

The remarkably successful record made by General MacArthur in one year's occupation of Japan can be written down on the credit side of America's postwar undertakings.

It is, nevertheless, only a beginning. Unless the structure is completed on the foundation we have laid, all of our work will go for nothing.

On the negative side, we have disarmed Japan and destroyed its military machine. We have taken over its industrial power. The business monopolies have been broken up.

On the positive side, according to MacArthur's own report, "the average Japanese no longer cringes in the presence of the police or other public authorities; his home has become his castle; he registers his opinion on public issues, uncontrolled except by his own conscience; he enjoys the right of assembly and petition; he worships as he chooses in accordance with his individual religious faith; he enjoys the untrammeled right individually or collectively to demand correction of unjust labor practices; electoral discrimination has been removed."

That is probably literally true. But it does not tell the whole story for, according to my informant, there are indications that the progress made, the reforms achieved in the political, economic and social life of the country, are only forms and it will take a long time—many years—before those forms can be hardened into enduring substance. The reason for this is that the life of the individual Japanese and acts of their government, actually are dominated by a supreme power which, while it is not constantly visible, is no less potent—that is the power of the U. S. occupation forces.

Recover from Stunning Loss

At first the Japanese were utterly stunned by the suddenness of their crushing defeat. Gradually they discovered that they were being well treated and they assumed a co-operative attitude, an almost servile loyalty, obedience, friendliness and an apparently complete sympathy with the Americans. But that does not mean they actually have absorbed our culture, socially, politically or otherwise. Nor does it mean that they have been able to build up any real or lasting structure of their own. An utterly exotic democratic culture has suddenly been superimposed upon them. It would be absurd from the standpoint of human psychology or human experience to expect that Japan, an almost feudal nation, a land of powerful tradition and a thoroughly oriental viewpoint, could possibly about-face in a period embracing even decades. Certainly not in years.

In addition to the wide gulf that exists between occident and orient, there are many obstacles which stand in the way of the achievement of a democratic Japan.

Let us look at this conquered country through the eyes of a man who had the opportunity to study, first-hand, the rise and fall of democracy in Germany under the Weimar republic. It so happened that this observer also watched the attempts at the westernization of Turkey after the last war. Both Germany and Japan lived in a semi-feudal atmosphere for centuries. Of course, the Germans belonged to western civilization but ever since 1870 they grew under what amounted to a military dictatorship in a highly disciplined society, a rigid class system with complete subservience to authority. In these respects Japan is similar.

Like Germany, after World War I, Japan has suffered a crushing defeat, has deposed an emperor, has absolutely no training in democratic organization or democratic action, no experience in parliamentary government as we know it. Political parties organized in the sense that we know them were utterly strange to both nations, and both peoples lived under an economy and a society based on the support, morally and materially, of a huge army and navy.

These are some of the difficulties which the Weimar republic faced and the young Japanese democracy is facing. Strong anti-democratic influences represented by big business and the aristocracy of blood and uniform, common to Japan and Germany, are at least latent in the former.

But perhaps the greatest parallel danger in Japan today—and the thing that eventually destroyed the Weimar republic—is the economic situation produced by inflation. Many students of history feel that Hitler never would have gotten even a start in Germany if it had not been for the chaotic condition caused by the terrible inflation.

Inflation today is one of Japan's greatest problems.

Economic Chaos Breeds Control

America's greatest bulwark of democracy is conceded to be the public school.

A whole new curriculum must be laid down for the Japanese. At present the shortage of books is serious. The old books are, of course, almost useless. There is likewise a shortage of trained teachers.

Another factor essential to the growth of a democratic government is security, without which individual effort cannot flourish.

Today in Japan no Japanese worker is sure that his wage in the rapidly deteriorating currency will provide him a livelihood. No industrialist is certain he will have purchasers and many are not sure their factories will be allowed to operate until the question of reparations is settled.

In other words, the Japanese lives, thinks, acts, by the grace of a superior force, the American high command. Remove it, and the anti-democratic forces will be let loose; maintain it without a solid foundation of native grown democratic structure springing from the people themselves, and you are merely removing a substitute for a MacArthur or an Uncle Sam, or a Mikado, and another will quickly be found.

SCHOOLBELL STILL RINGS . . . One thing about a schoolbell—it rings the world over. Young boys and girls, dependents of U. S. army personnel, are finding out that although they are a long, long way from home, the little red schoolhouse and the echoing bell are near at hand, even in far-off Japan. Above is shown the 8th army's school for dependent children at Yokohama.

U.S. Halts Czech Credit, Seeks Russian Payment

LEND-LEASE:
Withdraw Czech Aid

Possessing no inclination to be Uncle Sap, Uncle Sam withdrew a 40 million dollar credit to Czechoslovakia and suspended negotiations for a 50 million dollar loan following the Czechs' support of Russian charges at the Paris peace conference that the U. S. was trying to enslave Europe economically.

While Czech support of Red baiting of the U. S. constituted the principal reason for the action, the state department also charged the Czechs with profiteering in the resale of American surplus goods to Romania and stated that the Czechs were far ahead of other European countries in postwar recovery.

Ask Russ to Settle

In asking Russia to settle its lend-lease account of $11,141,000,000, the state department reported that the action was taken in compliance with congressional desires to speed up final liquidation of such obligations.

Settlement is expected to follow the pattern of previous arrangements made with Britain and France, with the Reds paying only a percentage of the cost of the guns, tanks, airplanes and other material sent during the war. In arriving at the final figure, the U. S. has always written off part of the debt owed in consideration of losses and casualties suffered in the common cause.

In the case of the British and French, the U. S. extended credits for the purchase of surplus goods as part of the settlement, and the same privilege could be afforded the Russians. As it is, the U. S. advanced the Reds between 300 and 400 million dollars at the time of the cessation of lend-lease to permit them to obtain supplies ordered but not yet delivered.

NUERNBERG:
Slick Escape

Nazis snickered as allied investigators pressed a thorough inquiry into the spectacular suicide of Hermann Goering, top German war criminal who escaped death by hanging in swallowing potassium cyanide shortly before the hour of his execution.

Always a favorite with the Germans because of his rollicking, open-handed mannerisms, Goering appeared to have salvaged some of his lost prestige by thwarting the allied noose at the last minute. Whereas suicide is considered an act of cowardice in the U. S., Germans regard it as a means of redeeming lost honor.

Allied authorities wondered if Goering's dramatic demise would tend to take some of the sting out of the war crimes trials in the German mind. Despite the execution of 10 other top Nazis, Goering's escape from the noose took on the effect of a subversion of allied justice

MEAT:
In Offing

If meat was slow in coming onto the market following decontrol of the industry, consumers could lick their chops for a big feast ahead.

While housewives were sure to find increasing quantities of meat at market in the ensuing months, the chief effect of President Truman's decontrol will be to induce farmers to use their record supplies of feed to fatten cattle and hogs to prime beef and pork, experts said.

The record number of livestock on farms and ranges was instrumental in influencing the administration to lift controls, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson told the Illinoise Chamber of Commerce. Were the nation to suffer a drouth, the meat industry would be menaced with loss and disorganization, he said. As of last January, there were 40,900,000 beef cattle on farms and ranges, and with the recent rate of slaughter the number would have risen to 44,800,000 by the end of the year

In the meantime, farmers are expected to market suitable livestock now, with the high prices prevailing influencing the culling of cows, fat bulls and old canner cows from breeding herds. While prices were expected to rocket with the first wave of buying, experts said they would level off once distribution channels were returned to normal or if consumer resistance was met

CURE FOR DEPRESSION

Business Urged To Aid Farming

CHICAGO.—Contending that "no one need worry about a depression when agriculture is healthy," Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson urged business to help keep farmer prosperous in a speech before the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

Four ways in which business men can help maintain good agricultural conditions were listed by the agricultural secretary.

As the first step, Anderson advised business men to help improve the nation's food distribution system by reducing costs, narrowing the spread between producer and consumer prices, improving the diets of the undernourished and developing new and wider uses of farm products.

The second step, according to Anderson, involves help in developing "demand-bolstering" food programs along the line of the national school lunch program.

Business men were urged to "give agriculture understanding and support in working out ways of adjusting production from wartime to peacetime requirements" as the third phase of the program.

As his final recommendation, Anderson advised business leaders to do "everything humanly possible" to maintain full employment and fair wages.

Anderson cited a department of agriculture survey indicating that farmers are planning to spend at least one million dollars annually for several years to build, repair and modernize buildings; a similar amount for new cars and trucks, and about 400 million dollars a year for household equipment and furnishings.

Best Future Is at Home, Rural County Tells Youth

NEW HOLSTEIN, WIS.—To prove to its youth that their best future lies at home, business, industry, private citizens and farmers of Calumet county have banded into a co-operative effort known as Interlakes Opportunities, Unlimited.

The tendency of rural areas to bewail the trek of young people to the cities but to offer no concrete steps designed to induce them to remain in their home communities led to organization of the new group.

Cite Local Opportunities.

As its main objective, the group intends to prove to the young people that Calumet county is just as good a place to live as the big city, that it offers as many or more opportunities in business and industry and for professional advancement, that it provides more opportunities for relaxation and pleasure.

"It is our duty to encourage our young people to get an education and return here to live and work," declares E. A. Longenecker of New Holstein, chairman of the new organization.

Stress will be placed on agricultural advantages, according to Longenecker, who added, "We must point out the advantages of farming in this area, particularly to those youngsters already living on farms, to encourage them to enjoy the benefits of farm life."

Plan Organized Trips.

To carry out its program, the organization will sponsor visits to outstanding farms, organized trips through industrial plants, talks by University of Wisconsin speakers in high schools of the county and various mass rallies.

Directing the organization's activities is an executive committee headed by Longenecker and containing representatives of all Calumet county communities. Subcommittees also have been recruited from all sections of the county.

Stubborn Indian Squaw Acquires $500,000 Estate

WASHINGTON. — Stubbornness pays—at least it did in the case of Con-hei-sen-ney, Oklahoma Indian grandmother, the Bureau of Indian Affairs admits.

Before she died 17 months ago at the age of 83, Con-hei-sen-ney had netted $500,000 as a result of her stubbornness. When she was younger, Con-hei-sen-ney, called "Grandma Tiger" by her friends, refused to take an allotment from the government. Officials finally became impatient and gave her four 40-acre tracts which did not have even an outlet to the highway. Later oil was found on three of the tracts.

The aged Indian squaw left her fortune to four descendants. Federal inheritance taxes will take about $125,000 of the $500,000 legacy.

'Crying Room' Ends Youngsters' Wails

ASHLAND, WIS.—Even crying can be handled scientifically, contends Mrs. Dave Mackie, who has installed a "crying room" in her home especially for the young children of her two married sons.

The crying room, she explains, is for the exclusive use of a small child who weeps, perhaps long and loud, for little or no reason. Babies, of course, are excepted.

When a child wails, Mrs. Mackie tells him:

"It's all right for you to cry as long as you wish, but you must do so in the crying room. There you will be all by yourself and can stay as long as you wish. I will close the door and no one will disturb you. It will be lots of fun to cry all by yourself. Want to try it now?"

As a general rule, the wailing ceases immediately.

Streamliner Speeds Into City, Leaving $20 Bills in Wake

MADISONVILLE, TENN. — Hundreds of $20 bills fluttering from a speeding streamliner of the Louisville & Nashville railroad caused a mild sensation here.

About 50 high school boys and girls, who had joined regular hangers-on to watch the train speed by, led in the quest for the bills. Most of the bills blew along the track although some were found clinging to bushes.

The money, according to Postal Inspector R. C. Hornsby, was being sent from a Knoxville bank to a Madisonville bank. Suction from the speeding train drew the mail sack beneath car wheels and the currency packet burst open.

Although declining to give the exact amount in the package, the postal inspector said 70 per cent of the bills were recovered.

Justice Too Slow, Cows Can't Wait

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Law or no law, milking time still is the most important time in the dairy farmer's life. In Morgan county, Ohio, the wheels of justice slowed down because a member of the grand jury went home to milk his cows. The jury had to be reconvened because the anxious farmer had left before the jurors could sign official court records of actions taken.

SCENIC FLIGHT

An outstanding event in aviation history of the Rocky Mountain empire was the sportsman's scenic flight over the Colorado Rockies held October 12 to 16 under sponsorship of the Colorado ring of the Civil Air patrol. The flight, led by 20 experienced mountain pilots, covered spectacular mountain scenery, including 13,000-foot Corona pass, the 10,000 lakes atop Grand Mesa, Cumbres pass and the Sangre de Cristo range at La Veta pass. Among highlights of the trip was a barbecue dinner served by the CAP at Grand Junction.

AIRPORT PROGRAM

Plans for getting the 500 million dollar federal airport aid program under way this month are being pushed by Civil Aeronautics administration.

This will not conflict with presidential orders to hold construction other than housing to a minimum, CAA officials explained, since no actual work can be undertaken before next spring. If material shortages continue in the spring, work nevertheless can be undertaken on projects requiring few materials. Except for hangars, most airport work, particularly airport improvement projects, requires chiefly labor and earth-moving equipment.

Of the three principal materials used in airport construction, piping alone is in very short supply. Use of substitutes for steel pipe may eliminate this shortage. The two other materials are asphalt and concrete.

The national airport survey, called for in the airport act approved by congress last May, is expected to be completed early this month.

This may appear to be rushing the season a bit, but for United Air Lines' chefs early fall is time for baking and storing away the fruit cakes which traditionally are served on Main ers each Christmas. The 10 flight kitchens will bake approximately four and one-half tons of the holiday delicacy, enough for more than 17,500 individual gift cakes.

First convention of flying farmers in the northwest was held at Spokane, Wash., September 23-24 with an attendance of several hundred. Ranchers and farmers from Oregon, Washington and Idaho met at Felts field, Spokane's municipal airport, mainly for the purpose of discussing proposed organization of flying farmer associations in the three states. Featured speakers included Tex Rankin, stunt flier and aviation leader, and Elliott Merrill, test pilot for Boeing Aircraft company. Aviation movies, tour of the air material area repair depot, flight demonstrations and a banquet were other attractions.

HELPS IN PLANNING

State aid to local airport planning is helping California cities toward full participation in the billion dollar federal airport construction plan. The state airport planning staff serves as nerve-center for exchange of information on the planning phase, airport standards, construction and regulations. Special allocations on a federal-state matching basis are expected to boost California airport construction another 10 to 13 million dollars within seven years.

Coveted Star Farmer Award Given to Four Rural Youths

Top Honor Goes To Pennsylvania High School Boy

By W. J. DRYDEN
WNU Farm Editor.

Outstanding young farmer of the United States is 20-year-old William G. Carlin of Coatesville, Chester county, Pa. He has won the title of Star Farmer of America—most coveted honor that can be won by an American farm boy.

Of what stuff are champion farmers made? In the case of William Carlin the answer would be summed up in a statement of his zeal, his enthusiasm, and his attention to detail in developing a run-down farm into a high producing enterprise.

The award was made at the recent National Victory convention of Future Farmers of America held at Kansas City. Carlin was chosen from among the 200,000 boys studying vocational agriculture in high schools of the country, who make up the membership of the F.F.A.

Farming in partnership with his brother on 190 acres of land, Carlin has made an outstanding record in bringing run-down farm land back into production. His accomplishments in soil rehabilitation are cited as examples for farmers throughout the country.

In 1940 the Carlin brothers took over a farm owned by their father and previously operated by tenants. Through the years the land had been literally "farmed out," with severe gully erosion present and with the soil in poor condition.

Purchase New Farm.

Through their classes in vocational agriculture in high school, these boys learned what had to be done to bring such land back into good production. Land that had produced only 25 bushels of corn to the acre in 1939 brought a yield of 55 bushels in 1942. By 1944 they had accumulated enough profits to buy 90 acres of land with a house and farm buildings. Today the farm is a going business, with assets of nearly $15,000. Its resources include 145 head of beef cattle, 15,000 chickens, 50 market hogs, 50 acres of corn, 65 acres of hay and 25 acres of oats and barley.

Billy Carlin has been active in the affairs of his community. He is a member of the farm bureau, farmer's exchange, co-operative exchange and grange. In 1944-45 he was president of Pennsylvania Association of Future Farmers of America.

Kentucky Boy Wins.

Central region winner of the Star Farmer of America award, Paul H. Smart, 20, of Versailles, Woodford county, Ky., was chosen from among 55,000 Future Farmers in 13 central states.

His first farming venture began six years ago, when he was 14 years old, with four lambs and a small crop of tobacco.

From this small beginning, the enterprise has expanded until it now includes 20 head of beef cattle, 70 head of sheep and extensive crop acreages in tobacco, corn, soybeans and lespedeza.

Smart has served as a director of Kentucky Farm Bureau federation and Purebred Livestock Breeders association.

First Nevada Winner.

Dennis O. Heitman, 20, of Gardnerville, Douglas county, is the first Nevada boy to win the Pacific region award of the Star Farmer, being selected from among 25,000 Future Farmers in 11 western states. He has complete responsibility for the management of a 1,500-acre cattle ranch owned by his mother.

Heitman began his first farming program with four heifers and a quarter acre of corn when he entered high school in 1940. From this small beginning his program has been expanded from annual profits on the projects. Today his assets include 30 head of beef cattle, 60 swine, 40 sheep and some 20 acres of growing crops.

Texan Gets Award.

Outstanding young farmer of the year in the South is Brody Lee Koon, 19, of Brashear, Hopkins county, Tex.

The young Texan was selected from among 95,000 Future Farmers in the southern region. Koon already is established in farming as one of the outstanding dairymen of northeast Texas. A farming program that began with one Jersey and has expanded into a herd of 55 registered Jerseys, along with a general crop program on 255 acres which he bought last year from profits on his projects, brought Koon the Star Farmer award. In seven years he has realized a net profit of over $16,000 from his own projects, nearly all of which he has reinvested in expanding his program.

Outstanding as a community leader as well as in farming, Koon has served as a director of Northeast Texas Dairy association, director of the Dairy Herd Improvement association and vice president of the Texas F.F.A. association.

Honor War Victims.

More than 15,000 farm boys from every state in the Union, Puerto Rico and Hawaii were present at Kansas City when the awards were presented. The Victory convention honored the more than 4,000 members and past members of F.F.A. who lost their lives in World War II.

Future Farmers of America is the national organization of farm boys studying vocational agriculture.

Main objectives of Future Farmers of America are to develop agricultural leadership, co-operation, citizenship, improved agriculture and patriotism.

In the emblem of Future Farmers of America, the owl is symbolic of wisdom and knowledge; the plow is the symbol of labor and tillage of the soil; the rising sun is emblematic of progress, and the day that will dawn when all farmers are trained and have learned to co-operate; the cross-section of an ear of corn represents common agricultural interests, since corn is native to America and grown in every state, and the eagle is indicative of the national scope of the organization. Their motto: "Learning to do, doing to learn, earning to live, living to serve."

State's Unique One-man Probes Realize Results

LANSING, MICH. — Michigan's unique one-man grand jury system is developing into a sizable government activity, with seven inquiries now in progress in six counties and more than $600,000 in state and local funds earmarked to pay the bills.

Targets of the jurors range from gambling, bribery and liquor control to labor and local courts. An estimated 2,800 witnesses have testified before the inquisitors.

As an aftermath of the investigations, nearly 200 citizens have been indicted, the list including legislators, state and local police officials, labor leaders, bankers, industrialists and gamblers.

The Michigan system of one-man grand juries dates back to the Detroit police court procedure of the 1880s. The statute providing for the system, which was not written until 1917, enables a justice of the peace, police judge or judge of a court of record to act as a grand juror whenever, upon filing of a complaint by a citizen or official, he has cause to suspect that a crime has been committed within his jurisdiction.

Provision is made for subpoening witnesses, who may be punished for contempt of court.

Legality of the one-man probe has been upheld several times by the Michigan Supreme court, most recently in 1945.

Holiday Turkeys Will Be Plentiful

CHICAGO.—Despite heavy drains on the nation's poultry supplies during the critical meat shortage, Americans will sit down to turkey and cranberries for their Thanksgiving and Christmas meals as usual this year.

Reports compiled from all turkey areas indicate that more than 41 million turkeys will be marketed, the second largest crop on record and only nine per cent under last year's all-time high.

Although a larger percentage of turkeys will be marketed early because of the meat shortage, there will be plenty of birds left for the holidays, according to Cliff B. Carpenter of the poultry institute.

More Women Listed As Heads of Families

WASHINGTON. — Another aftermath of war years was disclosed in a census bureau report that increasing numbers of women have moved into positions of "heads of families"—that is, the major bread-winner for the family.

In 1940 only 15 per cent of American families looked to a woman as the family head, the report reveals, while by V-E Day, the percentage had climbed to nearly 22. This means, the bureau says, that three million more families have a woman as the main support.

Experts Culling Mass of Secret Data on Germany

WASHINGTON.—World's biggest editing job is under way in Germany as experts of the Office of Technical Service screen an estimated 3½ billion pages of once-secret technical and scientific data on German factories, industrial and scientific processes. From this mass of data, experts probably will select about 3½ million pages to be returned to this country for study by industry, schools, government agencies and other interested organizations. Less than one million pages have been returned to this country.

Approximately 100 OTS editors, supervisors and microfilm operators, 600 Germans and an undisclosed number of military personnel are engaged in the task.

The data now being culled is in addition to first-hand reports which 650 technical experts have made on German secret data.

OTS, which is the outgrowth of five former war and postwar government agencies, publishes a weekly "Bibliography of Scientific and Industrial Reports."

Work is now in progress on the second volume of reports, the first containing 26,000 abstracts of industrial and scientific data, both foreign and American. The latter also were secret during the war.

Best sellers on the agency's current list are reports on German soap, electronics, leather, adhesives, paints, varnishes, lacquers and synthetic waxes.

Dad Solves 'Pal Problem'—Enters School at Age of 31

CROWN POINT, IND.—A new solution to the old problem of a father becoming a pal to his children has been provided in the experiences of Gabriel Sabau—all he has to do is go to school!

At 31, Sabau, the father of three youngsters, had never worried much about the problem of being a pal to his tots. He stumbled on a solution of the good companion angle accidentally when he started to school as a freshman this year.

Although they at first were amused by the idea of their dad going to school, the children soon looked forward eagerly to his company.

"Daddy, we're glad you're going to school. You're such a good companion these days," insisted his oldest daughter, Dale Marlene, 10, after the first week.

Besides attending classes daily at Crown Point high school, Sabau works at night for a steel mill. His wife, who also is employed, rushes home at noon to prepare lunch for him and their three children, two of whom are in elementary school.

Sabau, army veteran, entered high school 10 years after quitting the eighth grade. Under the speed-up course, he hopes to complete four years' work in 18 months. Then he'll continue his studies at Purdue.

Pinwheel Medallion Is Easy to Crochet

THIS pinwheel medallion will whirl new beauty into your home! Easy to crochet, it makes elegant doilies; when joined, larger pieces.

HAVE SEED TESTED NOW FOR PLANTING IN SPRING

Top job on the farm calender for Iowa farmers right now is having purity and germination tests run on seed that will be used for planting next spring, reminds E. P. Sylwester, acting head of the Seed Labratory at Iowa State College.

Sylwester emphasizes that creasing numbers of farmers realize the importance of testing home-grown seed, whether it's alfalfa, clover, soybeans, oats, flax or some other crop. The same thing is true of seed that will be offered for sale. If the seed is low in purity, it should be cleaned before sowing. If it is low in germination, the planting rate should be increased.

There has been a tendency, however, to wait until late winter or early spring before sending seed into the labratory for testing. This results in a piling up of work and a delay in getting the germination reports back to farmers.

Sywester emphasizes that there is nothing gained by waiting to have the testing job done later. Waiting increases the danger that the job won't be done at all.

The college labratory is equipped to run both purity and germination tests on all seed samples. Directions for making up the sample can be obtained from the county extension director's office.

It's especially important this year, Sylwester says, to test seed oats for germination because of the prevalence of Helminthosporium blight. Even though the oats are tested, they should be treated with New improved Ceresan before planting.

Tips For Tots

Here are some tips about what to feed the young fry n it's hard to find meat. Nurtritionists of the Children's au tell us that "everything meat has that children need vailable in other foods. Used in the right combinations, will supply meat's nutrients, chief of which is high- ity protein." Here's what they advice:

1. A quart of milk a day supplies considerable protein, east half the amount needed for children from 3 to 13.

2. All kinds of cheese are concentrated source of high- de protein. And contrary to the old belief, even young dren can digest cheese easily. Just be sure it doesn't get h and stringy from overheating. Eggs are another good ein source, and so is fish.

3. If you can find any liver sausage, frankfurters or cheon meat, their protein content compares favorably h that in a prime rib roast.

4. Some of the vegetable foods that contain protein are d beans and peas, peanut butter, bread, macaroni and akfast cereals. Be sure, if you depend on vegetable pro- s, that your child gets at least a pint of milk a day. This bination is important.

Normally, a youngster of ten would get about 40 per t of his protein from milk, 25 percent from meat, fish and s, and close to 25 per cent from bread and other cereals. meat is absent, you can increase the amount of their pro- n foods to make up the deficit.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News
Miss Seim

Wednesday Gaylon Bridges treated us with popcorn balls in honor of his birthday.

Thursday afternoon we all enjoyed our Hollowe'en party.

Seven of the children had the Diphtheria and Small Pox shots on Friday.

First And Second Grade News
Miss Halfwassen

Those in Second Grade that received 100 in Spelling for the week are:

Barbara Thompson
Robert Larson
Gary Baack
Eva Thieman
Janice Stokesbary
Berleen Bridges
Jimmy Karsjens
Fonda Beier
Martin Brinkman
Ronald Trampel

Thursday afternoon the first and second grade enjoyed a Hollowe'en Party.

Third And Fourth Grade News
Miss Heinrich

Gold stars were received by the following in Fourth Grade Spelling:

Graydon Barz
Lois Boland
Dick Dulmes
Carole Ann Montgomery

Thursday afternoon we had Hallowe'en Party. We played games and prizes were given to the winners. At the close of the party everyone was treated with a froststick.

We are now getting ready for Thanksgiving. Today we made Pilgrim boys to post in our room.

One day this week the Fourth Grade began a new reader entitled, "Times and Places." In History we have finished studying about Balboa and Magellan.

The Third Grade also began their Basic Reader, "Streets and Roads," this week.

This week eighteen pupils immunized for Diphtheria and Small Pox.

Fifth And Sixth Grade News
Mrs. H. G. Voetberg

Thursday afternoon we had our Hallowe'en Party. We all wore masks that we had made in art class. For entertainment we had a scavenger and treasure hunt. All of us had a good time.

Daisy Schaefer and Beverly Sobek were absent last week because of illness.

Friday Lois Ann Jacobs had a guest who visited school with her.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News
Clara Smith
Reporter, Sandra Bridges

We played some games for Hollowe'en on Thursday afternoon and our teacher gave us a treat.

We were vaccinated this last week and we were all "scared."

Maralee has turned in the most book reports this six weeks.

In Arithmetic the 8th grade has being studying, "Percentages." To find the percent of a number when a certain percent is given was the hardest we thought.

In music our teacher has played us four records and we are suppose to know them apart.

Freshman Report
Reporter, Evelyn Lyons

In our class we have been finding out how much we know in History and English. We found our history was the hardest. The day after Hallowe'en we can't think very well anyway.

In History we have been studying for a test. The most important things are our great ruler's name's.

Algebra had been quite hard, we have had one rule that we have been trying to learn, "If you add put a plus sign and subtract; If you subtract put down the minus sign and add; if you have a minus and a plus sign you put down the sign of the largest number and subtract." Some of us can't even remember that.

Thursday we had an experiment by Evelyn Lyons, on Friday one by Luella Priebe in Science.

In English our study has been quite hard for us. We have been having diagramming.

We have been having smallpox and diphtheria shots. Quite a few people have been getting sick. There was eleven Freshman vaccinated. The ones who gave the shots were, Dr. Missman, Dr. Dulmes, Miss Oxley, and Miss Grosshuesch.

A Note From The Juniors
Reporter, Loretta Anderson

In English we have been studying how to Listen and Discuss in Class and Club. Thursday we had a discussion on "Should the eighteen year-old boys and girls be permitted to vote."

In Business Law we are now learning different things about insurance. Last Friday we had a test (I mean to say quiz because Mr. Patterson said, "never use the word test for that word scares you.")

In Economics we have been discussing The Organization of Big Business and How Big Business Operates. Last Friday we had a test over the Four Factors Of Production. It seemed that the ones who are in play practice received better grades than those who are not in it.

In Typing we have finished learning the key board and now we are starting our speed emphasis.

In Physics they are learing how forces act together.

There has been many empty seats in our classroom this week because of pheasant hunting and play practice.

Miss Harriett Oxley visited school the fore part of the week to get ready for the vaccinations that were given here Friday, November 1.

Our Sophomore Class
Reporter, Joan Smith

In Literature we are studying many interesting stories. We seem to be liking them much better than at first.

In Geometry we are starting to construct and study parallel lines. It seems to be easier for some of us than constructing some of the harder theorems we we have been having.

In History we are still studying about Rome. Some of those names are pretty complicated but Mr. Rector seems to understand us. He's going to pop us with one of his brain busters tomorrow, we hope it isn't too hard.

In Biology we have been putting moss under the microscope and studying it. It is quite interesting to see how these things are constructed.

RURAL CHURCH LEADERS WILL MEET NOV. 12-14

The nation's outstanding rural church leaders will meet in Des Moines November 12-14 for the national convocation on "The Church in Town and Country," reports W. H. Stacy, rural sociologist at Iowa State College.

Purpose of the convocation is to bring together the best leaders in the church field to discuss ways of improving town and country church work, Stacy says. All Iowans are invited to take part in the sessions.

Dr. Carl C. Taylor, farm population and rural welfare specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, will open the discussions Tuesday morning.

Another highlight on the program will be the discussion of agricultural policies Tuesday evening. Mrs. Raymond Sayre, state women's chairman of the Iowa Farm Bureau, and Monsignor L. G. Ligutti, executive secretary of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference, will head up the panel.

Wednesday afternoon, visitors will be given a review of the latest information on rural church membership and attendance. Dr. Calvin Schnucker of Dubuque University, state director of the Iowa Religious Census, and Dr. H. Paul Douglass, director of the Inter-Council Department of Cooperative Field Research, will be in charge of this feature.

Don't forget the Armistice program at the Community Hall on Monday, November 11 at 10:45 a. m.

GOT HER LUMBER

At Decorah, the telephone in the Baker Lumber Yard rang recently and a women, said "I want some of that flooring you're getting in." "But we don't have any flooring," protested the lumber man. "You will have in a few minutes. I just now saw a truck going through Burr Oak with some flooring billed to you." She got her flooring, which illustrates one way of beating the lumber shortage.

BOY KILLED

At Guthrie Center, 3 year old Larry Benton darted from behind a parked car, was run over and killed instantly by an oncoming automobile.

W. S. C. S. MEETS THURSDAY AT METHODIST CHURCH

The Klemme Methodist W. S. C. S. will meet Thursday afternoon at the church with Mrs. H. E. Harvey as Leader.

Week of Prayer, Self-Denial offering.

Hostesses are Mrs. P. M. Wilson, Mrs. D. P. Anderson and Mrs. Verner Nelson.

PRAYER

When John Sanders, Eldon garge man, prepared to lock up the St. Aloysius Church recently, he heard a young man in the church praying aloud for forgiveness for his sins, one of which included stealing an automobile. Sanders took the young man to the Sanders home and persauded him to go back to his home in Fairfield to "face the music" for stealing the car there.

Radio Train Interviews

A daily radio feature interviews travelers, and not too interesting ones, on the Twentieth Century, a famous railroad train. We propose an extension to other trains; for instance, the 7:25 from Conk Hollow to Birdseed Hills:

Interviewer—This is the Conk Hollow 7:25, folks. Every afternoon at this time we board the old rattletrap and interview the passengers. On this train today is Artemus Wiggins. What's your last name, Mr. Wiggins?

Passenger—Wiggins.

Interviewer — Well, well, that's very interesting. How long have you been Wiggins, Mr. Wiggins?

Passenger—Oh, ever since I can remember. My folks were Wigginses.

Interviewer (enthusiastically)—Is that so! That's exciting, yes indeed. And when did you first go into the oil business?

Passenger—I'm not in the oil business; those spots have always been on this suit.

Interviewer—Well, thank you, Mr. Wiggins for a very interesting moment in this day coach, and when you shave next week try our free can of Mullett's Ruberoo. And now we have still another extraordinary person on this trip, a George Squibsey. What is your name, Mr. Squiffey?

Passenger—Squiffell.

Interviewer—A Squiffell on this train! Well, what do you know about that? Tell the radio audience what your business is, Carl.

Passenger—I just run around in day coaches.

Interviewer (beside himself)—Give him a hand, folks. Here is a man who runs around in day coaches. (Applause.) Why do you do this, Mr. Squilich?

Passenger—Oh, somebody's always apt to come through with a microphone.

Interviewer—And you like to talk into microphones?

Passenger—I've often thought I would like it as a career.

Interviewer—You think this would be a better world, Mr. Squittsey, if more people talked into mikes on commuter trains?

Passenger—I heard Crosby and Hope started that way.

Interviewer—Thanks, Mr. Squinkey, for a very helpful little chat, which I am sure the great radio audience found most unique. Have a cake of soap! We have another interesting passenger here. He's lying here across two seats with his shoes off. What's your name?

Passenger—What's it to you?

Interviewer—Look! (He holds up the mike.)

Passenger—That's different! I am N. B. Furst—and get those initials N. B.!

Interviewer—Well! Well! Well! Well! Fancy meeting you in the third seat from the icewater tank! How long have you been doing this?

Passenger—Doing what?

Interviewer—Doing whatever you do for a living.

Passenger—I forgot, and, anyhow, somebody threw out all my calendars. But I met all challengers. Yes, sir, I fought 'em all.

Interviewer — That's funny; I didn't know you were a fighter. I thought you were a cornborer.

Passenger—No, I started out in that line but found there were too many borers and not enough corn. I wrote Dorothy Dix and she advised me to become a fighter. So the next morning I became the greatest battler the world had ever seen. Those initials explain everything.

Interviewer—What does N. B. stand for?

Passenger—Napoleon Bonaparte!

It Must Be Love

Betty was hesitating between two young men and at last it struck her that she might get some help from her father.

"Which do you think I should take, Daddy?" she asked. "Joe is awfully handsome, but Sam is a nice, steady chap."

Father pondered a short moment; then—

"My dear," he replied, "if you want a good husband, take Sam. He really loves you."

Betty looked interested.

"How do you know?" she asked.

Father smiled.

"I've been borrowing money from him for the last six months," he said, "and he still comes to see you twice a week."

AFTER watching the scramble for world series seats and hearing of the record demand for every game that teams like Army, Michigan and Notre Dame play, one begins to wonder how many over-eager fans are turned away in the course of a year.

The waste in the matter of spectators runs far into the millions. In fact, it will surpass many hundreds of millions, since on certain big occasions far more people are turned away than the number of those admitted.

The Red Sox office in Boston told me that, with room enough, the Boston seat sale for the World Series would have passed the 500,000 mark. This means that about 80 per cent of the ticket applicants were turned away.

Army feels confident that it could have played before more than 250,000 at Ann Arbor, if Michigan had a 250,000 stadium, and just as certain it could play before close to a million in the Notre Dame game.

Unfortunately, when earlier stands were built no one saw the possibilities of any such public demand.

Certainly New York didn't, where there is no such bowl as so many other cities have.

Los Angeles can handle 103,000 at her Municipal stadium, with Pasadena only a few miles away, able to put away over 90,000. With Santa Anita and Hollywood set for racing, Los Angeles is well in front so far as accommodations for the human frame are concerned.

Philadelphia and Chicago have 100,000 plants at the Sesquicentennial stadium and Soldier field.

New York's Big Parks

But their ball parks are too meager, along with so many other cities.

The Yankees have the only ball park that can seat 70,000 fans. Polo grounds and Briggs stadium are about on a par at 58,000. Outside of these places, few ball parks can seat more than 35,000 with any comfort. Public interest in sport, almost every variety of sport, has grown far beyond seating or even standing space. They can handle far bigger crowds in England and Scotland because hillsides often are used. In the matter of football or baseball, it is difficult to build stadiums that could handle more than 110,000 or possibly 125,000 spectators.

When crowds reach or pass these marks, too many spectators are too far away from the scene of conflict or contest. But there is vast room for improving conditions, where space too often is much too limited. The Michigan stadium at Ann Arbor leads all strictly college facilities with room for slightly over 86,000 spectators. With over 100,000 applications for the Army-Michigan game, you can see how inadequate this is.

Just what will be done about the situation is a story for the future. with lack of space and also lack of building material. But many an owner or promoter has wasted many a sigh in thinking of all the lost gold from so many millions crowded out.

Too Much Baseball

There was a good deal of talk, during the recent series, about how baseball is extending its playing season deep into football's brief weeks. Then too, there's the matter of traveling.

We were wondering what would happen in the future when Los Angeles or San Francisco had to face Boston or Brooklyn.

A world series that rolls back and forth from ocean to ocean could be much worse than this shift from St. Louis to Boston and back.

The Mississippi isn't nearly as far away from the Atlantic ocean as the Pacific ocean is.

The main fact is that baseball is crowding much too far into the football season.

Naturally, baseball magnates can't see it that way. They have failed to realize that football is now as much of a major sport as baseball ever was, or ever will be.

If a series happens to run into a day or two of rain, those who follow both baseball and football see their first football game around midseason. This doesn't happen to make any sense. Baseball gets its start back in February. It has at least a six months' span. Football only asks for two and a half months.

Football Rankings

The majority of football fans agree that Texas university belongs on top, or close to the top of the heap, as far as this season goes.

Army and Notre Dame are ranked close alongside, with Michigan in fourth place.

It remains to be seen what Michigan will do in its remaining games. Also more than a trifle of Army's future depends on Doc Blanchard's condition.

PAUL FOUNDS THE CHURCH AT PHILIPPI

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:11-15; Philippians 2:5-11.

MEMORY SELECTION—I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.—Philippians 4:13.

Missionary zeal keeps a Christian in action for God. After a time at the church in Antioch, the urge to preach the gospel sent Paul out on his second missionary journey. This time his partner was Silas, because he and Barnabas had separated over taking Mark along, since he had turned back in the midst of the first missionary journey. Timothy took his place (Acts 16:1-5).

Our lesson is of unusual import because it tells us how the gospel first came to Europe, from whence it later came to America. Paul's efforts to continue his ministry in Asia were hindered by the Holy Spirit (Acts 16:6, 7). It was then that he was given a heaven-sent vision of a man in Macedonia crying for help. At once the party set out to obey the leading of the Holy Spirit (Acts 16:9, 10).

I. Paul's Ministry to the Philippians (Acts 16:11-15).

Philippi was an important city, a Roman colony and outpost. Apparently the Jews who had come there to live had not felt any strong desire for religious fellowship, for they had built no synagogue. Certain godly women met on the Sabbath by the riverside for prayer. Here was Paul's opportunity and he took it.

The story of the conversion of Lydia has many elements of special interest. It presents the turning point in the progress of the gospel, which by the grace and leading of God brought it northward to Europe rather than southward into Africa or eastward through Asia. Many of us have heard because of the way Paul was led, and one wonders if Europe and America might not otherwise have been the "dark continents" rather than Africa and India. We are what we are by the grace of God. He sent us the gospel through Paul that day at Philippi.

Then we note that the first convert was a woman. She was not the last woman to give an attentive ear and a believing heart to the gospel message. The church through all its history has been blessed by the readiness of women to bear and heed the gospel.

We like to note that Lydia set a pattern of hospitality and service which her sisters in the church have maintained (see v. 15). She "constrained" the visiting preachers to enjoy the comforts of her home, and thus put forward the work of Christ (see III John 5-8).

It is encouraging to observe how perfectly the leading of the Holy Spirit worked out in the experience of Paul and his brethren. The Lord sent his prepared messenger to the place where there was a prepared heart waiting to receive the Word.

We may confidently go on the errands of our God, knowing that when he leads he goes before and prepares the way. That does not mean that there will be no trials and difficulties. Paul had plenty of them (see II Cor. 11:23-33). But it does mean that we may go with the assurance of blessed results, in his name, and with the grace to bear whatever comes along the way for his glory.

The second Scripture portion of our lesson is not related to the first except that it gives a portion of the letter which Paul, by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, wrote to the church which he had helped to establish at Philippi about 12 years later.

II. Paul's Message to the Philippians (Phil. 2:5-11).

Although after Lydia's conversion Paul met opposition and suffered imprisonment (Acts 16:16-40), that was only the beginning of a blessed ministry there.

The church at Philippi though poor and persecuted was loyal and warmhearted. They sent a generous gift to Paul, who was in prison in Rome. He wrote to thank them, and his letter became a real hymn of joy and assurance. It discusses Christian experience, its principle, pattern, purpose and power.

Chapter 2 presents the mind of Christ as the pattern of true Christian living. Nothing is to be done for vain glory (v. 3), but in the spirit of Christ, who willingly gave up his glory with the Father that he might become our Saviour. It has well been said that if he had not done so, we should have been amazed at his glory, but we should never have been saved.

He who might have "grasped" (v. 6, R. V.) his equality with God, laid it aside that as a man he might die for the salvation of lost mankind (v. 8).

Little wonder that God has given him such a high and exalted position (vv. 9-11). One day every tongue shall confess that he is Lord. Hasten the day!

LATE WINTER MAY SEE HOGS HIGHER

Predict Cattle, Hog Prices Above Old Ceilings For 8 to 10 Months

What are livestock prices going to do—go up or down? They are likely to make a lot of sharp turns both up and down until they become settled, in the judgment of Lauren K. Soth, Iowa State College farm economist. This settling job may take several weeks, since the lid has been jerked off both livestock and meat prices.

On the optimistic side of the picture is the probability that hog prices will make more than their usual upswing in late winter and spring, Soth says. This is probable if consumer demands do not slow up. This seems unlikely. The seasonal downswings in both hog and low grade cattle prices next fall probably will be greater than usual.

Some uncertainty of market prices of livestock depends on how much consumers will be willing to spend for meat. The chances are that they will rebel at too high prices and force them down from present extreme levels.

Marketing Picture

In any event, however, livestock prices for the next 8 or 10 months can be expected to average considerably higher than old ceiling levels. Meat supplies for this period will be smaller than last year. But supplies will pick up sharply when livestock fattened on 1946 corn starts hitting the market. Hog marketings during the next 5 months will be about as large as a year ago.

Grain-fed cattle prices will show the biggest increase next August and September. Consumer demand will be stronger than a year earlier for the next several months, although some recession in business activity may occur late in 1947.

More Spread In Prices

Another thing of which the farmer can be fairly certain is that spreads in livestock markets will widen. Ceiling removals mean an end of upgrading lower quality livestock This will be especially noted in the cattle market. During the next month or so, the better grades of cattle will be much farther above the lower grades than they have been in recent years.

Farmers can expect, too, that seasonal influences will again become important. When controls were in effect, the normal seasonal movement of prices was not so much in evidence. Now, Soth says, we can expect more pronounced seasonal trends. And prices until late this winter will be held down by heavy marketings of last spring's pigs.

NO LOST TIME

When a honey-mooning sailor and his "Wave" bride, the Doty's of Memphis, Tenn., rammed their automobile into another one at Waverly recently, it looked as if the Doty's would not be able to get their car fixed in time to report for duty. Waverly mechanics listened to their plight, dropped other work and pitched in. The Doty's were on their way south in a jiffy, with time to spare.

Saturday Bridge Club Met At The Mrs. Medin Home

Mrs. Kenneth Medin was hostess to the Saturday Bridge Club at her home Saturday afternoon.

High scores were won by Lorraine Wicks and Mrs. E. C. Buntenbach. Mrs. A. H. Dulmes, who was a guest, received a gift.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

How To Get The Most Out Of High School

by Elizabeth Goll

To get the most out of high school as far as enjoyment is concerned, I will say — Be yourself, for everyone enjoys themself.

To get the most Knowledge out of it, study.

Since studying is the part of high school that most pupils dislike the most, that is the part we shall speak about first. (Save the best until last?) Of course there are many differences in students, therefore, not all pupils can be expected to recieve the same grades in the same subjects. I think that high school students should choose their subjects according to the vocation they have chosen for their life work.

If their life work is going to be farming an agricultural course should be taken, if the plans are for teaching, take subjects accordingly, including normal training if it is offered. For those who wish to take up commercial work, business law, typing and etc. should be taken.

When an assignment is given, get is done and get all you can out of it. I realize this sounds rather impossible for the typical high school student but, it can be done. By getting all you can out of it, I mean let it soak in.!! More students work for grades rather than for knowledge. By this I mean, they work only to get a good grade and to beat the other fellow.

To get the most out of high school by studying, I do not, by any means, think that pupils should be book worms. In my opinion, this is not getting full value out of high school either. Recreation, such as football, basketball, baseball, music, and parties are provided to help make school years more pleasant. Those that participate in these find that some knowledge can be gained from these as well as from history, literature and the like. And let's all participate in as many as possible, shall we? They're fun!

This is my estimation — Be yourself, and have fun. Study, and let it soak in and you will enjoy your high school life.

K. H. S. NOTES

Well, this week things are different. No tests! Thursday and Friday, -- No teachers! We are heartily in favor of having teacher's conventions more often.

On Monday morning we were greeted with three issues of the Reader's Digest. We will use this magazine throughout the year not only to increase our general knowledge, but to increase our use of words. By it we will also test our rate and comprehension of reading.

Who were the tired and sleepy folk in school Wednesday morning? The Juniors, of course! But there was a reason. However, they were happy over the results of their class play and felt well repaid for the effort they had put into it.

Monday afternoon, a preview of "Dear Papa" was given before the entire school.

Entertained At Turkey Dinner And Cards

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buntenbach entertained the following out of town friends at a turkey dinner at their home Friday evening: M. and Mrs. Schankland of Osage; Mr. and Mrs. Babbitt of Conger, Minnesota; Morris Skeleton of Montanna; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Riehm, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Seekerison and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Brown, all of Garner; Edward Buntenbach of Fayette, and Lorraine Wicks of Klemme.

After dinner the evening was spent in playing Court Whist after which contract bridge was played. High scores in Court Whist were won by Mrs. Shankland and Mr. Skeleton.

Prices of milk cows are now the highest on record.

WOMAN WELL KNOWN HERE TO TELL OF HER EXPERIENCES WHILE IN JAPAN

WILL SPEAK AT THE REFORMED CHURCH

Spent Many Years As A Missionary In Japan

Mrs. Gilbert W. Schroer will speak at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church at 8:00 P. M. Friday, November 15th.

Mrs. Schroer is a graduate of Heidelberg College, Titeen, Ohio, and received her M. A. from Hartford Seminary Foundation in 1939. She, with her husband, went to Japan in 1922. She studied the Japanese language in Tokyo Language School. Following the great earth quake of 1923, they moved to Sendal, center of Evangelical and Reformed Mission work in Japan, for further language study. In 1924 they were moved to Morioka, 230 miles north of Sendal. This city was their home for 18 years. She became principal of Izumi Kindergarten, which was part of Morioka Christian Center. Here she made many friends among women, children and young people through Bible classes, hymn singing and domestic science instruction.

After Pearl Harbor, Mrs. Schroer and her daughters Evelyn and Nancy were interned in Morioka Christian Center while Rev. Schroer was imprisoned 165 days. The family was reunited and returned to America on M - S Grispsholm in August 1942.

Rev. Schroer is now Director of Missionary Education. Mrs. Schroer has taught in Leadership Training schools, made many public addresses and in many other ways has assisted her husband in bringing the cause of Missions to churches in general

Rev. and Mrs. Schroer are well known in our community. Both of their homes are in New Knoxville, Ohio, and both have relatives and many personal friends in our communtiy. All are heartly invited to attend this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Klotzbach Will Spend Winter In Minnesota

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Klotzbach are spending this week at Monona, Iowa visiting with his mother and other relatives and old friends. After concluding their visit at Monona they will go to Chrisholm, Minnesota, where they will spend the winter with their son, Allen and family.

Mr. Klotzbach is taking a leave of absence from his work at the Jacobs Hardware, but says he expects to return to Klemme in the spring.

FIRST SNOW FELL HERE ON SATURDAY

The first snow of the season fell here Saturday, beginning about noon, following a rain. Two inches of snow fell during the early afternoon. Roads became slippery and several cars went into the ditch along Hiway 69.

Rain and sleet later in the evening made driving hazardous. By. Monday moring only a few traces of snow remained.

HANCOCK DAIRY GROUP EMPLOYS CORWITH MAN FOR TESTING

John Ward, of Corwith, was hired as the new supervisor by the Hancock Dairy Improvement Association at a meeting at Garner. Mr. Ward will start work at once. He succeeds Lloyd Hyland, who has supervised the work since January, 1946, Art Porter, extension dairyman, assisted with the meeting.

The association has 21 herds at the present time and can have 26 herds per month. The officers are Mitchell Bock, president; C. J. Wille, vice president and Elmer Abele, secretary.

START CHRISTMAS SEWING NOW FOR BEST RESULTS

Maybe it seems early to begin sewing for Christmas but it's not too early if you wish to do a good job says Lucille Rea, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College. If sewing includes making clothing accesories, these pointers may help:

If you are making gloves, hats or bags, choose a good commercial pattern and follow the directions for lining and interlining and proper stitching.

Interlining in bags made from leftover woolens is particularly important. It is needed to give sufficient body and shape to the bag. For a truly professional job, Miss Rea advises pressing as you go and making each step perfect. Use a fastening or closing that you can do nicely, she says.

Gloves or mittens make nice accessory gifts. Knit or crochet them or make them of Jersy or scraps of wool. For the best fit, cut them on the bias. Felt is good for mittens, too.

The wide or girdle type of belt for a young girl can be made of felt, yarn or grosgram ribbon. For hat making, Miss Rea suggests choosing a simple design individual for whom it is included.

CHANCE FOR PROFIT IN SHORT-FED CATTLE NOW

Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist, says, the lifting of meat price ceilings has made the cattle outlook a little easier to interpret.

Kutish feels that the lifting of price ceilings definitely has improved the opportunity for profits on short-turn feeding. And it still may be possible to buy cattle for this kind of an operation if the purchase price is not too high.

The kind of cattle that fall into this class are the medium grade, heavy steers that stand a chance of raising a grade when sold next April or May. They should be bought between $11 and $13. With the fall pig crop considerably lower, there should be a strong demand for available meat next spring.

Carrying cattle into the summer and fall of next year is more risky, Kutish believes. Supplies of long-fed beef will then be considerably larger than they were this year. Cattle feeders are taking out nearly twice as many calves as they did last year. And some economists are predicting a business recession by mid-1947. A price strengthening factor, though, will be the extremely short pork supply next summer.

Kutish does not expect to see any sharp decline in feeder cattle prices in the immediate future. Prices may slip back form recent advances, but there still is a strong demand both from Corn Belt farmers and from the wheat pasture areas.

The smallest good deed is better than the grandest good intention.

RESIGNS AFTER 15 YEARS WITH OIL CO.

Will Take Over New Job December 1st

The Board of Supervisors of Hancock County appointed Mr. Herman Paul, Klemme filling station operator, to succeed Mr. Ryan as superintendent of the County Home and Farm at Duncan. Mr. Paul will begin his new duties December 1st when Mr. and Mrs. Ryan leave for Webster County to supervise the home in that county.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul will dispose of their household goods at auction before moving to the County Home.

Mr. Paul has been manager of the Hancock County Cooperative Oil Association station in Klemme since it was opened 15 years ago this month.

A successor to Mr. Paul at the station has not been named.

COUNTY SELECTS HOSPITAL BOARD

Hancock county supervisors have appointed the board of trustees for the Hancock county hospital. Appointed to the board were: Charles F. Merten, Hancock county engineer, Garner; Lester Stille, Klemme; A. C. Taylor, Hayfield; P. J. Kirkpatrick, Crystal Lake; Erwin L. Buck, Britt; Oscar E. Johnson, Kanawha, and Rufus C. Welter, Corwith.

The trustees will meet Nov. 18, at the courthouse in Garner for organization. The trustees appointed will hold office until the general election in 1948 at which time they will be elected by popular vote.

CORN, SOYBEANS STILL IN FIELD

Frequent Rains Slow North Iowa Harvest

Frequent rains the past two weeks and snow the last of the week has seriously handicapped farmers who still have soybeans to harvest and also delayed corn picking.

About 10 per cent of the beans are still in the field awaiting the combine. Some corn is being cribbed but moisture content generally is still too high for safe storing.

Tests have been run on numerous corn fields and the average moisture content is about 25 per cent. Tests have run as low as 17½ per cent to as high as 31 per cent.

Couty Extension Director Paul Henderson and Triple A officials are urging farmers to test their corn before cribbing and advising them not to crib corn with high moisture content.

CALLED THE KING

The Oceola, Iowa Telephone Company, recently installed dial telephones and promised that the person installing the "100th" phone could have a free telephone call to any place on the globe. Mrs. H. L. Karr won the award; and placed a call to the King of England. She got through as far as the Royal Palace and told the royal secretary that as a "plain housewife" she expressed her gratitude to England for the part played in the war, and expressed the hope that England and the U. S. will be a power for permanent peace.

NARROW ESCAPE

Ab Jenkins, holder of several automobile speed records, will conduct a series of high speed runs in the near future to try to better his marks. Possibly he will make the new trials on the Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah. His machine is small for a super-speed car—it weighs only 1,900 pounds, and stands three feet high. It is powered by a 183-cubic inch v-8 motor, that produces 550 horse power at 8,500 rpm.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT!

By FRANK COLBY

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

RAISE AND REAR

From W. K. B., Manitowoc: Give us a ruling on "raising" human beings. Raise, one man here insists, is used only in reference to animals. Let's have the thing cleared up once and for all.

A. Funk and Wagnalls sternly warn: "Raised should never be used of bringing human beings to maturity. It is a common misuse in the southern and western United States. Cattle are raised; human beings are brought up, or reared."

In my opinion, such a dictum is mere quibbling. There is nothing in the meaning or etymology of raise that would make the word inappropriate in connection with "raising" human beings to maturity. As a matter of fact, raise and rear are both from the Old Norse reisa, "to raise."

One may raise anything—crops, salaries, the rent, cattle, prices, objections, rumpuses. Masons are raised to the third or master's degree. Many Catholics have been raised to sainthood. The night before his death, Sir Walter Raleigh wrote in his Bible: "God shall raise me up, I trust!"

My assistant, Dr. Etaoin Shrdlu, has been reading over my shoulder (detestable habit!) and has just snorted tremendously in my ear, and loped off in high dudgeon to his cobwebby cubicle, growling, ". . . no reverence for sacred tradition—reductio ad absurdum — mumble—mumble—mumble!" —

Nevertheless, to raise and to rear are as closely synonymous as two words can be, as most dictionaries will attest. Note this definition from Merriam Webster's: "rear: to breed and raise; as to rear cattle." Also: "raise: to cause to be—bred or propagated; to grow; as—to raise cattle."

Hence, to object to "raising" children because "cattle are raised," is also to say that "rearing" children is equally improper, since cattle also are reared. Double talk.

To raise children is an American idiom that is here to stay. However, I should not go to the extreme of the West Texas ranch woman who once told me: "I've raised six head o' young 'uns and I raised 'em right smart, too."

Claremont: To settle an argument here at Pomona college, please pass on the diction of this sentence: I am holding you by the nape of the neck.—A. D. H.

Answer: It is redundant, since nape means "the back part of the neck." Better: I am holding you by the nape (and pronounce it to rhyme with "ape").

Brooklyn: To settle a discussion, kindly give the pronunciation for Greenwich, Conn.—J. E. M.

Answer: Apparently Greenwich has as many pronunciations as has the name Los Angeles, for Webster's gazeteer lists: GREEN-witch; GRIN-witch; GREN-itch.

Boston: What, please, is a FIDO, and how did it contribute to the winning of the war?—H. V. M.

Answer: FIDO stands for "Fog Investigation Dispersal Operation," a method of clearing fogs from British and American landing fields in England.

Los Angeles: In this state we have Palo Alto, Palos Verdes, and Palo Mar. Now we know that alto means "high," that verde means "green," and that mar means "sea." But what is the meaning of palo?—M. G. P.

Answer: It is Spanish for "tree; timber." Palo Alto means "tall timber." Palos Verdes is "green trees, or timber." Palo Mar is equivalent to "timber (near or at) the sea."

PAUL MINISTERS TO THE THESSALONIANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1-7, I Thessalonians 1:2-8.
MEMORY SELECTION—Be not weary in welldoing.—II Thessalonians 3:13.

A great city, commercially active, religious to a high degree, a military center and a harbor so fine that it is important to this day—such was the city of Thessalonica. It presented a challenge to the preachers of the gospel and, in the name of Christ, Paul accepted and won a great victory.

In the face of persecution, bitter and persistent, the believers in this city remained faithful. The reason for that appears in our lesson. Rooted and grounded in Christ, they had brought forth the fruit of real Christian living under circumstances which were difficult and trying. Our lesson tells of both the preaching of the gospel by Paul and the living of the gospel by the Thessalonians.

I. The Gospel Preached—Accepted and Rejected (Acts 17:1-7).

Paul began his long and successful ministry in Thessalonica in the synagogue. It was to the Jews who worshiped the one true God that he came with his message about their expected Messiah—Christ the Lord. Here he established a strong church.

What was the message which so signally succeeded in this great strategic center? Well, it was not (as some modern preachers in large cities seem to think necessary) a series of social, political, or literary discourses. Paul preached Christ. He reasoned with them and presented the Saviour (v. 3) as One who was

1. Dead for our sin. These people were like us in that they needed a solution for their sin problem.

Without the death of Christ there is no salvation for any man. Only through the shedding of blood can there be remission of sin (Heb. 9:22). Paul had no part in the folly of a "bloodless gospel"—as though there were any such gospel.

2. Raised for our justification. It was not enough that Jesus died, marvelous as that is in our sight. For many a man has died for his convictions, but none has risen from the dead. Christ could not be holden of the grave. He arose the victorious Redeemer.

3. Declared to be the Christ. He is more than a man, more than a great leader and an earnest teacher He is God's anointed One, himself divine—and our Lord.

Some believed (v. 4), including many devout Greeks, and not a few of the leading women. The gospel does have life-giving power as the Holy Spirit applies it to the hearts of willing men and women.

Others opposed (vv. 5, 6). Note that they were "of the baser sort." They always are, even when they appear to be cultivated and educated, for there is something fundamentally wrong in a life which rejects Christ.

It was a serious charge they made against the Christians (v. 7), for it was treason punishable by death to have any other king but Caesar if one lived in a Roman colony.

But the thing which they hated worst in these Christians was the fact that their topsy-turvy world was in danger of being set right (they put it the opposite way, v. 6), and they did not want to be made right. It is interesting to note that these early preachers had divine power to turn over the social order. Would that we showed more of that power in the church today!

Accepting the truth is good, but it must go on in daily living. The Thessalonians knew that and they are models of

II. The Gospel Lived — Followers and Examples (I Thess. 1:2-8).

Paul, the missionary, was a courteous preacher. He recognized the faithfulness of Christian brethren and did not hesitate to commend them. We could do more of that when we meet true and faithful believers.

They were followers of Paul, but only because he followed Christ (v. 6). His power was from above (v. 5), even as they also were chosen from above (v. 4).

Following Christ meant affliction to them (v. 6), but it also meant the joy of the Holy Spirit, which is entirely independent of the circumstances of life—and above them.

These Thessalonian believers were examples of what it meant to be Christians. Wherever Paul went their faith toward God was recognized and he did not need to explain or argue for his gospel. People knew the Thessalonian Christians, and thus they knew real Christianity.

There could be no finer witness to the faith of anyone than to be able to bear testimony that it is an example—a model—to which others may look and not go astray. Do we dare to measure our Christian lives by such a standard?

CLINTON OATS FOR EVERYONE IN 1948

That Is Prospect If Yields Are As High In 1947 As This Year

If the 1947 season is at all favorable, Iowa farmers should produce enough Clinton oats to supply seed for the entire oat acreage the following year, says Joe L. Robinson, Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station agronomist.

The 539 farmers who received Clinton oats for increasing the seed this year have harvested about 720,000 bushels of the new oats, Robinson reports. Using 2 bushels of seed per acre, the amount recommended for maximum increase, this should be enough for 360,000 acres during the coming year.

Need 15 Million

If the average yield is 60 bushels, as is approximated this summer, some 21 million bushels of Clinton oats should be available for 1948 seeding. Normally, about 15 million bushels of seed are required annually to sow Iowa's 5 million acres of oats.

In addition to the increase of Clinton seed made available by farmers this year, Experiment Station at Iowa State College has again made available about the same amount of Clinton seed that was released to farmers last year, or more than 20,000 bushels.

Release Benton

Seed of Benton oats, a sister selection of Clinton, also is being sent to about one grower per county. Robinson says Benton so far compare fairly closely in yield with Clinton. It grows somewhat taller, however, and is a little more uniform in maturity. Because of its greater height, it may find favor over Clinton in the northeast Iowa dairy section where straw is valued highly. It also may have a slight edge in light soil areas.

All seed is again being handled through county committeemen.

The Army Ground Forces offers you A NEW LIFE OUT THERE

Look toward Korea and Japan! A thrilling new job and a new life—with interesting work, sports, entertainment and travel opportunities—can be had for the asking by qualified young men who volunteer for the 1st Cavalry, 11th Airborne, 6th, 7th, 24th or 25th Infantry Divisions.

What an opportunity . . . what a job! Training in one of these crack units will stand you in good stead wherever you go. Study a foreign language. Learn the fascinating details of Military Government—so vital to future peace and prosperity.

Japan's "Isles of Pines" are but a sample of the attractions of an Army career in the Far East. The Army has reopened comfortable hotels, theaters, swimming pools, tennis clubs, golf courses, ball parks. These—familiar haunts of pre-war tourists—and many new developments—provide a broad choice of recreation.

Not everyone can measure up to this job. Only 3-year enlistees who meet prescribed physical and mental standards can enjoy the benefits of such a job. High overseas pay, good food and lodging and a generous retirement plan make your future in the Army Ground Forces too good to miss! See your nearest Army Recruiting Officer for full details.

Schools Play Critical Postwar Role

German Education Must Be Recast in Democratic Mold

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Whether we are going to have two worlds or one, one of the battle grounds on which the issue will be decided is Germany. Lines for that battle are forming now between one of the most powerful forces for democracy, the American public school, and one of the most anti-democratic forces of old Germany, the Prussian educational system.

Baukhage

When congress meets it must consider the report of the mission of educators who were sent to the American zone by the state and war departments to study education in Germany. They came back with a careful and detailed study, including a description of conditions and a set of recommendations which, if they can be carried out, will have a vital effect in building democracy in Germany.

Perhaps an educational system based on the American model may not be sufficient to democratize Germany but I think it is no exaggeration to state that without such a system, democracy never will be achieved in the Reich.

I had the privilege of attending a conference presided over by William Benton, assistant secretary of state in charge of public affairs, at which Chairman Zook and members of the educational mission were present. I came away deeply impressed, not only with the factual data presented—(I was familiar with some of the data)—but also with the importance of the program as a means of determining whether democracy or totalitarianism will dominate western Europe and perhaps the world.

System Mixture of Master, Servant

We know how Germany's history, her political and social institutions, have all tended to create a peculiar type of thinking which has resulted in a caste system with a strange mixture of super-ordination and sub-ordination on the part of the individual German. The superficial and erroneous explanation is that the German is half dominating and half servile. There isn't space here to go into German psychology but there was one point in the educational mission's report which was emphasized by their chairman and echoed by Assistant Secretary of State Benton, which partially explains this phenomenon. It reveals perhaps the greatest single factor that can block democratic evolution in Germany. This factor, the mission says, "has cultivated attitudes of superiority in one small group and of inferiority in the majority of the members of German society, making possible the submission and lack of self determination upon which authoritarian leadership has thrived."

The bars go down on the path of democracy for the German child in the fourth grade of elementary school. It is here that the fortunate 10 per cent who are to be the "superiors" leave the unfortunate 90 per cent, for at this point—when the children are about 10—those who expect to attend the universities and prepare for a professional career are set aside in secondary schools.

It is largely the financial or social position of the parents which forms the basis of selection for these secondary schools. The overwhelming majority of pupils, a large proportion of whom deserve university education because of their ability, finish elementary school and then go on to vocational education. This makes a fundamentally "undemocratic division of the educational stream."

Until they are 10 years old little Fritz and Johann have studied and played together in something approximating the comradeship of two American boys, though one's father owns the bank and the other's runs a tailoring shop. But when they leave the fourth grade, their ways part and each year from then on, the wall between them grows higher.

Dr. Zook's voice was filled with real emotion when he described one of the many experiences he had when the mission visited the German elementary schools. It was his practice to ask the fourth grade children: "What are you going to be?" And without the slightest hesitation they would answer: "Butcher, baker, clock-maker, cobbler" or whatever it may have been, never dreaming that it could be anything else, because their way already had been chosen for them. This revelation, Dr. Zook said, was as heartbreaking to him as when again and again, four out of five of the children answered "no" to the question: "Did you have any breakfast today?"

Contrast the life of these children with the American children who spend eight years together in the grade schools, many of them four more in high school, where all compete on equal terms, where ability can be assayed, where ambition can be estimated.

School Plant Hit Hard by War

This is only one facet of the problem with which the educators who must guide German education will have to deal. There are a great many physical difficulties, too. In the first place, there is a dearth of buildings, of teachers, of equipment.

Many of the school buildings are rubble. Many have been requisitioned for various uses by the military government. In the winter there is the question of heat—this winter probably will be one of the worst—and this is one of the most difficult problems to overcome because of the shortage of coal in the American zone.

As to teachers, more than one-half of the Germans were dismissed because of their participation in the Nazi setup.

There are few books. There is a paper shortage because there is no machinery to make paper. There is no machinery because there is no steel. There is no steel because there is no coal. And so the vicious circle continues, affecting the whole question of supply and equipment.

There are, on the other hand, some things on the credit side. For instance, the fact that the Germans have an inborn respect for learning and after a generation behind the "iron curtain" they are literally starving for information concerning the rest of the world. I can testify to this from my own conversations with a number of the young people, as well as the older ones, who had had at least a glimmering of the world before Goebbels.

It is generally admitted that the first two objectives of the occupation forces have been realized more fully in the American zone than anywhere else. I refer to denazification and demilitarization. These are important but negative. On the positive side, democratization lags. We know very little about what is happening in the Russian zone but a nation that has progressed as far in moulding the minds of its own people, undoubtedly is not neglecting its efforts in Germany. We know that despite the terrible conditions in Russia arrangements already have been made for students from the Russian occupied countries to take courses in the Russian universities.

The recommendations outlined in the mission's report include similar projects for the future, as well as various other steps extending beyond the schools themselves and operating through the parents and teachers organizations and other groups. There is no intention to superimpose upon the Germans any system against their will. So far there has been excellent co-operation and educational circles in Germany are enthusiastic about the steps already taken. They hope that trained educators will come to Germany; they would be only too glad to send their people to this country for instruction. They may not know what democracy is but there is plenty of evidence that they want to find out.

Presumably the report as forwarded to the secretary of state will receive his approval, and congress will have the opportunity to pass upon the whole program but, as the report concludes: "The development of this program is not the responsibility of the government alone. Equally, if not more, important is the intelligent backing of the American people in the reorientation of the German people. We have committed ourselves to a program in which education plays a critical role. There must therefore be no turning back in our support of that program so vital to the enduring peace of the world."

FUTURE JIVE ADDICTS . . . Combining the average child's liking for banging on pots and pans with an awakening of his natural sense of rhythm probably will not make the neighborhood quieter but it will bring out the jump and jive of the younger set. Youthful "hep-cats" are shown here at a jam session at New York Children's Aid society.

NEWS REVIEW

Full Agenda Faces U.N.; Wave of Strikes Looms

U.N.: Meeting Underway

Vyacheslav M. Molotov shook the hand of Mr. Truman warmly in the lobby of the United Nations meeting place in New York after his address to the delegates and a Russian interpreter told the President: "Mr. Molotov wants to congratulate you heartily on that speech. He thought it was a great speech."

Later that night when Mr. Truman greeted the delegates at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf Astoria hotel, Molotov and the President again shook hands warmly, and the interpreter repeated: "Mr. Molotov wants to thank you again for your splendid speech."

The speech which Molotov so highly praised was a masterful diplomatic piece, indeed. It recognized the talk of another war arising from the differences of the big powers over the postwar composition of the world, but appealed to the sensibility of the major statesmen to avert such a disaster. It called for compromises to adjust differences between the East and West, but committed the U. S. to no definite adjustments. While firm, it was conciliatory.

Thorny Issues

Mr. Truman could well prepare the path for firmness and conciliation what with the U. N. about to mull over an agenda packed with explosive possibilities. Foremost of these was the proposals advanced by Australia and Cuba to eliminate the veto right of the big powers on the security council, a right the Russians have jealously guarded to protect their interests against the Anglo-American majority.

Other thorny issues included:

- Creation of a trusteeship council to govern dependent areas of the world, particularly the strategic Italian colonies along the Mediterranean.
- Russia's proposal that allied countries report on their maintenance of troops in other states, except former enemy nations.
- Iran's protest against Russian pressure for political and petroleum concessions.
- Russian demands for the early ouster of the Franco regime in Spain.

LABOR: New Demands

New contract demands by the auto, farm equipment and mine unions left Americans wondering if a new wave of strikes was in the offing just as production appeared to be getting into full swing. With increased output, consumers saw more goods at lower prices.

Auto—Widespread interest centered in the CIO-United Auto Workers offensive against the Chrysler corporation for wage increases corresponding to the rise in the cost of living since the union was granted an 18½ cent an hour boost last January.

In pressing its offensive against Chrysler in the hope of establishing a wage pattern for the entire industry, the UAW disclosed it would ask for a minimum increase of 16 cents an hour to take care of the 12½ per cent rise in the cost of living since last January. A boost of 26 cents an hour will be demanded if the cost of living should soar 20 per cent or 33 cents if the rise reaches 25 per cent.

Farm Equipment—In re-opening contract negotiations with International Harvester, the CIO-Farm Equipment Workers asked that union members "be allowed to share in the prosperity of the company and the country." Harvester spokesmen denied the allegation that the firm would treble its best prewar profits in 1946.

Besides hitting for substantial pay increases, the FEW also will seek a guaranteed annual wage assuring a minimum of 40 hours compensation for each of 52 weeks.

Coal—Charging the government with violating the contract with the United Mine Workers under which the U. S. is operating the nation's soft coal pits, UMW Chieftain John L. Lewis called for a new pact embodying revised wages and hours.

Secretary of the Interior Krug's attempt to defer the opening of negotiations met with Lewis' blunt assertion that failure to hold discussions would void the contract.

VICTIM OF LAW . . . A legal quirk may deprive six-year-old Billy Keefe, Jersey City, N. J., paralyzed since birth by cerebral palsy, of his beloved pony, Beauty. The board of health contends his mother, also paralyzed since his birth, illegally converted a garage into a stable.

RECALLS 1920 SPIRAL

Farm Mortgage Debt Soaring

CHICAGO. — For the first time in 23 years, farmers are plunging into debt, Dr. Norman J. Wall, head of the division of agricultural finance in the bureau of agricultural economics named delegates to the National Agricultural Credit committee meeting here.

Inflated land prices combined with plenty of cash are responsible for the increased debt among farmers, Dr. Wall maintains. The amount of money farmers owe their creditors is on the way up again after a steady decline before and during the war, he adds.

The total farm mortgage debt increased 80 million dollars in the six months ending last July 1, he reports, adding that land values are following closely the spiral of World War I. He compared the present position to that of 1920, when prices of land shot up in their final spurt before they started skidding.

Rural bank loans also are going up, according to Dr. Wall. Non-real estate credit advanced by commercial banks soared 22 per cent in the year ending June 30.

A prediction that farm debt will continue to increase was made by the government economist. Already the rate of repayment, which was especially heavy during the war years, is slackening, he adds, attributing this condition to the fact that farmers are using their savings to buy manufactured goods now becoming increasingly abundant.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Toy Cars, People and Trees Recreate Accidents in Court

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Toy cars, miniature replicas of people and even diminutive trees recreate the setting of traffic accidents in the court of Guy Shearer, police judge pro tem.

"We're not playing with toys around traffic court," Judge Shearer insists, adding that the project is intended as a means of speeding up cases.

Deciding that action on traffic court cases was unnecessarily slow, conflicting evidence in a minor case often requiring nearly two hours for presentation, Judge Shearer decided to modernize and streamline the procedure.

Judge Goes Shopping.

The judge went shopping, trudging the business district for several hours before he finally found seven toy cars in a dime store, paying 10 cents each "out of his own pocket."

The toy cars are used to illustrate testimony of witnesses in traffic mishaps. Used with the cars are six maps showing various types of intersections in the city. The maps were drawn on large cardboard placards to scale with the model cars.

When a traffic case is called, a map covering the particular type of scene where the accident occurred is set up and witnesses are asked to place the model cars where the street-size vehicles were at time of the mishap.

Add Realistic Touch.

Toy people and trees also play an important part in the plan. Trees are placed at intersection corners to add realism to the scene and persons involved in the mishap are placed in the positions they occupied.

"This procedure," Shearer explains, "makes clear in the minds of the court and the witnesses just what happened and eliminates confusion."

Threat of A-Bomb Impels Easterner To Head for West

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.—The reasoning of William Keenan went something like this: The United States has the atom bomb, but soon other nations will have it. If there were a war between one of these nations armed with the atom bomb and the United States, what would be the enemy's main target? The answer that Keenan arrived at was "the New York area." That is where Keenan lived—until he became alarmed over perils of life in the atomic age.

Loading all his furniture and other possessions in a truck, Keenan set forth for "somewhere in Montana," where, he believes, there will be little possibility of a rain of the destructive war weapons.

Accompanying Keenan on the trek west were Mrs. Keenan, their son, Billy, and three daughters, Barbara, Pauline and Ruth.

War Battleflags Being Relegated To Show Cases

DES MOINES, IOWA. — World War II already is reaching the "show case" stage in Iowa history.

The next session of the state legislature will be asked to provide display cases for World War II flags of Iowa units, which will be presented to the state at an Armistice Day ceremony in the statehouse.

Four cases of faded and often tattered Civil war flags and one case each of Spanish-American and World War I standards now repose in show cases.

Under the once red-white-and-blue Civil war flags are such observations as these:

"May the wreaths they have won never wither,
Nor the stars of their glory grow dim."

"The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

Beneath the World War I flags appears this legend:

"So long as time's great cycle runs,
Or nations weep their fallen ones,
Thou'lt not forget thy patriot sons,
Iowa, O! Iowa."

Church Gets Quarter, Interest and 'Penalty'

NEWPORT, KY. — The Rev. Charles J. Schaufuss, pastor of the Congregational church, received a letter from Mrs. Lydia Simpkinson, 70, of Pasadena, Calif., containing a 25-cent piece which she said she had overlooked while conducting a drive for the church 50 years ago, plus checks for $13.75 representing interest and $50 "as a penalty for keeping the quarter so long."

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

BOOSTS RURAL FLYERS

Seven out of ten light planes in the near future will be found in rural areas, Forrest Watson, president of Flying Farmers association, told delegates to the National Aviation clinic meeting in Oklahoma City, Okla. Watson based his prediction on the fact that flying is far more practical and economical for the farmer or rancher than for city residents.

Because of the marked increase in personal flying, airplane designs must be changed to provide for greater sturdiness and ability to handle bulky loads, as well as to permit shorter takeoffs and landings, Watson advised the clinic. He also called for more landing strips and development of an air marking system.

Objectionable assessments made on private fliers were listed by J. B. Hartranft Jr., general manager of Aircraft Owners and Pilots association, as inadequate services at airports, overcharging for maintenance and repairs, landing fees, excessive fuel taxes, federal charges for recording aircraft ownership, multiple licensing requirements, failure of retailers to live up to contracts and discriminatory prices for fuel sold to transient fliers.

Although he has only one arm, J. B. Wilde of Meunster, Tex., found no difficulty in learning to fly. He soloed a Cub recently and gave flying a nice plug. "Flying is easy," he said, "everybody will be flying pretty soon."

ALASKAN RUSH

A new version of the Alaskan gold rush of '98 is under way—this time in the form of big game hunters. An increase of more than 500 per cent in the number of hunters who have flown to Alaska for hunting expeditions is reported this year.

Passengers fly to a major Alaskan city on either Pan American or Northwest air lines northern routes and then board smaller planes for the game regions, accompanied by experienced Alaskan guides. Hunters can fly north and return with their game during a one or two-week vacation.

Records show that at least one planeload a week has flown north this season and officials expect the number to be doubled or tripled next spring and fall, particularly during the grizzly bear hunting season.

SKY HERD

The plane that carries secretary service men and reporters who accompany President Truman on his flying trips about the country is called the Sacred Calf—because it always tags the Sacred Cow. The Calf is a faster plane than the Cow, always taking off after the presidential ship and landing ahead of it. Special radio-phone communication between the two planes permits the pilot of the Calf to advise the President's pilot of any sudden weather shifts en route.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

MARINE CORPS ANNIVERSARY . . . Throughout the world, members of the marine corps will pause on November 10 to recall the founding of their organization 171 years ago. They also will pause in tribute to gallant Leathernecks who gave their lives in the fierce battles of the Pacific. Here is shown the fifth marine division cemetery on Iwo Jima, with a sketch of marines in combat.

HISTORY OF HEROISM

Marine Corps To Observe Anniversary of Founding

Traditions springing from deeds of heroic marines down through the decades of American history will burn fiercely in the hearts of present-day Leathernecks as U. S. marine corps observes the 171st anniversary of its founding November 10.

At ceremonies throughout marine corps bases in continental United States as well as at outposts in Shanghai, London, Manila, Panama Canal zone and others manned by Leathernecks, men of the corps will assemble. They will be told once again the story of the founding of the marines at Tun tavern in colonial Philadelphia on November 10, 1775, before signing of the Declaration of Independence. Wherever they gather, marines will remember with pride the men of their corps who died at Trenton, Tripoli, Manassas, Belleau Wood, Managua, Guadalcanal and Iwo Jima.

Still Protect Lives.

Although no longer fighting a war, the marines of today are as active as ever. They are back at their job of protecting lives and property, at the same time perfecting those special talents which always have distinguished them in the military field.

At Lake Success, Long Island, N. Y., marines have been selected as the representatives of our armed forces to preserve order and to maintain the security of the United Nations. Some 80 marines of the provisional guard, outfitted in new blue uniforms, take posts at strategic places to direct traffic, to answer inquiries and to check passes.

In China, as members of "cease-fire" teams—umpires in the Nationalist-Communist dispute—marines operate in the field to bring about conciliation between local factions before bloodshed can begin.

On the other side of the world, 900 miles from the North Pole, a force of marines is testing winter combat clothing and studying techniques of cold-weather campaigning — a radical change from the steaming jungles of the Solomon islands.

Significant History.

Throughout the history of the United States, the marine corps has played an illustrious and colorful role in all conflicts. The corps' battle record commenced with the Revolutionary war in 1775. Then followed the naval war with France in 1798, the war with Barbary pirates in 1805, the War of 1812, the Indian wars of 1836, the Mexican war of 1848, Perry's expedition to Japan in 1854, the Civil war of 1861, the expedition to Korea in 1866, the Spanish-American war of 1898, the Boxer rebellion of 1900, World War I in 1917, the Nicaraguan revolution of 1927 and finally World War II.

In the period between wars, marines were constantly on the job protecting the lives and property of American citizens in numerous revolutions and uprisings, in civil disputes at home and in time of national disasters.

Boast of Personnel.

Heralded as the best trained, most efficient fighting organization in the world, the marine corps boasts of the esprit de corps of its personnel.

Esteemed by his nation, feared by his enemies, censored for his cockiness but respected by all, the United States marine is one of the world's most versatile and colorful fighters.

Carrying out the boast that "the marine corps takes care of its own," the organization has established a rehabilitation program designed to serve discharged Leathernecks. In the first six months of 1946, 65,000 discharged marines were counselled by letter and 35,000 by personal interview. Former marines in various fields have helped in rehabilitation of other members of the corps, this co-operation being cited as one reason for the boast that "there are no ex-marines."

Ancient Ashes Used For Building Blocks

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Tests under way at University of New Mexico are designed to show that ashes and cinders deposited by volcanoes in New Mexico during the Mesozoic period of several thousand years ago can be utilized as a building material to aid the postwar shortage.

Main objective of the tests is to determine the best method of manufacturing "cinder blocks" from the ancient material. Already in use in the state, the blocks are gaining popularity because of their extreme lightness and low thermal conductivity.

Experimenters are endeavoring to secure a building material which will be light, strong, fast curing and easily manufactured.

Yanks' Preferences In Music Are Varied

NEW YORK. — Musical preferences of American servicemen overseas vary considerably from those of the folks back home, it is revealed in a poll taken through Armed Forces radio stations around the world.

In Hawaii "Making Whoopee" is the favorite tune. Other preferences: Panama Canal zone, "Poker Game"; Manila, "Don't Cry Baby"; Puerto Rico, "Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief"; Germany, "Oh, What It Seemed To Be"; Aleutians, "I Wanna Get Married"; Austria, "Let It Snow"; Italy, "Symphony," and Japan, "I Can't Begin To Tell You."

Bread Consumption Reported on Decline

CHICAGO.—Bread, long known as the "staff of life," has been slipping in public esteem for 37 years, a report by National Federation of Millers discloses.

In 1919 the average American consumed 212 pounds of wheat, the report shows, while now the figure has dropped to an all-time low of 150.

Contending that people aren't eating enough bread and other wheat products, the association plans to launch a two-year campaign to restore wheat as "the No. 1 ingredient in the diet of the American people."

Convicts Hitch Ride — With Prison Warden

LANSING, KAS. — Two convicts from the Kansas state penitentiary escaped from a work detail, hid in a nearby woods until nightfall and then made their way to a highway, where they hitchhiked a ride with the first car to approach. Driver of the car was Robert Hudspeth, state prison warden. Recognition was mutual, Hudspeth reported, and the prisoners offered no resistance.

Skunk Is Grateful, Benefactor Insists

HANKINS, N. Y.—Even the skunk occasionally can be grateful, Louis Hoffman admits. When a little skunk advanced toward Hoffman, discretion struggled with valor, but discretion lost. Hoffman held his ground and breath. The skunk's head was caught in a glass jar, so Hoffman bent down and gingerly pulled at the jar until the creature was free. The skunk ambled off.

Watching

By DOROTHY SAWYER

WNU Features.

THE bank was cool and comfortable, and the morning hum of business was progressing at a moderate pace. The line at the Teller's window was as long as any line, and he was commencing to increase his activity.

His hands moved faster, and he figured repeating amounts aloud. A harassed expression flickered across his taciturn face, as if he were momentarily hard pressed.

At the other side of his window was someone who missed none of this, whose slightly narrowed gaze betrayed his attention, and whose eyes frequently slid over, and rested on an armed guard, pacing up and down the length of the bank.

Then, his eyes sullen, he looked squarely at the busy Teller, who seemed unconscious of his scrutiny. He shifted his weight, the woman standing next to him sighed, and he pulled himself erect.

Timing. Timing. Everything was timing. The light from a window focused on some money in the Teller's hands. The watcher looked out of the window beyond the executives' offices, and saw a thin, sallow man, hat over his eyes, lift his gaze from a book in his hands and peer into the bank. Could he see him waiting there listening, rigid, one in all the hundreds of those who were, presumably, attending to business?

Now. His right hand strained toward his pocket. Someone in the waiting line dropped a book, and as she stooped to pick it up, the action brought her eyes around in the direction of that straining hand.

A pretty girl smiled at him. He felt a faint disgust. What were they to him today? Furniture, decoration, nothing more!

The hand hesitated, relaxed, and patiently he settled down to waiting.

If Miriam looked at him, now, she would be proud. "Listen, pal," she said often, in her slangy way, "When you don't know what to do—don't. That's the answer—don't. You will win in the long run. You will have everything you want, if you sit tight when the going is tough. Don't force the cards."

Of course, she had never been really hungry, so hungry that all the world was swallowed up in hunger. Hunger reminded him of the key word, the word he would use when the time came.

The shining hands of the great clock on the wall moved, he noted. They moved slowly, but eventually they twitched.

A pretty girl smiled at him. He felt a faint disgust. What were they to him today? Furniture, decoration, nothing more. Some day, perhaps, when he'd had his way he would smile at one of these lush plums.

Miriam called the good ones lush plums, but not for him today. Bah!

The Teller's hands were magic hands; reaching, clutching, sorting, piling and passing out bills. Mostly bills, some change he noted, that shone, and sometimes rolled out toward the edge of the ledge. His fingers twitched.

"Not directly in the line, but of it, the watcher sensed the moment coming closer, and his hands opened and shut, his jaw quivered very slightly, and was still.

His shoulders were thrown back, and no one would have taken him for what he was—weak, really, and tired, and despairing.

The woman next to him moved forward, and he moved too, jostling her by mistake, but her mind was on the bank pass book in her hand. Her turn at the Teller's window was coming.

"Now. Now," he thought. He heard the man in front say, "Thank you" and saw him turn away from the window.

The Teller relaxed a fraction, settling his money and papers into place. Outside the bank the thin man peered in again, at the orderly customers waiting in their quiet rows. Then, he vanished around the corner. The Teller straightened one more pile.

Now. . . .

He leaned forward, one chubby hand thrust through the bars, and grasped at the Teller's neat piles, as he leaned from his mother's arms.

"Lettuce," he crowed, "Lettuce."

Aunt Miriam, at the Teller's window, pushed him down, gently.

"He's a lively little thief," laughed someone in the crowd.

From where I sit . . . by Joe Marsh

How to Handle a Fortune

Some months ago I reported in the Clarion how Mel Bate's uncle died up north, and left him with a tidy fortune.

Naturally, our town was curious to see how Mel would spend it: Traveling around the world . . . getting a new house or car . . . wearing fancy clothes . . . or dining on cold pheasant and champagne . . .?

We can now report, Mel hasn't changed a bit! Drop in on him any night, and you'll find him in his shirt sleeves by the fire, chatting with the Missus, sharing a glass of beer with friends.

From where I sit, Mel has learned the art of handling money—as well as handling people. He don't let cash-in-the-bank push you around any more than you let people push you around. If you like the simple, homey life; companionship and quiet ways; a glass of beer and friendly talk—that's worth a fortune, after all.

LIKE MY DAD SAYS...
"Milk output should guide dairy feeding"

WHEN you think of it, the dairy rule about feeding a cow according to how much she produces makes sense.

You feed a cow to keep her in condition and to give her the materials to put in milk. The more milk a cow gives the more feed she needs. A cow that is giving less than 2 gallons of milk a day doesn't get any grain at our place. When they produce more than 2 gallons of milk a day, we feed 2½ pounds of grain for each gallon of milk.

$2,500 REWARD

It is our belief that any man would gladly give $2,500 for his hand--a hand lost in a corn picker. But it's too late . . . they can't do it. That accident COULD have been avoided.

The families of several men would likely give more than that amount if they could have back a husband or father killed in a corn picker accident that could have been avoided.

BE CAREFUL WITH CORN PICKERS

Corn picking time is here. Don't lose your hand or your life, or otherwise be injured this fall. It doesn't take long to stop for a while.

Don't try to unclog a running corn picker!
Don't take a chance on getting your clothes tangled in the power takeoff!

SHAMROCKS WON TWO CLOSE GAMES AT FERTILE

The Shamrocks gathered in two more wins at Fertile Tuesday night when the Reserves won a close 21 to 20 decision.

The feature game saw Klemme squeeze out a meager three points to win over Fertile 29 to 26 to remain in the undefeated class with two wins, no losses.

GOOD BUILDINGS CUT FEED COSTS
Ventilation, Insulation, Are First Problems Winter Shelter

How much of farmer's high-priced feed is used as "fuel" to keep up body temperatures of his livestock—and how much goes into the production of meat, milk and eggs—depends largely on the kind of livestock quarters he provides.

C. H. Van Vlack, in making this observation to farmers, says ventilation and insulation are the key to winter housing problems. And the two go hand in hand. Livestock buildings are more easily ventilated if they are properly insulated.

Much of the material for insulating walls and roofs or ceilings is available on the farm. For loose-fill type insulation ground corncobs, chopped cornstalks or straw, wood shavings and sawdust can be used. Commercial insulation also are satisfactory.

Insulation

The materials prepared on the farm should be treated to keep out insets and rodents. Good quality waterproof building paper must be placed between the loose-fill insulation and the inside wall to form a vapor seal. Van Vack says this is especially important, since all livestock give off large quanities of moisture in breathing. A 200-pound about ½ gallon of waterdaily. hog, for instance, breathes out A vapor barrier on the warm side of the wall will keep this moisture from condensing.

For well-controlled ventilation, Van Valck says tight construction, good insulation, proper vapor barrier and well-placed and minimum amounts of window area all are important. Two types of ventilating systems can be used—the gravity and forced-draft types.

Ventilation

Of the gravity systems, the flue-type operates to the greatest advantage in high buildings such as dairy barns which have hay mow over the stable.

For low buildings, such as hog and poultry houses, slot-ventilators probably are most satisfactory of the gravity type. Such ventilators consist of slot openings 8 to 10 inches wide, extending the full length or width of the building on the south or east side. The slot should be located just below the plate and covered by a board hinged at the top of the slot. The amount of ventilation is governed by the position of the board which covers the opening.

Mechanically operated fan-type ventilation systems are, of course, the most positive and satisfactory. Such systms should be installed according to the specifications of the companies which manufacture them.

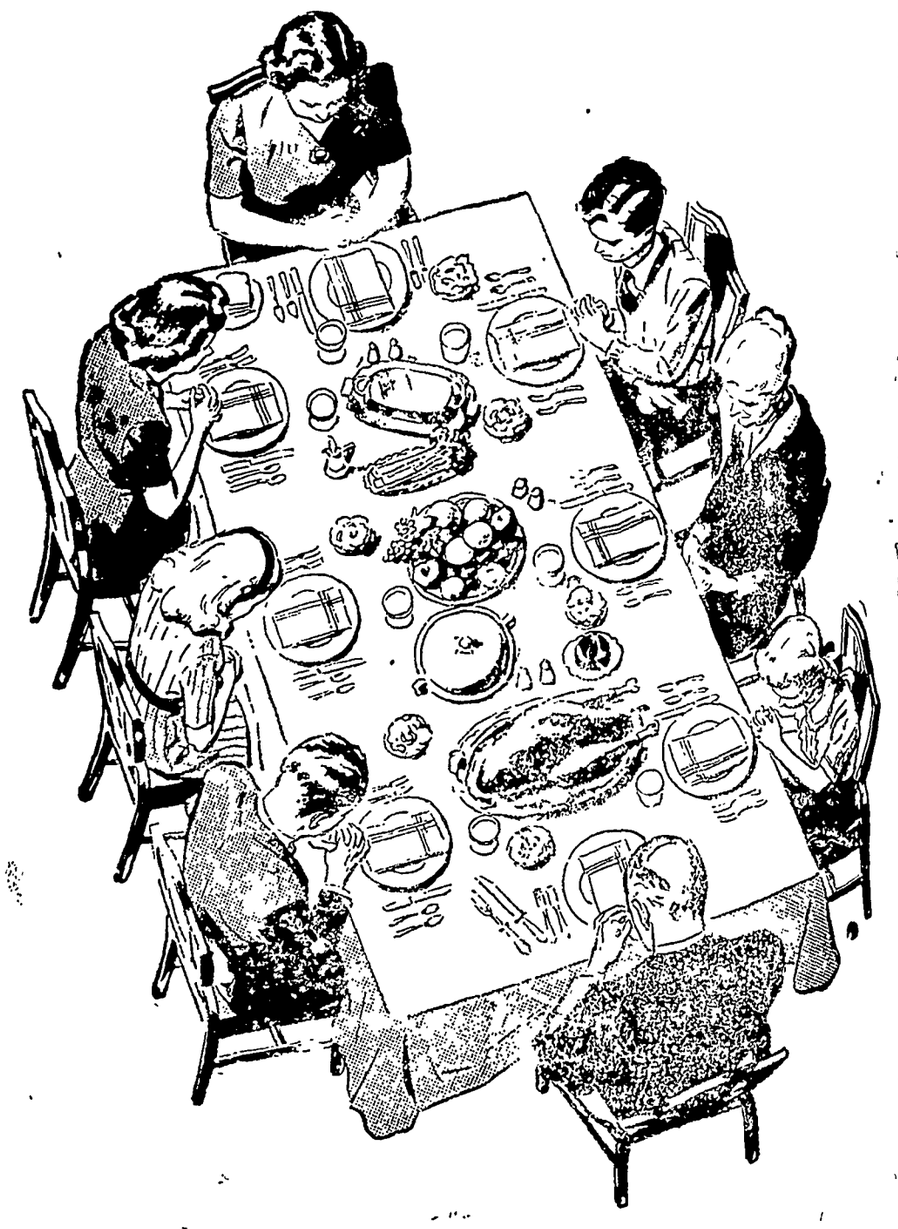
THANKSGIVING

We give Thee thanks for bread this day,
Broken for Thine own sweet sake;
Dear Lord, be merciful, we pray
To those who have no bread to break—
And teach us generosity
To those less fortunate than we.
Amen.



THE grain is garnered from our shining acres, fruit from our rich orchards. After years of war, our land is still ours, unscarred, beneficent. Our children are fed.

Few of us are intimate with hunger. But to the people of many lands, hunger is a constant companion.

In the midst of our bounty, we give thanks. We have much. Surely we can spare a little to share with those who have none. A crust of bread to a well-fed man may be another day's life to a child in Europe.

REPUBLICANS PLAN EXPENDITURE CUTS

The new Republican Congress will go into action with a mandate from the voters to reduce government expenditures and make a start toward balancing the budget. James I. Dolliver, Sixth District Congressman declared at the opening session of the Iowa Taxpayers Association convention.

"The people have served notice on what they want, and it's up to the members of Congress to take heed," Dolliver said.

The people have served no- There are many places in which the taxpayers' mony can be saved. The older members of Congress know where these economies can be effected. The newcomers can be in no doubt about the meaning of the landslide that sent them to Washington.

One of Congress's first tasks should be the elimination of overlapping and unnecessary bureaus. There are many government departments that are an outgrowth of the new deal and the war that could be curtailed or done away with. Other bureaus are overloaded with employment they do not need.

Government extravagance that was part and parcel of the new deal must go quickly, and the cost of government must be drastically cut.

Congressman Dolliver said the new Congress will launch investigations of war contracts that will bring to light some of the corrupt and sordid transactions that are a shame and disgrace; so the people may know what has been going on while the nation was fighting to maintain its freedom.

A cordial invitation is extended to all families within the coverage distance of this newspaper to have pictures taken of all the children. The Klemme Times is sponsoring the contest and want as many as possible to take advantage of the free offer All pictures of children will be published in later issues of this paper. Tell your friends and neighbors, and keep the photographer busy next Wednesday, November 27.

Who is eligible for contest pictures? Everyone under 15 years of age. Beauty will be considered almost the least in judging the pictures. Personality, pleasing looks, and just plain being cute will be given the most consideration. You enter by simply bringing your children to the Community Hall for their free pictures. The hours will be from 12:00 to 6:00 P. M. All children must be accompanied by a parent.

Prizes awarded are as follows: 1st place will receive $15 in pictures, and 2nd place will receive $10.00 in pictures.

If pictures are wanted for gifts or keepsakes, they may be ordered when proofs are submitted a few days later. No high pressure salesmanship will be used. You buy only if you want to do so. So bring in the children on Wednesday, November 27th, Klemme Community Hall, 12:00 noon to 6:00 p. m. One day only.

W. J. BARZ RESIGNS AS COOP. OIL ASSOCIATION MANAGER

Wm. J. Barz, who has managed the Hancock County Cooperative Oil Association, with offices at Garner, since the Company was organized in 1930, tendered his resignation at a recent meeting of the board of directors.

Mr. Barz had set no definite date for his resignation to take effect and will carry on until his successor has been named and trained in the office to take full charge. He will also act as counsellor and general supervisor for whatever time is required.

The Company operates filling stations at Klemme, Garner and Ventura as well as tank wagon service in the surrounding rural districts.

FASTER PRICE DROP FOR CATTLE FED SHORT TIME

Weakness in wholesale dressed meat prices has been reflected in lower prices on "30-day wonders" in the cattle market, reports Francis Kutich, Iowa State College farm economist.

Kutish says now that the meat channels have become more nearly filled, the market is be coming more discriminating. By last week, prices of all cattle had settled down. The drop, however, was more pronounced on the 30-day wonders, with not as much change in cattle which had been fed for a longer period.

As Kutish points out, the fat cattle market influences feeder cattle prices, with uncertainty breeding lower prices. In general, the feeder cattle market was dull during the last of Oct. and early Nov., especially on calves and lighter steers. Heifer calves have been especially hard to move.

When the fat cattle market settles down and becomes more stabilized, Kutish expects an increase in feeder cattle demand. In the meantime, range receipts probably have reached and passed their peak. If weather permits, Kutish expects the marketing season to run a little later than usual this year.

Guild Will Meet

The Women's Guild of the Evangelical and Reformed church will meet November 27. Mrs. Herman Preibe and Mrs. G. A. Goll will serve.

HAS DATE TO KEEP

Pencil in hand, a University of Iowa freshman, Lois McCord, encircles November 25 on her calender to remind her that on this date she can begin buying Christmas Seals from the county unit of the Iowa Tuberculosis Association. The sale will continue until December 25. Lois was impressed by the fight against tuberculosis when she was given a Student Health Service tuberculin test upon university enterance this fall. Christmas Seal funds are used throughtout Iowa to search out and prevent tuberculosis.

Miss McCord is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McCord, 708 W. Seventeenth Street, Davenport. Her campus address is Currier Hall, Iowa City.

SHAMROCKS OFF TO A GOOD START

Drub Woden Five Here 42 To 12

Klemme high school had an easy time downing Woden 42-12 with Center Dean Jacobs connecting with 15 points. Marvin Schmidt aided the winners with 9 points while Lundenberg had 7 for the losers. Woden junior high won 19-17 in a prelimina game.

Klotzbachs Leave

The Times was a bit pre-ma re last week in announcing that Mr. and Mrs. Levi Klotzbach had left town for the winter. They left the first of this week for Monona, Iowa, and from there will drive to Chrishohlm, Minn. to spend the winter with the son, Allen and family at 317 4th Street South.

Mr. Klotzbach has been employed as tinner and plumber the Jacobs Hardware since Mr. Jacobs purchased the busine over 25 years ago. Mr. Klotzbach said he would probably return to Klemme again in the spring after he has enjoyed a nice long vacation.

Soviet Policy Holds Key to Parley

U.S. Awaits Russian Game at Foreign Ministers' Session

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Of course this dateline isn't official. But, since the brand new station where I got off had a nice "United Nations" sign on it in bright Pennsylvania red and gold, I can call it that. The United Nations is really meeting in two different places. The assembly, where I happen to be at this writing, at Flushing, N. Y., and the headquarters of the security council, miles away at Lake Success.

Baukhage

The broadcasting booth in which I sit looks right down on the first row of delegates, the United Kingdom under my chin, United States next, then Uruguay, then Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Senator Austin, the white-haired and dignified head of our delegation, sits on the end seat. Foreign Minister Molotov, who has deputy delegate Vishinsky on his right, the translator, then Ambassador Gromyko on his left, sits about in the middle of his crowd.

The two groups represent clashing ideologies, conflicting ideas. But neither wears a steel helmet or carries a tommy gun. They are in peaceful conflict to avoid conflict.

Force Reds' Hand at Paris

Even the most cynical now admit that the Paris meetings served to reveal what the Russian objective was and temporarily, at least, Byrnes was able to block that objective. It was plain from the beginning that Russia had one negative purpose and that was to prevent any conclusive action regarding the situation in Europe which she could not dictate. Chaos, if not time, fought on her side.

As the negotiations continued, however, slowly out of the mists along the Volga another shape became visible. It was the materialization of one phase of the divide and conquer principle. In this case it was the open bid for German sympathy which Russia hoped would turn the Germans in the American, British and French zones away from those countries and toward Russia. Although it was Russia itself which prevented the economic unification of Germany (plus Communistic influences in France and French fears) it was Russia which suddenly offered the grandiose plan of a unified Germany with a hint at a rectification of the eastern frontier at the expense of Poland. This sensational suggestion burst over Europe and the conference like a thunderbolt, but thanks to the quick action of Byrnes it proved a boomerang. Byrnes knew what to shoot at and he shot.

The Wallace incident which for 24 hours threatened to cut Byrnes' support from under him fortunately had just the opposite effect. Byrnes insisted on repudiation of Wallace by the President and got it. Then Byrnes took the stump, showed that American policy would give Germany everything that the Russian plan would give her and made it clear that the question of the eastern frontier might well be opened with the United States sympathetic toward a revision of the boundary to the advantage of Germany.

Thus, in a lightning flash Russia's policy was illuminated and immediately blocked. The question now remains as to what line of approach the Russians have decided upon, if any. In the meeting of the assembly they tried to continue their obstructionist tactics.

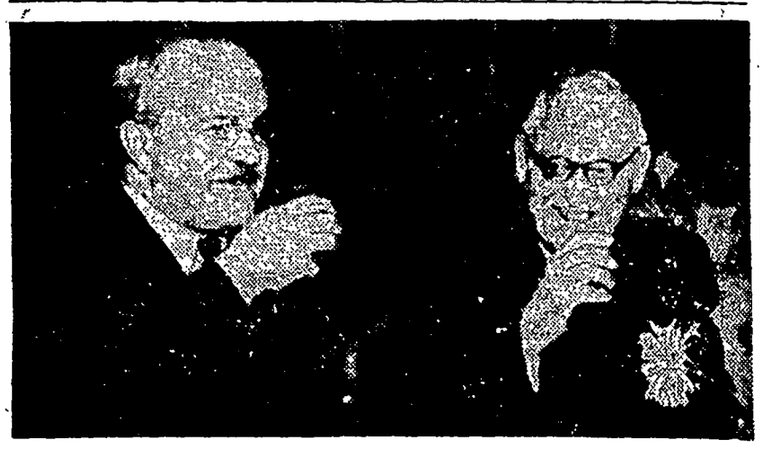
The real test will come in the foreign ministers' conclave at New York.

There is a considerable element in the United States, by no means entirely composed of convinced Communists or their more hesitant fellow-travelers, which believes with former Secretary of Commerce Wallace that the United States can pursue some middle-of-the-road policy and that East and West can thus move together without friction. There is no question, however, that the task that Secretary Byrnes has set out for himself admits of no appeasement.

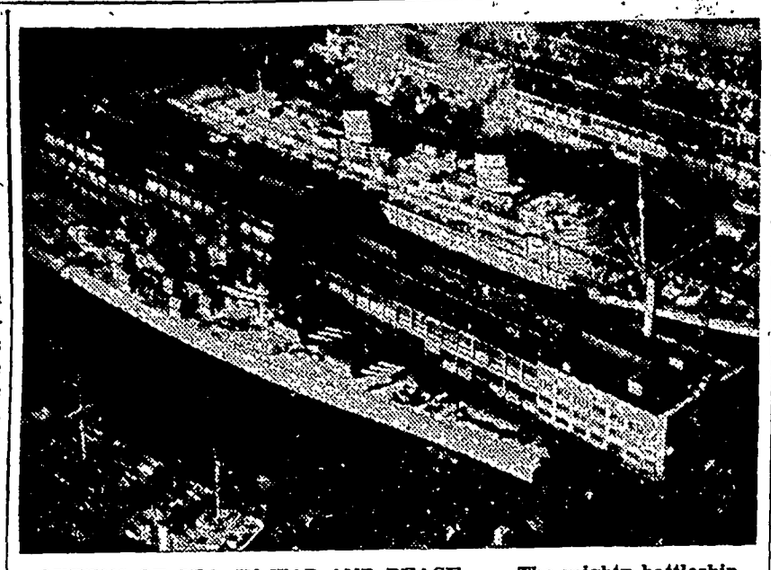
Draw Line on Soviet Expansion

There have been a long series of books by experts and others, telling just what is wrong with our foreign policy and what might have been done or might be done to improve it. William Bullitt tried in a book (already mentioned in these columns) to show that Russia's dreams of empire are nothing new, that the Soviets are merely taking up where the Czars left off. More recently Louis Fischer has come along with his "Great Challenge." Edgar Ansel Mowrer, reviewing this book in the Saturday Review of Literature, says that "if Henry Wallace had read and understood this book, he would not . . . "push a completely unrealistic policy of appeasement of Soviet Russia." Mowrer probably would be the last person to claim that he was prejudiced in favor of the Soviet rule but he is certainly familiar with his subject and his comment is worth consideration. As for Fischer, he laughs at the idea put forth by the Russophiles that all we have to do is to assure Russia of her security, remove her suspicions and fears of democracy, and then she will march shoulder to shoulder with the rest of us. Fischer says Russia's behavior is explained not by fear of attack but by certainty that she will not be attacked. This belief seems to be back of the American action here today. It is to be hoped that during the negotiations at Lake Success, Russia's more specific objectives will be revealed as they were in Paris. Fischer claims that "Russia is not afraid and not suspicious for two clear reasons: The British empire is in decline and on the defensive; America rushed from victory to headlong psychological and military demobilization." If that is true then it must be made very clear to the Soviets that regardless of what we may think about the decline of the British empire and America's sharp reaction against military activity, there is nevertheless a line beyond which Russian expansion will not be allowed to go. It is to be hoped that line already has been reached. The necessity, however, is to make it very clear to both the American public and the Russian government that this point has been reached. Since it is admitted that Russia cannot and does not want to fight, it is not a question of war.

It is expected that the pin-pricking policy by Yugoslavia will continue. At this writing further efforts to obtain control of the Dardanelles are limited to name-calling in the Russian press. It must also be remembered that when the United States put its foot down and Russia saw that it would not pay to go farther, Tito could go into reverse.



V. M. Molotov (left) and Andrei Vishinsky, Russia's two top diplomats, lead Soviet delegation at U. N. parley.



QUEENS OF SEA, IN WAR AND PEACE . . . The mighty battleship USS Missouri, on which the Jap surrender terms were signed, and the giant SS. Queen Elizabeth, which served as a troopship during the war and now is back in service as a luxury passenger liner, are shown in New York harbor.

Violence Marks Strike; New Arms Curb Sought

LABOR: Militant

Police were hard put to maintain order at the Allis-Chalmers tractor plant at Milwaukee, Wis., as striking pickets of the CIO-United Automobile Workers bucked a back to work movement of over 3,000 employees. As violence mounted, the number of returning workers was cut in half.

As militant pickets turned over cars attempting to enter the plant, clashed with returning workers and hurled stones at company windows, county and suburban police were compelled to appeal to Milwaukee authorities for reenforcements. Over 200 of Milwaukee's finest were sent to the plant, but even so the enlarged police detail encountered difficulty holding the strikers in check.

Allis-Chalmers remained adamant against granting UAW a closed shop as the strike entered its seventh month. While agreeing to check off union dues with workers' permission, the company stood out against compromise on compelling employees to join the UAW.

FARM MACHINERY: Huge Demand

Despite heavy production, farm machinery manufacturers will not be able to meet the big demand for equipment for at least another year, according to officials of the National Retail Farm Equipment association meeting in Chicago.

With demand high, dealers have been able to meet only 40 per cent of their orders and manufacturers have not promised great improvement in 1947, it was said. Farmers' increased interest in equipment was said to stem from wartime emphasis on more efficient operations and large accumulation of funds.

FULL SYMPATHY . . . The reason for that delighted grin that illuminates the face of little Robert Turzak, 9, is the unexpected windfall of a holiday that came when teachers in four Rankin, Pa., schools quit work.

U. N.: In Accord

The U. S. and Russia came off all even in their first swap at the United Nations assembly in New York. If anything, the U. S. got the better of the exchange as Delegate Warren R. Austin of Vermont conducted himself with a gentlemanly reserve that contrasted with Foreign Minister Molotov's vitriol.

Warren R. Austin

Molotov was the first to speak, calling for international disarmament, a report on the number of allied troops in non-enemy states, retention of the veto power of the Big Five in the security council. He bitterly attacked U. S. and British imperialists, headed by Winston Churchill, for seeking world domination.

Ignoring Molotov's political charges, Austin entered into a discussion of the proposals raised by the Russian:

If the Russians wanted international disarmament, the U. S. would gladly oblige, provided an adequate system of inspection and other safeguards would be established to guarantee fulfillment of the program. After the last war, Austin recalled, the U. S. accepted the principle of disarmament but remained alone in carrying it out.

If the Russians desired a report on the number of Allied troops in non-enemy states, the U. S. suggested that the check be extended to former enemy countries as well (Such an all conclusive report would provide the world with an adequate estimate of Russian troop strength behind the iron curtain, said by Churchill to total 200 divisions.)

If the Russians opposed a modification of the veto power at this time, the U. S. also was against revision of the U. N. charter. However, the U. S. hoped that the Big Five could get together in the future to modify the veto in the case of peaceful settlement of disputes, although retaining it on the question of applying force.

FAO: U. S. Backs Down

Having heartily endorsed a plan of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization at Copenhagen, Denmark, for distribution of food to needy countries at bargain prices, the U. S. repudiated its position as an FAO commission met in Washington, D. C., to work out details of the project.

Under the plan, FAO would have purchased food from surplus producing countries out of a revolving fund contributed by member nations. When the world price for food would have gone above a predetermined level, then FAO would have sold its reserves to needy buyers at the lower figure.

EVERYTHING BUT TALK

Customer Is Always Right— In Future 'Push-Button' Era

By AL JEDLICKA
WNU Staff Writer

The customer is always right!

Stubborn clerks who frequently have questioned the boss' insistence on the truth of that age-old assertion soon will be deprived of that opportunity. In fact, in the "push-button" era which lies ahead there will be no one to dispute the customer's authority to make final decision.

A preview of the multiple self-service gadgets which are destined to become commonplace in the "push-button" era was afforded by representatives of the vending machine industry when the National Automatic Merchandising association met recently in Chicago.

Self-Service Supreme.

By dropping a coin into a device, the customer will be able to fill his tank with gas, obtain change for a dime, quarter or dollar, sizzle his own hot dogs and hamburgers, pop his own corn, obtain a railroad ticket, take out an insurance policy, buy packaged groceries, have his shoes shined, and, heaven knows, what next!

While the U. S. was far behind Europe in coin vending machinery before the war, this country promises to forge far ahead in use of such devices in the future, especially since the bigger consumer outlets are considering their advantages as economical and efficient merchandisers.

As manufacturers have perfected the machines, operators have found them to be quick, low-cost and silent salesmen. Indeed, there is nobody to argue with the customer about being right!

No More Expenses.

Motorists should be especially interested in the new automatic gas pump, scheduled for trial installation around the first of the year. This device was designed for stations that close in the evening and do not afford 24-hour service to customers. Any farmer coming into town late; any tourist stretching the last gallon of gas at night, or any beau confronted with an emptying tank after a long spin through the countryside, should find the automatic pump a welcome oasis. Drop in the money, pick up the hose and, presto! the fuel gurgles in.

With vending machines coming into more general use for a wide variety of items, the automatic changer provides a convenient means of furnishing customers with needed coins. At present, two such machines will make change for a dime and quarters in nickels and for a dollar in any combination.

The automatic hot dog and hamburger vendor already has proven its worth and promises to obtain wider acceptance. After the insertion of the coin, the weenie or hamburger is roasted before one's very eyes through the application of electronics. In all, the operation takes 15 seconds.

The automatic corn popping machine is a more recent invention that works with equal facility. With the device now in use in the East, manufacturers hope to extend operations to the Midwest, said to be the greatest consumer of the item. Not only is the corn popped in this device, but also the customer can regulate the amount of butter he desires.

Boon to Commuters.

In use in Sweden for almost 30 years, the automatic railroad ticket machine now employed by the Pennsylvania railroad in New York has proved a boon to travelers accustomed to fidget in long lines before ticket windows as precious time commenced to tick out. A panel above the machine provides instructions for use. Then, the commuter inserts his money and receives a fully stamped ducat for his destination.

The use of an automatic vending machine to purvey insurance represents the last word in furnishing prospective buyers with a convenient means for taking out a policy. To be sure, the investor ordinarily has to be sold before making use of the machine, but its presence in some convenient locality spares him the effort of getting in touch with a salesman to close the deal.

When procuring a policy through the vending machine, the purchaser inserts enough money to pay his first premium, receiving a receipt and a contract. All he has to do then, is to fill out the contract and send it into the company.

No Snippy Clerks.

Use of automatic frozen food machines has withstood tests in big chain outlets and with the trend toward self-service marts there are prospects for increasing installation of these vendors. Indeed, Nathan Cummings, president of the Consolidated Grocers Inc., who is considered one of the sharpest food merchandisers in the industry, declared it is possible to foresee completely automatic grocery supermarkets.

Men who don't look at their own shoes, and don't expect others to, should be pleased with the automatic shoe shiner, which relieves them of the onerous task of stretching and straining to tidy up the brogans. Because the machine is a tricky little device, they can shine their shoes oftener, too. After inserting a coin, the customer turns a dial to the color of his shoes, twists another one to adjust the mechanism to his size, and then the brushes whirr around to do the job.

O tempora! O mores!

Pilfered Articles Result in Career

ORLANDO, FLA. — Sheets stolen from his mother, a few old plumbing fixtures and other scraps started Raymon Parker, nationally-known glider pilot, on his career. With the pilfered sheets and discarded articles, Parker at the age of 15 had built, flown and crashed his first glider.

In the interval since then he has become one of the world's outstanding glider pilots. He holds one of the nation's six Golden Cs, highest attainment in soaring, and this year's distance record.

Parker now is stationed at Pine Castle army air field with the Soaring Society of America flying gliders in the Thunderstorm project in which the army and navy are seeking scientific thunderstorm data.

Recalling that first flight as a youth, Parker said the glider, which had a 32-foot wing span, soared at 1,000 feet with the aid of a California thermal for 90 minutes. It was towed off by a 1916 model car.

"That was my first and last accident," said the expert. Parker also paints and makes wood miniatures.

Crops Supplanting Dogies in Arizona

TUCSON, ARIZ. — Long regarded as a desert and the domain of cows, dogies and cowboys, Arizona rapidly is becoming one of the best truck gardens in the nation through the magic of irrigation.

The state's output of vegetables last year netted farmers 38 million dollars, reports Dr. George Barr, agricultural economist of University of Arizona agricultural experiment station.

As a producer of revenue, the romantic cattle industry has been shoved back into a poor second place with its total of 29 million dollars in 1945, Dr. Barr says.

Although generally considered Arizona's biggest agricultural crop, cotton now lags far behind one vegetable — head lettuce. Cotton lint and cottonseed last year produced 17 million dollars; head lettuce, more than 20 million dollars.

The infant truck farming industry to date has been confined to two comparatively small areas in Salt river valley near Phoenix and Yuma valley. Both are well irrigated.

'SQUARE DEAL'

Small Business Seeks New Unit

WASHINGTON. — Organization of a "strong, integrated government agency" to take care of all government activities concerned with small business is the objective of a campaign launched by the American Association of Small Business. The new agency would supplant the present divided authority resting in the department of commerce and Reconstruction Finance corporation.

"In urging the immediate introduction of the needed legislation to set up such a small business agency—and to do it directly after the new congress shall have convened—our association is seeking only a proper rearrangement of already existing and long-deferred programs of government in behalf of small business," Robert R. Hellyer, Philadelphia, association president, declared.

Overlook Small Business.

Financial phases of the government program for aiding small business, with special emphasis on helping the discharged veteran get a start during the postwar era, are concentrated in RFC's blanket participation program whereby the government guarantees up to 90 per cent of private bank loans to small business men.

An alternate financing plan, advanced by Marriner E. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve board of governors, involves establishment under the reserve system of an over-all underwriting fund to guarantee loans to small business through member banks.

Admit Government Link.

In calling for a centralized small business agency, Hellyer said that small business "has long been aware of the fact that no longer can a man succeed completely cut off from his government."

He charged that Supreme court decisions in the last 50 years "have enabled big business to be the big bull rather than the big brother."

Small business wants no governmental "wardship" or "protection," but rather a "square deal, legally and morally," Hellyer concluded. "Such is our rightful position in our economy and such is our position before our government."

Invents Lock Picker—Not for Sale

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. — After 18 years' experimentation, William Miskill, Chattanooga locksmith, has perfected a portable electric lock picker.

Miskill claims his device will open the average door lock in a matter of seconds and would be a potential bonanza for housebreakers and car thieves.

The lock picker never will be put on sale, Miskill says, as he's a locksmith and it's to his interest to preserve locks.

The device consists of a long steel needle connected to some coils which cause the needle to vibrate when electric current is applied. The locksmith inserts the needle and a tension tool into the lock, then presses the trigger. The needle vibrates and, aided by the tension tool, forces the lock tumbler up and the door opens.

ANOTHER STRIKE WAVE

WASHINGTON. — Only two labor leaders have let the cat out of the bag but around Christmas the nation will face its greatest strike wave in history.

Most labor leaders are not talking about this before election, for fear of hurting the chances of their particular congressional candidates. Not so John L. Lewis, head of the Mine Workers and Walter Reuther, head of the powerful CIO Auto Workers.

Despite the fact that Lewis had demanded the end of meat control and wage stabilization; despite the fact that the AFL went on record for the end of all controls, AFL and CIO leaders held a series of secret huddles after Truman's meat speech to decide on a new wage policy. Most of them agreed to soft pedal strikes for the moment and see what happened to the price structure.

However, Lewis, who wants to be president of AFL, and Reuther, who wants to be president of the CIO, would not hold back.

SPANISH WAR SURPLUS

As if there weren't enough headaches in disposing of surplus goods from this war, War Assets administration recently had to unload some ancient horse-drawn ambulances used in the Spanish-American war.

The problem finally was solved by removing the wheels and painting the bodies in delicate pastel tints. Presto — the relics were converted into gay cabanas and bathing shelters for seashore resorts. They sold like hotcakes.

CHURCHILL FUMES

Winston Churchill is getting more and more irked over reports that he is the member of the Big Three chiefly responsible for sabotaging a democratic peace.

Originally, Churchill had planned to take plenty of time writing his memoirs, spinning them out in three volumes to be finished about three years hence. Now, however, friends say he wants to put out a quick short volume to answer critics. This book would deal with some of the Big Three conferences, especially Teheran.

Churchill's critics have blamed him for the spheres of influence agreed upon at Teheran, following which Russia took over most of the Balkans, while England took over Greece.

Churchill's friends, on the other hand, claim that actually he was vigorously opposed to these spheres of influence and threw the Atlantic charter in Roosevelt's face. Stalin, however, replied that Britain could have her own sphere of influence, and in the end Roosevelt cast his weight with Stalin.

Whether this or Elliott Roosevelt's version is true, remains to be seen. However, it is interesting that the Harry Hopkins inspired stories in the Saturday Evening Post immediately after Teheran dwelt heavily on the fact that Roosevelt decided to cast his lot with the Russians. It correctly interpreted, that decision has now backfired.

"Gee, it's great to be home again, Mr. President," said Miss Smith once she got to the White House, gloves and all. "You know, I am a native Washingtonian."

"Well, I'm mighty glad to hear that," grinned Truman. "It's a rare occasion when you find a native Washingtonian in Washington any more. They tell me about everybody here is from Missouri."

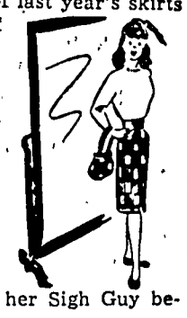
Reet, Pleats — They're sewing down the pleats of last year's skirts in the town of Oakland, Calif., to make them slim and slender. Then they open up the side seams a few inches from the hemline to make slits. After all, a girl has to move quickly in order to catch up with her Sigh Guy between classes!



Sew Slender — They can't buy skirts narrow enough so they're making their own in Long Beach, Calif. The favorite "peg" pattern is a stright job with a slit up the center front to allow for rug cutting. Lots of girls make overarm handbags out of the leftover materials.

$2,500 REWARD

It is our belief that any man would gladly give $2,500 for his hand--a hand lost in a corn picker. But it's too late . . . they can't do it. That accident COULD have been avoided.

The families of several men would likely give more than that amount if they could have back a husband or father killed in a corn picker accident that could have been avoided.

BE CAREFUL WITH CORN PICKERS

Corn picking time is here. Don't lose your hand or your life, or otherwise be injured this fall. It doesn't take long to stop for a while. Don't try to unclog a running corn picker! Don't take a chance on getting your clothes tangled in the power takeoff!

SHAMROCKS WON TWO CLOSE GAMES AT FERTILE

The Shamrocks gathered in two more wins at Fertile Tuesday night when the Reserves won a close 21 to 20 decision.

The feature game saw Klemme squeeze out a meager three points to win over Fertile 29 to 26 to remain in the undefeated class with two wins, no losses.

GOOD BUILDINGS CUT FEED COSTS

Ventilation, Insulation, Are First Problems Winter Shelter

How much of farmer's high-priced feed is used as "fuel" to keep up body temperatures of his livestock—and how much goes into the production of meat, milk and eggs—depends largely on the kind of livestock quarters he provides.

C. H. Van Vlack, in making this observation to farmers, says ventilation and insulation are the key to winter housing problems. And the two go hand in hand. Livestock buildings are more easily ventilated if they are properly insulated.

Much of the material for insulating walls and roofs or ceilings is available on the farm. For loose-fill type insulation ground corncobs, chopped cornstalks or straw, wood shavings and sawdust can be used. Commercial insulation also are satisfactory.

Insulation

The materials prepared on the farm should be treated to keep out insets and rodents. Good quality waterproof building paper must be placed between the loose-fill insulation and the inside wall to form a vapor seal. Van Vack says this is especially important, since all livestock give off large quanities of moisture in breathing. A 200-pound about ½ gallon of waterdaily. hog, for instance, breathes out A vapor barrier on the warm side of the wall will keep this moisture from condensing.

For well-controlled ventilation, Van Valck says tight construction, good insulation, proper vapor barrier and well-placed and minimum amounts of window area all are important. Two types of ventilating systems can be used—the gravity and forced-draft types.

Ventilation

Of the gravity systems, the flue-type operates to the greatest advantage in high buildings such as dairy barns which have hay mow over the stable.

For low buildings, such as hog and poultry houses, slot-ventilators probably are most satisfactory of the gravity type. Such ventilators consist of slot openings 8 to 10 inches wide, extending the full length or width of the building on the south or east side. The slot should be located just below the plate and covered by a board hinged at the top of the slot. The amount of ventilation is governed by the position of the board which covers the opening.

Mechanically operated fan-type ventilation systems are, of course, the most positive and satisfactory. Such systms should be installed according to the specifications of the companies which manufacture them.

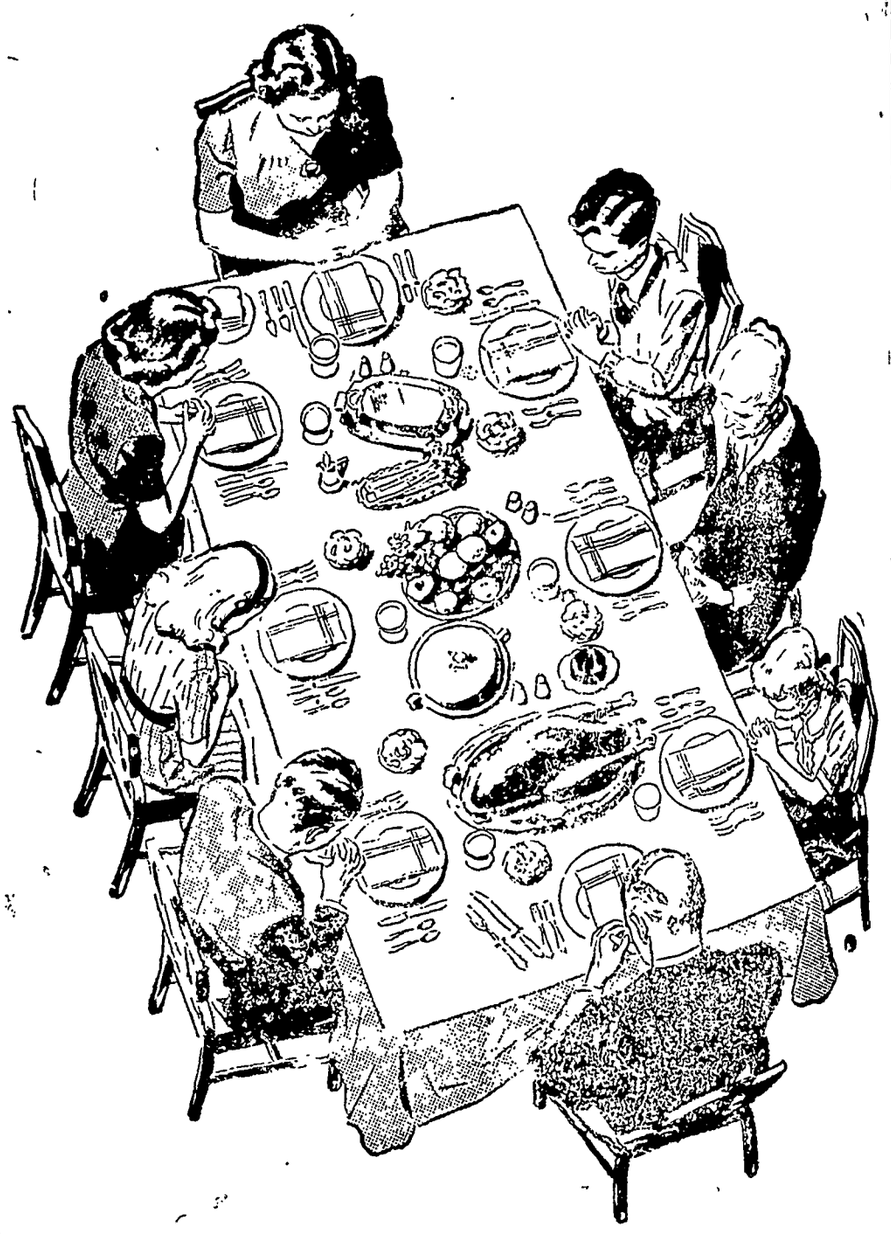
THANKSGIVING

We give Thee thanks for bread this day,
Broken for Thine own sweet sake;
Dear Lord, be merciful, we pray
To those who have no bread to break—
And teach us generosity
To those less fortunate than we.

Amen.



THE grain is garnered from our shining acres, fruit from our rich orchards. After years of war, our land is still ours, unscarred, beneficent. Our children are fed.

Few of us are intimate with hunger. But to the people of many lands, hunger is a constant companion.

In the midst of our bounty, we give thanks. We have much. Surely we can spare a little to share with those who have none. A crust of bread to a well-fed man may be another day's life to a child in Europe.

First And Second Grade News

Miss Halfwassen

The second grade had a story book festival, Wednesday afternoon. The pupils read their favorite Reader. They read aloud their story on make- believe radio program and their audience were the first grade pupils. The stories read were:

Little Rooster and the Sun, Fonda Beier.
Baby Rabbit's Name, Ronald Trampel.
Little Bear and the Honey, Janice Stokesbary.
A Pie for Billy Goat, Gary Baack.
The Candy Tree, Barbara Thompson.
Bunny Rabbit Makes a Home, Berleen Bridges.
Little Bears Wish, Berevly Christiance.
The Circus Parade, Martin Brinkman.
Mrs. Goose Has a Party, Sharleen Swanson, Eva Thieman, Jimmy Karsjens, and Robert Larson.

Thursday morning in Reading Class the second grade dramatized "Mrs. Goose Has A Party".

The B Reading Class in first grade have started on their third Pre-Primer, "We Come and Go."

Fifth And Sixth Grade News

Mrs. H. G. Voetberg

We enjoyed a program of music in the gym Thursday afternoon.

In sixth grade language we are learning about subjects and predicates. We've discovered that sometimes they are rather difficult to find.

The fifth grade language class had a contest Thursday. Our lesson was the use of an index. The result of the contest showed us that it was more difficult than we thought to get a perfect score.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News

Clara Smith

On Friday we all wrote tests. We hope our scores will show that we followed directions carefully.

We made pencil drawings to represent books we like for Book Week in our art class Friday. Some of us are showing improvement in drawing.

The seventh grade in beginning the study of "Treasure Island" in literature while the eighth grade has just completed Poe's story, "The Gold Bug."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

by Helen Suckow and Alice Meyer.

This week of school has proved to be most interesting, at least for most of us.

Monday was Armistice Day and the school took part in the program held at the Communtiy Hall. The mixed chorus sang "God Bless America" and "Remember Thy Creator."

We have often heard it said that variety is the spice of life, so Thursday afternoon a little spice in the form of a Negro Quartette. The four boys were from Rust College, Holly Springs, Mississippi. The gave us some very nice singing, both of the religious and humorous types. They were very good and some of the girls found it interesting to get their autograph.

Cheer laeders for this year's basketball season were chosen Wednesday. The first game was played here Thursday night and the cheer leaders were Emily Johnson, Ardel Rosendahl, Ruth Kurtz, and Alice Meyer. You did "swell", kids. Keep it up!

Who won the game between Klemme and Woden? We did, of course. Everyone knows that, or should. However, the first game was won by Woden, the score being 17 to 19. The score of the first team was 42 to 12 in favor of Klemme. It was a good game and everyone seemed to enjoy it.

In Biology, the sophomores have been studying about sponges. Mr. Rector required all of us to draw a picture of what we thought a sponge looked like. We also raised amaeba and paramecium and are now studying these under the misroscope.

In Literature we have been studying essays; both the light familiar essay and the informative. We seem to injoy the informative type best as it gives us information as well as a good story.

In Geometry we are studying on converse theorems, transversals, and parallel lines, and different kinds of angles. We are discussing "The Dark Ages" in our history class and we have just finished a study of the fall of the Roman Empire.

The Seniors have been busy this week showing off their class rings. We all agree they are very nice looking.

Miss Harriet Oxley, our health nurse from Garner was a visitor at school one day this week. She was making a check of our recent vaccinations.

A wolf is a member of the male species who has devoted the best leers of his life to women.

IN THESE U.S.

Farmer Aids Veterans in Home Crisis

MADISON, WIS. — Wilson Wyatt may retain his title of national housing administrator, but to Vernon Kahl goes the distinction of housing expediter for war veterans at University of Wisconsin.

Through the efforts of Kahl, farmer near the small town of Verona, near Madison, 27 World War II veterans and their wives now are attending the university because they have a place to live—either in Kahl's home or in the 22-apartment building he completed in less than two weeks.

Ensconced in his own large house, with a mere five extra bedrooms, Kahl paid little attention to the housing shortage. Then he heard a radio plea from students unable to find rooms in this overcrowded university city.

Spurred to action, Kahl went to the student housing bureau to offer his five extra bedrooms for student use. A few minutes later he had no extra bedrooms to his name. Before leaving the office, he asked the official in charge if everybody had been taken care of yet.

The answer was a mild shock to Kahl, but again it set him to thinking. He recalled the pile of rafters he had laid aside for a machine shop and then scouted around for other lumber. Within two weeks he had completed an apartment building containing quarters for 22 families.

Shortage of materials posed a few difficulties, Kahl admits, but neighborhood co-operation in the form of grading, carpenter work, borrowed furniture and many other hard-to-get commodities enabled him to complete the task.

Armless Mother Manipulates Toes To Change Diapers

TULSA, OKLA. — Although armless since birth, Mrs. James Corbett Beach has no fears as she embarks on the myriad tasks of motherhood.

The handicapped woman, who utilizes her toes as fingers, fondled her five-day-old daughter and declared confidently that she would get along "just as well as any mother with two arms and hands."

To prove her assertion, she demonstrated to amazed nurses that she could manipulate a diaper as well as an expert; opening and closing the pins with her toes.

The baby is perfectly normal. "Isn't she cute?" the mother beamed, tweaking the infant under the chin with a toe. On that same toe—the second on her left foot—was a wedding ring.

Mrs. Beach, now 23, was married five years ago shortly after her graduation from high school. Despite her handicap, she has learned to drive a car and to play the guitar. During summer vacations, she has appeared at fairs in New York, San Francisco and Dallas.

Police Chief Blushes

Veteran Will Train Dogs for Children

LONG BEACH, CALIF. — Because he believes a trained companion animal is a child's greatest protection, Carl F. Eggleston, former dog trainer in the marine corps, has opened a free school for dogs of all breeds. Eggleston will train the dogs to be obedient playmates and guardians for children. Before the war he trained dogs for show and special duty.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

AIRPORT CHATTER

Dedication ceremonies for the Winnebago county airport at Oshkosh, Wis., were held October 13, with Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of army air forces, scheduled as featured speaker. . . . Ex-servicemen and women taking flight instruction under the G.I. bill have organized a G.I. Flight club at Seattle, with 50 charter members. The club has purchased two "grasshopper" planes for use of members. . . . Kremmling, Colo., dedicated its new city airport as one of the highlights of the community's annual rodeo and horse show. A breakfast for visiting flyers opened the day's festivities. . . Ed Rowley, war veteran of Eugene, Ore., has solved his post-war job problem by starting a new industry—"Flowers with Wings." He sends Oregon's famous field flowers to all parts of the United States in special containers by commercial airliner, the flowers arriving "with the dew still on the petals."

When members of the Ohio State football team flew from Columbus, Ohio, to Los Angeles for their game with Southern California, only one of the 33 squad members got air sick. Lone victim, Coach Paul Bixler reported, was "a parachuter who made 23 leaps during the war."

FLY CATTLE HERD SOUTH

Purchased from farms in Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota, a herd of 82 blooded Holstein cattle are being flown to Colombia, So. Amer., in a series of aerial freight shipments. Originating in Milwaukee, the flights require 32 hours' flying time, compared to the three weeks required in rail and boat shipping.

Because of the short travel time and proper handling, the cattle do not become travel sick. In rail and sea shipments, shippers had to anticipate a certain loss because travel sickness was common, often proving fatal to the stock.

Eleven heifers and bulls were included in the first shipment, made by Willis Air Service, Inc., an eastern air freight concern which has made several similar flights to Colombia this year.

NEW FLYING TECHNIQUE

To enable trans-Atlantic pilots to take advantage of the new technique in long range navigation known as "pressure pattern flying," weather information broadcasts have been initiated over the Civil Aeronautics administration station WSY in New York. The technique consists of determining the shortest flight time path to the destination by a series of late accurate reports from other pilots flying the route. Advantage is taken of favorable winds around pressure areas.

ord-shattering Crops Boost m Production to New Peak international crises and domestic s have been dominating the news nerican farmers have been rolling f the most impressive production history during the current year. roduction for 1946 is setting an all-k, 2½ per cent above the record 1942, best previous year, and 28 above the average for the prewar 935-39, a summary compiled by de- of agriculture discloses. Wheat and corn production soared to new high marks, followed by record-shattering harvests of tobacco, peaches, pears, plums, truck crops and potatoes. Other crops have come through in good measure, with exception of cotton, rye, broomcorn, dry beans and pecans.

Livestock production continued high, despite critical feed shortages in mid-year.

Taking agricultural production as a whole, 1946 may stand for a long time as the farmer's biggest year, the agriculture department concludes.

tory of the farmer's big year, as told in the pictures:

RECORDS are being throughout the nation as nd up the biggest year e's history. This scene r storing corn in tem- bs is being repeated the grain producing farmers gather in the ed crop ever grown in y.

Y FOR THE FUTURE. he help of this big year, e in better position to face ahead. Good feed crops o maintain livestock pro- high levels and savings 0 billion dollars provide a r poor years or farm im-st Virginia farm, with its in easy-to-work contoured ers a pattern for the fu- h his farm's soil enriched and green manure, and otected from costly ero- perator has the assurance um efficiency and mini- duction costs. As of July acres had been laid out in contoured strip cropping, with plans ready for an additional 2,250,000 acres. Two-thirds of all U. S. farms are actively participating in 1,675 soil conservation districts.

4 GOOD WEATHER favored the farmer in his fight for big crops. An early spring sent crops off to a flying start. Ideal conditions, illustrated in this summer scene on a New England farm, often helped the farmer at critical times, such as haying and grain harvest.

Little wheat was lost because of wet weather during harvest or after, but sudden ripening of grain over large areas produced more grain at one time than elevators or railroads could handle. Drouth did strike some areas, notably New Mexico and Arizona, and prolonged rain interfered with planting of grain sorghums. The weather wasn't perfect, but it was generally better than 1945 and proved a big factor in a record crop.

5 BIG BUYERS. Record production and good prices have created the greatest farm purchasing power of all time. From total cash receipts of more than 23 billion dollars this year, farmers will realize a net income of more than 14½ billion dollars, or more than three times the net income of 1940.

Like city folks, farmers find goods scarce and prices above prewar levels. As he shops for new shoes, this farmer finds proof that the average price of farm work shoes rose from $2.53 for the 1935-39 period to $4.49 on June 15. Prices received by farmers for their goods had doubled meanwhile.

6 MORE HELP, provided by returning veterans and war plant workers, made the job easier for the farmer, but everyone had to work hard, early and late, to handle the bumper output.

Typical of the veteran's return to the land, this ex-army sergeant and his wife, former army nurse, bought an Alabama farm with the help of an FSA loan. By mid-year 1,045,000 veterans were working on farms representing about three-fourths of the number of farm workers who entered military service before July 1, 1945.

7 TWO ON ONE means good corn and accounts for this North Carolina grower's pride in a promising crop resulting from use of hybrid seed corn and contoured field. In the nation as a whole, two out of every three acres this year were in high-yielding hybrids, accounting for 20 per cent increase in corn yields by department of agriculture estimates.

In some sections of the corn belt, hybrids were planted on 100 per cent of the acreage, boosting Iowa's corn yield to a phenomenal 61 bushels per acre Better varieties of other crops, developed by agricultural scientists, helped push production to new records. Improved fertilizers and new cultural methods also boosted yields.

8 NEW TOOLS also helped to swell 1946 production. Expansion by REA co-operatives brought electricity to additional thousands of farms and made daily chores like milking (above) faster and easier. On July 1, nearly 53 per cent of all U. S. farms received central station electric service and new customers were being connected to REA lines at the rate of 250,000 per year. Farmers also found DDT and chemical weed killers potent weapons against old enemies.

Production of new farm machinery during the first half of the year fell below the war-limited production of a year earlier, forcing most farmers to get along with old machines. Tires, fuel and seed were in fair supply, but containers, steel products and lumber continued scarce. Farmers used more fertilizer in their drive for maximum production.

Man's 'Best Friend' Causes Most Farm Accidents

bbin may be man's best t he doesn't act like it. orses are involved in more on American farms than animal, including the bull, rman Young of the Mayo chester, Minn., told dele- he farm safety section of nal Safety council's 34th afety congress in Chicago. farms is full of peril, Dr. serted, pointing to a nine- vey of farm accidents, er joint auspices of Mayo the safety council, which disclosed that 38,700 farmers were killed at work during the period. About 133,200 farm residents were killed accidentally and 100,125,000 non-fatal farm home and work accidents also occurred in that time, he reported.

"The farmer usually is his own boss or employs only a few men, probably carries no accident insurance, and is not as conscious of the need for safety measures as those employed in other industries," Dr. Young said.

Accidents take an enormous toll every year, with victims not limited to farmers, delegates to the safety congress were told.

Statistics show that there's an accidental death every 5½ minutes, a traffic death every 18½ minutes, an occupational death every 33 minutes and a home death every 15½ minutes.

National Safety council is a non-profit, non-commercial corporation supported mainly by industrial concerns. It has 25 separate sections to deal with safety in every field.

PAUL IN ATHENS AND CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:22-28a; 18:1-4; I Corinthians 1:22-25.

MEMORY SELECTION — For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.—I Corinthians 3:11.

History repeats itself, in spiritual things as well as in secular events The experiences of Paul at Athens and Corinth are peculiarly applicable to our day, for here he encountered the very problems which face (and have apparently stopped) the church today

The cities were not far apart in miles, and they were both pagan, but they differed widely in their cultural and commercial development

Athens was the home of a godless culture. Corinth was a prosperous commercial center known throughout the world for grossly licentious living.

What did the gospel accomplish in such cities? We shall soon see

I. Godless Intellectuality Meets the Gospel (Acts 17:22-28a).

Paul was alone in Athens. He had been separated from his companions Silas and Timothy (Acts 17:14), and was to await them at Athens. While he waited he looked the city over and found it wholly given to idolatry (v. 16). This was no idle observation of a scientific mind, for it caused Paul's spirit to stir in him.

It is a bad sign when a professed Christian can live in the presence of sin and false worship and not be deeply moved by it.

Paul did something about it! He went into the great daily gatherings of philosophers and gave them some solid Christian philosophy to work on. They were curious to know more, and when the opportunity arose, Paul preached the sermon on Mars Hill.

He found them superstitiously religious, but religion does not save. They even feared lest they had forgotten some god, so one altar was "to the unknown God" (v. 23). This gave Paul his opportunity, for he declared the one true God—unknown to them—as the answer to their question.

The intellectual felt superior and had an idea that God needed him, a kind of snobbery which is as current in 1946 as it was in Paul's day. How effectively he disposed of that attitude appears in verses 24 and 25. They needed God, and without him they could not draw a breath!

Moreover, the pagan intellectual then as now would swell with pride as he thought of the race and people to whom he belonged. They were superior — a master race. Paul declares God's truth that all men are of one blood, and that the nations are in his hands (v. 26).

What they had to do, and what the godless intellectuals of our day need to do, is to seek God in humble repentance and faith; then lives can become fine and noble and useful (vv. 27, 32-34).

II. Sophisticated Immorality Meets the Gospel (Acts 18:1-4).

To Corinth Paul came (evidently still alone) without friends or funds Like all well-bred Jewish boys, he knew a trade. He was a sail maker and tent maker. Rather than have the ungodly men of Corinth hinder his preaching by the criticism that he was doing it for money, he supported himself.

The minister who is eager for rich financial return, and who is willing to accept the gifts of the ungodly that his work may prosper, has closed the door for his testimony to many who do not believe. In fact, one wonders whether he has any real testimony to give.

In this wicked city, given over to vice and fleshly pleasure, Paul made his way to the synagogue and began to preach Christ. He reasoned and persuaded and won some for the Lord as he continued with them for a year and a half (Acts 18:11).

Paul's letter to the Corinthians reveals the struggle of the believers at Corinth to maintain moral standards and spiritual warmth in such a city, but it also clearly indicates that the gospel of Christ is "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth" (Rom. 1:16), even in the midst of sin and corruption.

III. The Gospel Meets Sin—and Is Victorious (I. Cor. 1:22-25).

The wisdom of this world—for which Athens stood in a special way—becomes foolish in the eyes of men, as it is already in the sight of God, when it stands up against the gospel (read vv. 18-21).

The preaching of the cross, which looks foolish to the worldling (v. 23), is the wisdom and the power of God, and by it men are saved.

Whether Jew or Gentile, whether seeking signs or wisdom, whether "up-and-out" by way of pagan intellectualism or "down-and-out" by way of immorality—no matter what man's race, or his problem—the answer is in the gospel which we are privileged to teach and preach, for it is the gospel of "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God" to all who are called by him.

Public Loses $200,000,000 Year by Absentmindedness

The American public loses approximately $200,000,000 a year by leaving, through death or absentmindedness, real estate unwilled and without legal claimants, unclaimed bank balances, and stocks and bonds in safety-deposit vaults as well as securities which their owners believe to be worthless because the companies have ceased to exist, says Collier's.

But strangest of all are the unclaimed winnings at race tracks which, in 1945, in New York State alone, totaled more than $200,000.

Why Bert Won First Prize

Folks weren't surprised when Bert Childers won first prize for his corn at the county fair.

Yet the judges admit it wasn't just because Bert had the finest ears of corn. He knew how to display them: neatly arranged, with the husks cleanly trimmed, and the booth white and spotless.

"Trimmings" sure make a difference no matter what you're offering—as Andy Botkin, keeper of the Garden Tavern, well knows. Andy doesn't just sell good beer. He sells it in a place that's clean and attractive ... in nice surroundings that belong with the enjoyment of a wholesome beverage of moderation.

And Andy, of course, is a wholehearted supporter of "Self Regulation." That's the system by which the Brewers and tavern keepers themselves make sure that taverns selling beer are clean and orderly.

From where I sit, people like Andy also rate a "First prize." Not just for the quality of the product—but for the "trimmings" too.

He sells it in a place that's clean and attractive ... in nice surroundings that belong with the enjoyment of a wholesome beverage of moderation.

And Andy, of course, is a wholehearted supporter of "Self Regulation." That's the system by which the Brewers and tavern keepers themselves make sure that taverns selling beer are clean and orderly.

From where I sit, people like Andy also rate a "First prize." Not just for the quality of the product—but for the "trimmings" too.

ROCKFORD EDITOR HEADS PRESS CLUB

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson Is Secretary-Treasurer

At a meeting of the Hawkeye Press Club held at the Green Mill Cafe at Mason City Saturday evening, Earl Houdek, publisher of the Rockford Register, was elected president for the coming year.

Gordon Aasgaard, of the Lake Mill Graphic, was named vice president, and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Klemme, was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

The Club was organized in 1940 with T. J. Farnam of Clear Lake as the first president. Other presidents since then were R. A. Jorgenson, Klemme; Lester Benz, Sheffield, now at Osage; Rush Culver, Manly; Warren Nelson, Thornton; and Lester Pruitt, Forest City.

At the meeting Saturday evening, Mr. Pruitt gave a very interesting illustrated talk on his trip to the Hudson Bay region in Northern Canada last summer.

FISHING SEASON TO CLOSE NOVEMBER 30

The 1946 inland fishing season on all protected fish closes midnight, November 30, after an over all season described as "fair" by conservation officials.

Trout fishing as a whole was the brightest for anglers during the year. Reports from conservation officers indicated that fishing for other than trout and catfish was better in thirty-three counties, poorer in forty-eight, with eighteen showing no change from the 1945 season. In fifty-one counties catfishing was poorer than during the previous year, better in twenty-six, with no change reported in twenty-two.

Conservation officers in every instance reported an increase in the number of fishermen on the lakes and streams and their observation is verified by the fact that during the year ending Oct. 31, 75,600 more fishing licenses were issued than during the previous comparable period, with a total of 290,000 anglers licensed up to October 31 this year.

THANKSGIVING

Are you thankful for good health? As you gather with your family group for Thanksgiving reunions, the Iowa State Department of Health in an interview today suggested, "every citizen in Iowa should be thankful for our many blessings. We have so many gifts—Nature has bestowed upon us blessings of fertile soil, radiant sunshine, beautiful scenery—so many gifts of nature bringing health and happiness."

"Iowa ranks high among the states in its health rating. There is still evidence, however, of physical defects in our population," the department stated. "If you are one of our fortunately healthy citizens, giving thanks to God for your good health, we suggest you firmly resolve to lend your influence and interest toward the development of better public health services for those unfortunate folks who today are not able to join with you in being thankful for good health."

"Your state and local health departments are constantly working toward the goal of better health for all the citizens of Iowa, but the cooperation and help of every citizen is important and necessary."

"May we be truly grateful for our many blessings in the health and happiness of our people."

ROBERT TANNER DIED AT FARM HOME

Services Held Saturday For Young Farmer

J. Robert Tanner, 36, died early Thursday morning at the Tanner farm from a self-inflicted head wound from a small calibre rifle. He was found by his uncle, Albert Tanner in the loft of the barn when Mr. Tanner went out to do the morning chores.

Robert had been in ill health for some weeks and brooded over the loss of some of his stock, which seemed to pray on him and cause him to committ the act of self destruction.

He lived with his sisters, the Misses Bernice and Frances Tanner and operated the farm.

Funeral services were held at the farm Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme. Rev. H. E. Harvey gave the funeral sermon and burial was in the family lot in the Ell Township Cemetery.

OBITUARY

Robert Tanner was born Sept. 14, 1910, on the Tanner farm in Twin Lake township, Hancock County, Iowa. He was one of six children born to his parents, John G. and Rosa M. Tanner.

After completling his rural school education he attended the Klemme High School for two years

He attended the Liberty Methodist Church and became a member by confirmation during the pastorate of Rev. A. W. Gauger.

For the past nine years Robert has had full charge of the Tanner farm. He was a good farmer and successful stock man, and was liked by the young people of his age.

Robert had not been well for several weeks and he did seek medical help but his end came on the morning of November 21st, 1946, at the age of 36 years, 2 months and 7 days.

He leaves three sisters:

Bernice L. Tanner,

Francis L. Tanner and Florence, now Mrs. Ernest Kalpwarf of Belmond.

48 Hogs Brought Single Owner A Fat Purse

Ed Buntenbach, owner and operator of the Garner Sales Co. reports that 48 hogs were purchased from M. M. Friedman, Forest City, for the grand figure of $4,539,21. These hogs were purchased through Mr. Buntenbach's hog yards and the transaction was handled by M. J. Beherns, stock buyer.

Mr. Buntenbach declares this is the most money paid for a group of hogs at least as far as he can recall since he has been operating the Garner Sales Co. —Garner Leader.

The officials are V. J. Meyer, Bancroft, and A. E. Anderson of Lakota.

GOODELL WOMEN DIES SUDDENLY

Mrs. McNutt Stricken At Her Home; Rites Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. F. W. McNutt, 72, were held Monday at 2:00 p. m. in the Goodell Evangelical United Brethren Church with Rev. C. F. Spencer in charge. Burial was made in the Amsterdam cemetery.

Clara Stogsdill was born June 26, 1874. On June 21, 1891, she was married to F. W. McNutt and they lived in Goodell all their married life. To this union 6 children were born.

The past 2 years she had been ill with heart trouble but this summer had been feeling much better. Friday evening she sat visiting with her son, Robert, and Mrs. Mabel Church who was living with her, when she died suddenly of a heart attack.

Surviving children are Mrs. Billy Berkey (Glen) of Garrison, Mrs. Carl Chronister (Gail) of Decatur. Ill., Robert McNutt, Mrs. Elmer Kienenberger (Elma) of Goodell, Mrs. A. M. Whiteaker (Ethel) of Spencer and Verl McNutt of Marion.

Mrs. Bill Schoneman Appointed To Fill Term, County Clerk

Mrs. Bill Schoneman was appointed as clerk of the district court to fill the unexpired term of the late Elmer Raw, which will run until January 1, 1947. Board of supervisors will make an appointment to fulfill the term after January 1, 1947 until the general election in 1948, at some later meeting.

Mrs. Schoneman is the former Irene Holck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ade Holck, of Britt. She is a graduate of the Britt public schools. Mrs. Schoneman became deputy clerk of the district court the summer of 1942. Because of her excellent work the board of supervisors felt Irene deserved this appointment and that she would fulfill the duties of the office of county clerk adequately and satisfactorily.

U. N. Converts Modern War Plant Into Peace Factory

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—At this writing, committees of the United Nations are still meeting in the great modernistic factory building, now converted into a plant for the manufacture of international good will. A hundred committee meetings are being held in the rooms where once the delicate machinery turning out instruments of warfare hummed merrily, efficiently and most effectively.

Baukhage

Here delegates to the assembly of the United Nations, split up into groups, tackle the various subjects allotted to them just as the committees of congress discuss the bills and agree upon their form before they are submitted to the "committee of the whole house" for consideration and action.

The difference is that the assembly, unlike congress, cannot pass laws, it can only express the will of the majority. Its value is to register, before the world, world opinion as expressed by the nations which make up the United Nations. This is the first step toward a world government whose chief purpose is to police the world against war.

While the committee meetings were taking place the security council, which compares roughly with the senate, held some of its meetings in the same building, for unlike the assembly, which meets only once a year, the security council is a continuing body.

The Council of Foreign Ministers, which also is meeting in New York, is a body entirely separate from the United Nations.

Saddle U. S. With U. N. Expenses

It was characteristic of the desire to maintain a "realistic" attitude (let us hope) which resulted in the emphasis on fiscal matters, causing newspapers on the first day's committee meetings to display a head like this:

U. S. OPPOSES PAYING HALF OF U. N.'s BILLS

At the meeting of the budgetary committee, Senator Vandenberg got in a sly dig when he suggested that if the other nations felt the American economic system was so good that it could put up half the money to run the organization perhaps they might adopt a similar system. Capitalist America would pay 49.89 per cent of U.N.'s bills while Communist Russia, although much greater in size and population, would provide 6 per cent in the plan submitted.

Of course, any amount balanced against the price of war is small.

Powerful Committees Are in the Making

The work of the committees of the assembly covers a wide scope, since besides offering the sounding board for world opinion and controlling the pursestrings of the whole organization, the committees likewise supervise the several important subsidiary agencies, some of which will become extremely powerful when and if they carry out the duties planned for them. For instance, the many plans for improving living standards and social relations throughout the world, which is the purpose of the economic and social council, and the projected trusteeship council which will oversee the relationship between the dependent countries and the nations held responsible for their control and welfare.

Another important function of the assembly is initiating amendments to the charter, and this session bristled with talk among the smaller countries for amending provisions governing the power of the veto in security council.

Russians Vie to Last Minute

Early in the meetings of the general committee (the steering committee) and in the assembly itself, it became evident that the Russians were following a general plan of procedure which was not unlike that which had appeared and still is appearing in all the controversies. The Russian delegates frequently oppose violently a point and then, when they see that they are beaten, yield. Sometimes this looks like pure obstructionism; sometimes it seems merely an effort to display strength and combativeness, sometimes it is only a patent move to keep Russia in the forefront of the negotiations as a force with which to be reckoned.

There is also the language barrier. Probably there are no more competent performers among the various types of experts than the translators at these international gatherings. Much has been written of their remarkable ability to translate, without taking a single note, long paragraphs of some speakers who get so deep in their subjects that they forget that the translator is waiting patiently to translate one segment before the speaker goes on to the next.

Prize of them all is Pavlov, the lean and scholarly looking young man who appears to wrap himself about Molotov or Vishinsky and with his lips close to the listener's ear pours in the words so rapidly that it would appear they synchronize with the movement of the speaker's lips.

But even a perfect translation may produce a different meaning, just as the same word may mean two different things in the same language to two different pairs of ears.

You may recall the famous Molotov outburst at the opening of the assembly, the speech in which the Russian delegate demanded disarmament, objected to the Baruch atomic energy plan and went right down the line walloping everything in sight. As I remarked earlier, there was more smoke than fire in that tirade and American Delegate Austin, suspecting as much, made the terse comment on the speech, "smart but tough."

When the translations came back from the report in the Russian press Austin's words became "smart but sharp."

Now it may be that "tough" is a tougher word in Russian than it is in English because the Russians' ordinary conduct in such and some other matters, all the way from dancing to breakfasting on vodka, may be what we would consider tougher than the Anglo-Saxon approach.

Conscious of Foreign Policy

Most Americans do not realize how far this nation has gone in the establishment of a foreign policy built on popular desire. In the past, the foreign policy of the United States always had been a rather vague thing to people in general, something evolved behind a screen of formal phrases in the ancient high-ceilinged offices of the old state department building, where they still have marble fireplaces that really work in some of the rooms.

In the early days the subject was kept out of domestic politics simply because the politicians knew that the people knew as little as they did as to what it was all about and didn't care any more. Then came the famous Wilson versus Lodge fight over the League of Nations, which was really something far deeper than that, a fight of two powerful personalities and two different concepts of government—not world government but domestic government. Lodge and Wilson became so definitely committed to their own respective views that they couldn't afford to compromise.

After that, each party considered it fair game to rip the other up the back when it came to a discussion on foreign affairs and the fine old tradition (which was really a negative thing) "foreign affairs ends at the shore line," was split wide open.

And then the bloody conflict of World War II made people realize that Democratic and Republican blood when it flowed on the battlefield was the same color and caused the same gaping wounds at home.

The campaign which we have just witnessed, while it was characterized with the same old fuss and fury of the past, omitted the question of foreign policy except when it was raised by persons already discredited by both major parties.

That is the hope, as I see it, for American dominance, for the dominance of the American idea of human freedom. We have learned that when it comes to facing the world, we meet it shoulder to shoulder as Americans and nothing else.

Victorious GOP Devises Strategy on Main Issues

CONGRESS:

Act Fast

Hardly had the election din attending the Republican landslide subsided than Rep. Harold Knutson (Rep., Minn.) revealed that he would move for a 20 per cent cut in personal income taxes as soon as the 80th congress assembles January 5.

In addition, Knutson said that the ways and means committee, which he is scheduled to head as the ranking majority member, will open hearings sometime in February to pare or eliminate excise taxes on a long list of consumer goods, including jewelry, furs, cosmetics and liquors.

Republican intentions to slash taxes ran counter to President Truman's position to maintain high levies to balance next year's budget estimated at 40 billion dollars. By lopping off unnecessary expenditures and trimming the payroll, Knutson said, the GOP hopes to scale down the budget to 32 billion dollars, thus permitting the tax reduction and allowing for a substantial retirement of the national debt of 262 billion dollars at the same time.

More to Do

Reduction in taxation was only one of the many issues facing the new GOP congress.

Briefly, others included terminating the President's wartime powers to restrict government by executive decree; widening management's rights under the national labor relations act and providing for impartial administration of the law; hastening abolition of controls to restore free enterprise, and formulation of a farm program adjusted to postwar conditions.

In the field of foreign affairs, Republicans were expected to adhere to the current bi-partisan policy mapped by the administration with the help of Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) as representative of the GOP congressional bloc.

Minority Leader Martin of Massachusetts was scheduled to take over speakership of the house, with Senator Vandenberg of Michigan becoming president pro tem of the upper house and Senator Taft of Ohio, majority leader.

Seek Unity

As the Republican avalanche set up a Republican congress during a Democratic administration, liberal Democratic leaders called upon President Truman to resign in favor of a GOP nominee to assure harmony in the forthcoming session.

Remembering the unhappy results of previous divisions of legislative and executive power between the two parties, when solution of pressing problems gave way to indecisive bickering and both sides maneuvered for political advantage, Senator Fulbright (Dem., Ark.) was the first to call upon Mr. Truman to give way to a GOP nominee. He said he intended to introduce a constitutional amendment which would permit congress to authorize a presidential election if the two parties divided legislative and executive control.

Marshall Field, crusading New Deal publisher, joined Fulbright in asking President Truman to step down. By turning the job over to the GOP, Field said, the Republicans would be charged with full responsibility for development of a national program, and the issues in the 1948 election would be clear cut.

COAL:

Study Demands

Company spokesmen were quick to hit at John L. Lewis' new wage and hour demands for the United Mine Workers as threatening the future of the industry against the increasing competition of gas and oil. While the government presently is running the pits, private interests were thinking of their position when the properties are returned to them.

Declaring that " . . . Mr. Lewis is going to price his boys right out on the street," company spokesmen ridiculed the idea that a reduction of the work week from six to five days would lower operating costs and permit the operators to pay a 25 cent an hour raise. Under the old contract, miners were paid $1.18½ cents an hour, with overtime rates beyond 35 hours.

While the operators remained skeptical, UMW economists figured that a shorter work week would trim production costs from 20 to 70 cents a ton, with an average saving of 45 cents. Since miners dig from four to five tons of coal daily, the saving of $2 per day would cover the contemplated wage increase, they said

DEFICIT DECLINES

U. S. Finishes Quarter 'in Red'

WASHINGTON. — Aided by recent budget shifts, the federal government finished the first third of the current fiscal year $300,841,791 in the red, it is revealed by treasury department figures.

If the deficit continues at that level during the two other four-month periods, it would be slightly more than $902,525,000 at close of the fiscal year on June 30. This would be less than half the $1,900,000,000 deficit forecast by President Truman on August 3.

However, officials said nothing had happened so far to indicate any important shift away from the $1,900,000,000 deficit figure, although the President twice has remarked without amplification that the budget would be in balance at fiscal year end.

Save on Subsidies.

Recent budget shifts include a saving of possibly $290,000,000 from discontinuation of meat subsidies; but the army has announced it would require that much extra for occupation costs.

On the debit side, the presidential "economy ceiling" on public works expenditures has been boosted by $165,000,000.

Tax revenues for the July through October period totaled $11,994,701,000, equivalent to an annual rate of some $35,984,000,000 or about $3,700,000,000 below the August estimate for the year. Heaviest tax receipts, however, come after January 1.

Leave Pay High.

July-October expenditures totaled $12,295,543,000, equivalent to an annual rate of $36,886,000,000, or roughly $4,700,000,000 under the August estimate. But heavy charges for G I. terminal leave pay and international finance still lie ahead.

The federal debt stood at $263,917,666,707 at the end of October, but that was before the treasury began redeeming with cash two billion dollars in securities which matured November 1.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

WASHINGTON. — If you think times are tough today, drop in at the public library and ask for the back files of any newspaper for the fall of 1919 or the early part of 1920. That period was just about as long after World War I as we now are from World War II and the headlines are amazingly similar.

In fact, with the mere change of a few names, a glance at 1919-20 headlines would almost convince you that you were reading the newspapers of today.

We were having the same troubles with Russia then—only a little worse, with American troops in Siberia and Murmansk. The northern Adriatic, as now, was the chief bone of contention at the Paris peace conference. Only it was Fiume instead of Trieste which caused riots in the streets of Rome and Belgrade.

"Jews Massacred, Robbed by Poles," was another tragic but familiar headline. "Foresees Jewish state in Palestine. Judge Julian Mack tells of atrocities and asks for migration to Jewish homeland."

"Pershing denies large quantities of war goods destroyed in France."

"Rep. Emerson offers resolution asking war department to what extent soldiers were overcharged in France." . . . "War department criticized for offering $4,000,000 worth of fabrics for sale at public auction." . . . "Sergeants arrested in Paris charged with theft of American stores."

When it came to strikes, race riots and soaring prices, the domestic scene of 1919 was even more alarming. Labor troubles caused far more bloodshed. The alleged Communist menace was much worse.

May day celebrations in Chicago, Cleveland, Boston and New York produced riots, "citizens' armies" and an untold number of skull and political fractures.

By July 6, 1919, the army stood at 704,845, with 235,000 of these in Europe. Eight months later when the Junkers and German army seized power in Berlin, forcing the Ebert government to flee to Dresden, the American army of occupation totaled a nervous 18,000.

Meanwhile, the war department was recommending a universal military training program of three months for all 18-year-olds—more or less as today.

Unchecked by governmental pleas and voluntary programs, prices spiraled. Shoes were three times their prewar price and women's stockings were offered at "2—$25 a pair." Coffee prices jumped 7 cents a pound and, although the government declared 11 cents a pound a fair price for sugar, it was selling for 30 cents within a year. "Food now costs N. Y. residents 86 per cent more than six years ago," announced the New York Times.

Only a national "buyers' strike" in 1920, with prominent society women feeding their families on a dollar a day while their husbands were wearing overalls to their Broadway offices, changed the trend.

New York clergymen were making a survey of churches in an attempt to ease the housing shortage.

Headlines on August 16, 1919, don't seem out of place today. "Director General of Railroads Hines sees danger of coal gouging. Cautions senate that rumors on shortage may pave way for price advance." . . . "Begin jailing Germans as war offenders." . . . "Amendments to food control act supported and fought before congress committees."

All this and prohibition too. "Thousands return to Europe, blaming prohibition here."

Not only were there strikes, but also there were the same, familiar strikes. Telegraph and telephone workers, maritime and a steel strike lasting into the fourth month. . . . Omaha faced a general strike. . . . In the spring of 1919, 10,000 men were locked out of the Willys-Overland plant in Toledo, a strike committee controlled Winnipeg and police were using machine guns in Connecticut strike riots.

In the fall of 1919 a United Mine Workers' strike closed all bituminous coal mines and produced a news story headed "Lewis says mines' demands are 'subject to negotiation' — puts blame on operators."

No, history is just the same. History always repeats after a war.

BREAD BASKET OF THE WORLD . . . Kansas is the No. 1 wheat producing state of the nation, yielding almost a fourth of the entire U. S. crop.

Whether for or against slavery, Kansas settlers lived in log huts, shake houses, sod shanties, dugouts and other humble shelters, using grass, brush and buffalo chips for fuel. The "sod crop" was corn—and corn they ate! Corn bread, parched corn, hominy, corn-meal mush—they boiled corn, fried it, baked it, stewed it. Fortunately, they had beef, pork and milk to go with it, and a coffee substitute, made of dried sweet potatoes, dried green okra and parched wheat ground together and boiled.

Would Kansas be slave or free territory? On its first election day in 1855, hundreds of Missourians "with rifles on their shoulders, six-shooters in their belts and a liberal supply of whiskey in their wagons" crossed the border and voted. All of the pro-slavery candidates except one were elected! And when the "bogus legislature" met in July, the Missouri slave code was the law of Kansas.

The curtain-raiser to the Civil war was fought in Kansas. Men were murdered in cold blood. Border ruffians ravaged anti-slavery settlements. John Brown and his sons took up the challenge and took after the slave-holders. "Bleeding Kansas" was no misnomer during the next few years. But gradually the anti-slavery forces won and Kansas became a free state. Only two slaves were listed in the census of 1860.

Many notables have trod the Kansas stage. Heading the list is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, great military leader of World War II.

Frontier Personages.

The history of the Old West is represented by such Kansas personages as "Wild Bill" Hickock, the marshal of Abilene, and Buffalo Bill, the scout. Carrie Nation and her saloon-busting hatchet also brought the state into the limelight.

In Statuary hall in the nation's capitol is the figure of John J. Ingalls, senator, orator, essayist, poet. Ed Howe, the sage of Potato Hill, and his contemporaries, Walt Mason and William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette, were Kansas folks.

But the unknown soldier, the unhonored hero, of Kansas is the man who introduced the plow. He was not a glamorous figure, and his hands were gnarled and blistered and bent to the shape of a plow handle.

Kansas is ideally situated for agriculture, but it took a plow to break the sod. Where William F. Cody used to hunt buffalo are the greatest wheat lands in the world Kansas produces more wheat than any other state in the union—almost one-fourth of the entire United States crop. It is first in milling and wheat storage. Corn, alfalfa, hay, sorghum, broom corn, sudan grass, potatoes, sugar beets, barley, flax, rye, soybeans, vegetables, fruits, truck crops—Kansas produces almost everything that is grown on a farm.

Rich in Resources.

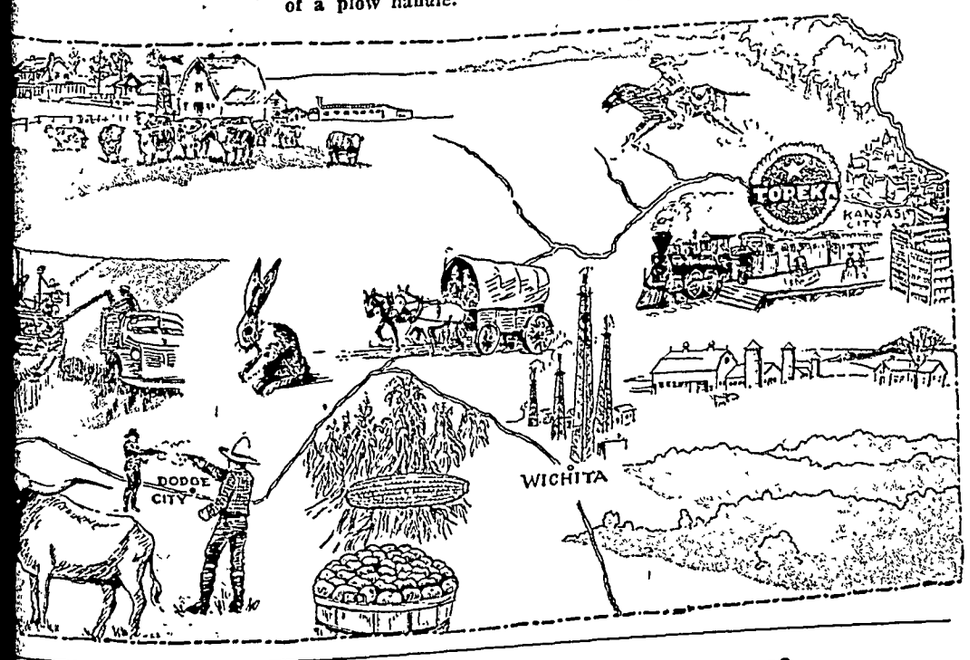
Kansas finds riches below as well as above the surface of her rolling, fertile acres. Kansas is one of the leaders in oil production, with its companion, natural gas. Lead and zinc are mined extensively. Coal is produced in most parts of the state. Under Kansas is enough salt to last 500,000 years! Volcanic ash, gypsum, limestone, clays and other resources are mined in Kansas. It is an important source of helium gas.

As the geological center of the United States, Kansas was—and is—the land of trails. Those who sought land in Oregon, gold in California or Colorado, trade with the Mexicans in Santa Fe, or cattle from Texas, used Kansas as a highway.

The Santa Fe Trail, the California and Oregon Trails, the Butterfield Trail, the Smoky Hill Route, Overland Trails, Pony Express Route, Jim Lane Trail and the cattle trails from Texas, including the Chisholm, Old Shawnee, Ellsworth and Western Trails, all used Kansas for a right-of-way

Kansas today bears some of the scars of long ago—ruts made by thousands of covered wagons and hooves of cattle among them. Lonely graves still may be found, and bridle bits, parts of wagons and other mute reminders of the past are picked up occasionally by grandchildren of the pioneers.

Kansas is great, not only as one of the food-producing states of the nation, but as a great family of people who retain much of the pioneer spirit. They stuck it out a few generations ago. And Kansans are still "sticking it out" for freedom of thought and of action, and for the right to progress by their own efforts.



Wild Cow Towns Hold Spotlight of Frontier

most romantic roles in ry was played by the cattle trails and the towns which became ts for the herds.

ph G. McCoy who first o something about a xas cattle. There were e cattle, and they were le than the buffalo d the Kansas prairies. Kansas towns weren't interested in Texas cattle, at least most of them weren't. But Abilene was, although it was only a "small dead place consisting of about a dozen log huts."

As soon as McCoy started building his depot at Abilene, the village awakened and teemed with activity. By 1870 there were 4 hotels, 10 boarding houses, 9 or 10 saloons and other business places. One of the first buildings, of course, was the jail. Sidewalks were of wood and soon trembled and clattered as boot heels clomped on them.

Kansas cow towns held the spotlight of the frontier. There were Ellsworth, Newton, Wichita (larger and noisier than most) and finally Dodge City (toughest of them all). For 10 years Dodge City was the wickedest town in the country. But it fought hard to gain that distinction.

Doolittle Keeps Promise To Town Named for Him

DOOLITTLE, MO.—"We may not be on all the maps yet, but we have a good name and lots of enthusiasm," insisted A. R. Cook, mayor of Doolittle, at the town's recent dedication ceremonies.

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, former commanding general of the Eighth air force and leader of the famous Tokyo raid, kept a promise made more than two years ago by flying to Missouri for the dedication services of the town named for him.

Small Community.

The town consists of a handful of buildings scattered along Highway 66, 100 miles southwest of St. Louis. Prior to becoming Doolittle, the community was known as Centerville.

Early in 1944 a group of citizens in the Ozark mountain foothills region of Missouri banded together to incorporate their community, naming it for the famous airman.

They addressed a letter to General Doolittle in care of the war department in Washington, advising him of their action and inviting him to participate in the official dedicatory ceremonies. Not long afterward the general replied from England thanking them for the honor and stating that when his current "pressing business" was finished and conditions permitted, he would be happy to attend the ceremonies.

At the dedication rites, General Doolittle made a speech and unveiled a bronze plaque bearing his likeness.

Medicine Output Hits New Peak; Aspirin in Lead

WASHINGTON. — Consumption of medicine by the American people reached a record peak of about 40 million pounds last year, it is disclosed in a report compiled by the chemical division of the tariff commission.

Production of medicinal preparations by the chemical industry, which is by far the largest producer, exceeded 44 million pounds last year, according to the report. While some of this was produced for export and some was retained for a reserve supply, the greater part was consumed by Americans, both military and civilian.

Aspirin was the largest single item, the report reveals. Eleven million pounds of this and similar mild pain killers were produced, the greater part of this supply presumably passing over drugstore counters.

Running a close second were the sulfa drugs, chemical factories producing nearly six million pounds. This represented a gain of 1,400,000 pounds in a year, the increase being attributed to war demands. Wholesale return from the sulfa drugs was placed at 20 million dollars.

Vitamin production amounted to 2,900,000 pounds, according to the report, with a total valuation of about 50 million dollars.

The report also shows that chemical factories turned out 18 million pounds of perfume and flavoring substances, exclusive of those perfumes extracted directly from flowers. The demand went up about 10 per cent in a year.

'Died in 1950' Sign Shocks Visitors to Wisconsin Cemetery

DOUSMAN, WIS. — "John H. Aplin, born 1865, died 1950." This inscription on a gravestone in the local Ottawa cemetery invariably shocks visitors.

To John H. Aplin, 71, who lives in nearby Eagle, Wis., however, there is nothing particularly amiss about the inscription. When his wife died last January, Aplin, a carpenter, had a monument erected and told the tombstone cutter to put his name on it too. When asked about the date, he said, "Put down 1950. It doesn't make any difference if it's a few years one way or the other. There probably won't be anyone to take care of it when I die, so I might just as well do it myself."

The monument, as a result, bears this inscription: "Alice Aplin, born 1865, died January, 1946. John H. Aplin, born 1865, died 1950."

Aplin has established a reputation as an individualist around Eagle. One of the favorite stories about him concerns the old schoolhouse. When a wrecker tore down the old building, he found a whisky bottle between the walls. In the bottle was a note saying, "We drank the whisky, John Aplin and Stewart."

Teacher Gets Cigars But Sighs for Apples

CHICAGO. — Ex G.I. freshmen at Loyola university make Prof. Paul S. Leitz yearn for the good old days in the teaching profession. Then, apples for the teacher were in vogue. "I could eat those," he says. "Now hardly a week goes by that I don't get at least eight cigars from freshman veterans who have just become fathers," he explains. His complaint: He doesn't smoke.

AVIATION NOTES

SMALL TOWN BOON

Use of the helicopter for air mail service, already tested by the post office department, is expected to prove a boon to rural and urban areas by linking small towns and cities located off the routes of scheduled airlines

By co-ordinating transport timetables with postal schedules, helicopter service will afford speedier delivery of goods and faster communication with communities which must rely on the rural letter carrier.

Postal officials are gathering facts to be submitted to Civil Aeronautics board for guidance in passing upon applications of proposed helicopter operators.

PRODUCTON SOARS

Production of military aircraft in September totaled 135 planes, according to official government data distributed by Aircraft Industries association. This represents an increase of five planes over the August total.

Aircraft engines delivered for military planes totaled 220 in September, of which 88 were jets.

Deliveries of jet fighters to army air forces increased by 27 during the month with delivery of 57 planes Fifty-six conventional engineer fighters were delivered to the navy which is building up its carrier complements of late-type fighters. Three light bombers and three medium bombers also were delivered to the navy.

Acceptances of military planes for the first nine months of the year now total 800. Production schedules call for 1,600 planes for the year.

Flying schoolma'rm is the title conferred on Mrs. Earl Hallock, who teaches 11 children in the rural one-room school on North Bass island near Sandusky, Ohio. Mrs. Hallock commutes by air because plane transportation from her home in Put In bay on South Bass island is the swiftest way to span the four miles of water between the two islands. The school house with its pot-bellied stove has changed little since it was built 50 years ago. Mrs. Hallock's pupils are children of grape growers who inhabit the small island.

MORE INTERNATIONAL ROUTES

The international air route system has expanded 50 per cent in the past year and now is more than double the 150,000-mile prewar network, according to International Air Transport association. Airlines bearing 35 flags now provide service to more than 200 countries, colonies and dependencies and there is keen competition to see who shall first establish a complete round-the-world schedule. The world's air fleets, however, are still in a transitional period.

New Guinea's $20 Stamp Has Highest Face Value

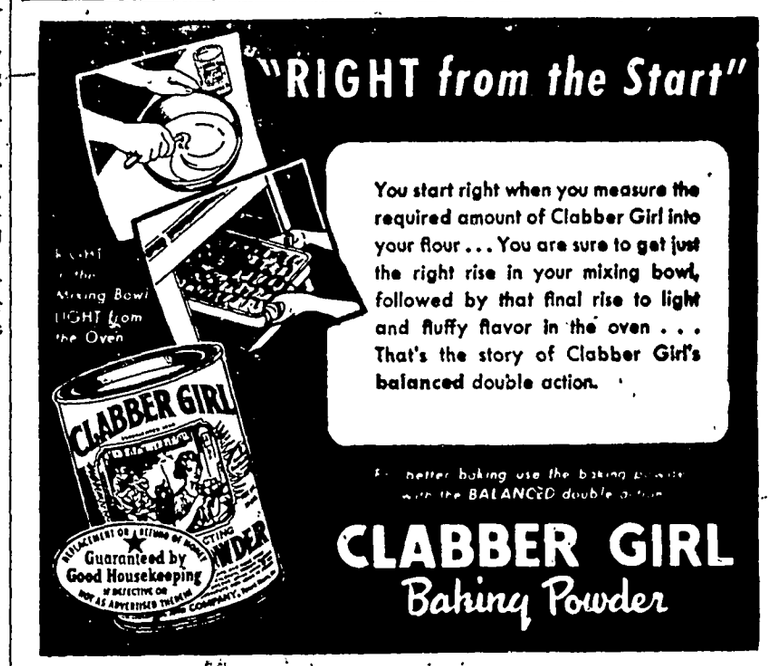
The postage stamp with the highest face value today is New Guinea's $20 air mail stamp, the first issue of which was brought out in 1936 to handle the heavy parcel post shipments of gold by plane from mines in the Owen Stanley mountains that are inaccessible by other means of transport.

You needn't study long lists of gift suggestions nor devote long, hard hours Christmas shopping for friends who enjoy the pleasure of cigarette or pipe smoking. Not at all! Now you can get two great gift items that are sure to please the most discriminating smokers. For the friend who prefers mild, mellow, fresh cigarettes, select a carton of Camels, a national favorite. And for the pipe-smoker, wisely choose a pound tin of the world's largest-selling pipe tobacco, Prince Albert. Both Camels and Prince Albert come in handsome holiday dress. No other gift wrapping or decorations are necessary—Camels and Prince Albert are "ready to give." See them on display at your dealers.—Adv.

Gas on Stomach
Relieved in 5 minutes or double your money back
When excess stomach acid causes painful, suffocating gas, sour stomach and heartburn, doctors usually prescribe the fastest-acting medicines known for symptomatic relief—medicines like those in Bell-ans Tablets. No laxative. Bell-ans brings comfort in a jiffy or double your money back on return of bottle to us. 25c at all druggists.

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Wonderful
No Cooking. So Easy. Saves Dollars.
To get the most surprising relief from coughs due to colds, you can easily prepare a medicine, right in your own kitchen. It's very easy—a child could do it—needs no cooking, and tastes so good that children take it willingly. But you'll say it's hard to beat for quick results.
First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, and pour it into a pint bottle. Fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough syrup—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and lasts a long time.
And it gives quick relief. It acts in three ways—loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

ARE YOU PALE WEAK, TIRED due to MONTHLY LOSSES?
You girls and women who lose so much during monthly periods that you're pale, weak, "dragged out"—this may be due to lack of blood-iron. So try Lydia E. Pinkham's TABLETS—one of the best home ways to build up red blood—in such cases. Pinkham's Tablets are one of the best blood-iron tonics you can buy!



"RIGHT from the Start"
You start right when you measure the required amount of Clabber Girl into your flour . . . You are sure to get just the right rise in your mixing bowl, followed by that final rise to light and fluffy flavor in the oven . . . That's the story of Clabber Girl's balanced double action.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

A Lesson In Conservation

We were sitting on Bill Webster's porch the other night, chatting over a glass of beer—when the talk turns to forest preservation, soil erosion, and other things that affect a farming community.

Judge Cunningham speaks up: "It's all right to worry about conserving our natural resources," he says, "but there's a far bigger problem when it comes to conservation—and that's preserving our democratic way of life, our sense of personal freedom, our respect for one another's rights."

From where I sit, the Judge is right. All America's great natural sources, our abundant natural wealth, are lost the minute we lose the right to work them as free people in a free land!

Whenever you see or hear of an encroachment on our rights—whether it's the right to free speech, or the right to vote as we see fit, or the right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer in friendly law-abiding places . . . watch out!

Joe Marsh

BURNING SOYBEAN STRAW IS COSTLY

Before burning soybean straw after combining, it's a good idea to consider whether you can afford to take the loss, says Paul Whether soybeans are soil-derector.

Pointing out that Hancock county farmers barely finished combining their beans before starting to pick corn this fall, Henderson says much of the bean straw is still likely to be thoughtlessly burned as soon as the farmer gets around to it.

Leaving bean straw on the land has two main values. It's important for the plant food and organic matter contained, and it serves to reduce soil erosion. Wrether soybeans are soil-depleting or soil-improving crop, depends largely on how they are handled.

Nitrogen is the main plant food lost by burning. The straw on the average soybean field contains about 20 pounds of nitrogen per acre, Henderson, says.

A series of test conducted by the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that corn will average 8 to 9 bushels more per acre where corn follows soybeans as compared with corn following corn in the rotation. Probably half of this increase can be attributed to the value of the bean straw.

Soybeans are known for loosening the soil. This is an advantage on flat, tight soils but can introduce a problem on sloping land. By leaving the straw on the land, however, it serves as a mulch which increases the amount of water absorbed by the land and reduces the amount of soil lost by erosion.

CARE OF SEPARATOR WILL INCREASE CREAM CHECK

The amount of care given to cream separating during cold weather will be reflected in the size of the cream check, says A. W. Rudnick, Iowa State College dairy specialist.

For instance, Rudnick says many dairymen still are losing money because they fail to run hot water through their machines before seprating or let the milk cool too much before it is skimmed. He points out that one of excessive butterfat going into the skimmilk is that of running cold milk into a cold bowl. The specialist reccomends running enough hot water through the machine so it will come out of both the cream and skimmilk spouts.

KLEMME HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Freshman And Sophomore News

—Reported by Ruth Janssen.

Did we ever learn how much we did not know about the things that make the news when we took our test over current events last Thursday. We have been having reviews and tests all week. History, Wednesday; Algebra, Thursday; English and Science, Friday. The Freshmen have been enjoying their work in science and notice that the periods slips by almost too rapidly. Mrs. Lieth says that we all much better in science than we are in algebra, but there is still room for improvement. In English we have spent most of the six weeks studying grammar, but recently we have been studying some famous mystery stories and the authors of them. We have found them plenty exciting.

Don Finders hasn't been in school since the 13th of November because of an operation. We expect him back in school soon. "Hurry and get well, Don, we all miss you." We hope you enjoyed the letter from the English class.

Junior and Senior News

—Reported by Donna Havilin.

The odor of future tests was floating around Klemme High early Monday morning and increased daily throughout the week. We had a steady diet.

The bus load of student who accompanied the ball team to Fertile Tuesday evening added a nice breezy tang in the air. We really boiled over when we won both games. The second team 21-20, and the first team 29-26. Were they ever close! This means another winning game to add to our list.

However, things have cooled down a bit now. In fact we are practically frozen with fear because of tests. Alas, report cards will tell the rest of the story.

Charles Christie has been absent from school all week and is still confined to the hospital as a result of a recent operation. We hear he is getting along nicely and will soon be home.

NEW DESIGN FOR CORNCRIB ROOFS

Providing suitable roofs for temporary cribs need not pose a problem for Iowa farmers who will soon be trying to squeeze their bumper corn crop into safe storage.

United States Department of Agriculture engineers working in cooperation with Iowa State College have designed a "stop gap" crib covering made rolled roofing which they believe will do the trick. It is adaptable to either round slat or woven wire cribs or the rectangular pole type.

Woven conventional round cribs, however, additional woven wire strips must be installed at opposite points to provide a gable-like shape for the ends The last few loads of corn can then be sloped up to a ridge to support the roofing with the wire triangles supporting the corn on the ends.

Anchor Down

Once the ridge is formed, rolled roofing strips are placed over the ridge with the ends cut to conform to the circular pattern of the crib edges. When in place, the strips are overlapped about 6 inches and secured with slats placed on top of the roofing and nailed into board strips placed underneath of the corn. Edges around the crib are made rigid by placing lath and board strips at intervals in the same manner.

Once in place, the rolled roofing is anchored by attaching two to four lengths of wire to short lengths of board which are buried in the corn to serve as "deadmen." The "deadmen" should be placed so that they point toward the crib center and slope up toward it. Each wire should be attached at midpoint on the anchor and secured on the other end to a nail driven into the board strips under the overlapped edges of roofing. Anchors should be placed at the same intervals along the gabled ends. All wires must be on the inside of the slatting.

Settles With Corn

With the roof fastened in this manner, as the corn settles the anchors settle with it, holding the roofing securely down on the corn. Once installed, such a roof needs only occasional checking to see that is isn't caught on the siding during settling.

On the average round crib the roof will cost about $6 and will require about 4 to 8 man hours to build.

In view of the uncertain price situation and transportation, plus the desire of many farmers to keep their surplus corn on the farm in any case, the engineers say the protection of safe storage is well worth the cost. Complete details for building the crib roof may be obtained on request from the Agricultural Engineering Department at Iowa State College.

RAISES PEANUTS

Not many Iowans raise peanuts but W. A. Oxenreider, Lacona, has harvested a bushel off a patch 10 x 21 feet in size, which is at the rate of 200 bushels to the acre. They grow underground, like potatoes, and require about the same attention as the remainder of the garden. Lacona is in Warren county.

CHECK OIL HEATER, GET BEST RETURN FROM FUEL

More and more Iowa farm families who do not have furnaces are using the pot type oil-burning space heater for home heating. But many aren't getting their full return per fuel dollar spent, says Dale Hull, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

The reason in most cases, Hull points out, is that the heater is not level or the draft regulator hasn't been properly installed. These are easy items to check, but they can be costly if not functioning properly.

If the burner pot is not level, the oil won't cover the pot base evenly. The result is that the burner may receive too much oil and cause a smoky flame. Or it may receive no oil and not burn at all.

As to the draft regulations, Hull says there are several kinds in use. All operate on the same principal. If properly adjusted and installed, the draft regulator automatically controls the chimney draft. This provides the right amount of air to give sufficient combustion. It replaces the old-fashioned hand damper.

If the stove burns with a lazy smoky fire, the draft should be increased by moving the adjusing weight on the damper forward. If the stove burns with a roaring, white fire, the draft should be cut down. It's also important to be sure the regulator blade swings freely at the slightest touch or breath of air. If soot accumulates on the blade, it should be brushed off.

If excess carbon is formed on the burner, the cause probably is either to little draft or the burner not being level. If the burner operates at too high a rate or is burning too low, this also will cause carbon to form. And so will the use of improper fuel.

If the burner does not light or goes out after lighting, the strainer, control valve and oil lines should be cleaned.

Since the pot type burner is sensitive to fuel, the regular range oil, especially made for such burners, is best. Kerosene also is satisfactory, though more expensive. Tractor fuel should not be used since it may cause trouble by forming carbon.

A hot water heater in the milkhouse will save labor, time and money. Heaters priced as low as $2 are on the market.

Only 22 more shopping days until Christmas.

BOOKS 'TALK' FOR BLIND . . . Sightless readers get an inkling of the personalities of leading authors through the Talking Book editions of their works. Here Edna Ferber, at the New York sound studios of American Foundation for the Blind, places part of her autobiography, "A Peculiar Treasure," on the record.

PERSONALITY ON PLATE

Talking Books Give Sightless Inkling of Author's Identity

WNU Features

Voices of many of the nation's leading authors now reach blind men and women throughout the country on the long-playing phonograph discs of the Talking Books. Main objective of the new policy of having well-known writers personally record at least a portion of the Talking Book edition of their works is to give blind people an inkling of the author's personality, it is explained by American Foundation for the Blind, with headquarters in New York. The foundation records these volumes in sound for the Library of Congress.

Some writers personally record whole volumes. Jan Struther read all of her "Mrs. Miniver" on the Talking Book discs while recently Glenway Westcott completed recording in full his best seller, "Apartment in Athens." For the six hours necessary to record it, John Mason Brown read all of his book, "Many a Watchful Night."

Trained Readers Aid.

Usually, however, the author reads merely his introduction or his first chapter, the recording then being completed by a trained reader from stage and radio.

Authors who have co-operated with the foundation in recording the Talking Book editions of their works include Somerset Maugham, Lin Yutang, Eleanor Roosevelt, Thomas Mann, Edna Ferber, John Kieran, Oliver LaFarge and Dorothy Caruso.

Talking Book editions reach blind people without the slightest cost to them. The discs, after being recorded, are placed by the Library of Congress in 27 regional libraries from coast to coast which operate departments for the blind. The discs travel back and forth between the libraries and blind Talking Book readers postage free.

Range Is Wide

The Talking Book brings to the sightless every type of reading matter from the Bible to best-sellers. Each side of a record plays for more than 15 minutes reading time, and the electric machine, which resembles a portable phonograph, is easy to operate by touch alone.

Talking Books are a gift to blind people from the American taxpayer, underwritten by an annual appropriation by congress for "Books for the Adult Blind."

Former Prisoners Assume Santa Role

ATLANTA, GA.—Children the world over are basically good of heart, Atlanta's ex-prisoners of war insist as they map plans for playing Santa Claus to the youngsters of Bad Nauheim, Germany.

The project is being undertaken by the Atlanta chapter of the Barbed Wire club, composed of former prisoners of war.

"The Barbed Wire club selected as its first project the job of playing Santa Claus to little German children. We remember they were our friends," declared Horace Wood, club president, in appealing for donations of toys and dolls.

Wood, former infantry lieutenant who spent five months as a prisoner of war in Germany, recalled an instance when a German youth gave him a light for his cigarette.

"There were other times when little children along the street would give us cheese and bread. This food tasted good to a prisoner of war," Wood insisted.

Musical Pillow Is Aid to Harmony

NEW YORK. — Science's latest contribution to harmony in the boudoir is the musical pillow—stuffed with radio.

Step by step electrical engineers have been attempting to overcome the pitfalls of marriage with such annoyance eliminators as electric blankets, spot lighting — and now musical pillows "for individual listening."

The pillow speaker is the size of a silent butler and about the same shape. It plugs into a bedside radio and can be slipped into the pillow case with no one the wiser.

Although the manufacturers guarantee the device is shockproof, they won't say the same about the programs that come out of it.

The musical pillow, which made its debut in army hospitals, now has been offered for home use. An airline has tested it on some of its runs and is planning to pass out melodic pillows to passengers on trans-oceanic hops.

Idle Vessel Sought for Housing

CAMDEN, N. J. — Among the unusual housing plans revealed by the National Association of Housing Officials is the search underway in the Camden area for a surplus navy vessel to house 50 families now without shelter.

The drive is aimed at procurement of one of three unfinished and idle vessels in the Philadelphia-Camden area. The ship would be used to house evicted and veterans' families until more adequate shelter is available.

Welfare agencies backed by the Community Chest are leading the drive for the housing facilities.

A similar housing plan already is in effect at Alabama Polytechnic institute, which is using 93 tugboat deckhouses at Auburn for student veterans. Each unit houses two men with a "second story" pilot house which can be used as a study.

'Re-Bob' Report

It must be the new "Re-Bob" music and all the popular "A-Bob-A-Re-Bob" recordings; or maybe, the swoonsational Slim Gaillerd trio that have started a whole new cycle of Jabberwocky throughout the nation. It's the most unintelligible slanguage we've had to contend with to date, and we've had some mighty rugged stuff. The spelling would stump an expert like Mr. Webster — so imagine what it's doing to us:

Vout! — It's more a sound than an actual word, and it's replacing Hubba and Ruff. Usually it rhymes with "doubt" and it's said with an exclamation point after it to denote enthusiasm.

Mellowroony — Sounds like the name of a chocolate bar, but it's one of those inexplicable Re-Bob noises that has become an expression of approval.

Olroney — As far as we can make out, you just say it to hear yourself make a noise.

Putti, Putti — This isn't exactly Re-Bob stuff, but it's another expression to start with music. Anybody that knows his "Cement Mixer" will recognize it and use it whenever the occasion calls for a "hubba."

Well, as the Little Moron said after he ate an onion, "I wouldn't breathe it to a soul."

City Edition

Wouldn't you like one monthly newspaper that gave you all the news about the high schools in and around your city? Well, the San Francisco teens decided to do something about it and the result is the "Hi-Times," described as an "inter high school news." Want to know more about it?

Eight in One—Eight San Francisco high schools collaborate on the paper—a 16-page monthly that has all the news that's fit to print about all of them.

Rotating Publishers—Each month a different one of the eight collaborating schools is selected to publish the paper, but it's written and edited by journalism students from all eight.

Summarizes School Views — Hi-Times has a front page feature on the current sorority and fraternity controversy. You might want to know that four out of the eight schools denounced all such societies as undemocratic. Better cover up that pin you're wearing!

Gleaming Buttons

Brilliantly accenting this trim fall suit are twin rows of gleaming buttons, from collar to nipped-in waist. The larger one on the shoulder is perfect for holding the strap of an over-shoulder bag.

A LETTER ON CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Acts 19:23-30; Ephesians 6:13-18.

MEMORY SELECTION—Finally, my brethren be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10.

The war is never over for the Christian. He is called to a constant strife against the world, the flesh and the devil, which knows no armistice or peace conference so long as he lives or the Lord tarries.

Paul, who had now set out on his third missionary journey, was this time permitted of the Holy Spirit to witness and minister in Asia.

For three months he spoke in the synagogue, as was his custom, but when his ministry resulted in many converts others hardened themselves in opposition. So he withdrew (a bit of strategy in this spiritual warfare) to neutral ground in the "school of one Tyrannus," where he could teach and reason with them daily.

Paul knew by experience that this could not go on, for he had learned as we should learn to

I. Expect Opposition — It Will Come (Acts 19:23-30).

The comfortable and contented Christians of our day who just want to be let alone to carry on their worship are certainly not related to the real Christians of Paul's type.

The enemy of our souls is often content to let us go on in comparative peace as long as we do not bother him unduly, but once we put up the banner of a holy life and service in God's army, he begins a terrific counterattack. Paul had felt it already in the hardening of listeners' hearts (v. 8).

1. Selfish Opposition (vv. 23-27). One way to bring a violent reaction against spiritual truth is to let it interfere with business. Demetrius and his fellow silversmiths professed to be concerned about the threatened destruction of the heathen worship of Diana.

Many of the enemies of the gospel in our time are fighting against God's Word because they are in a business which is condemned by it.

2. Senseless Tumult (vv. 28-30). Knowing that their opposition was without true foundation, they inspired and agitated a wild demonstration.

Shouting a slogan which had no real meaning, they lent their voices to the tumultuous agitation against God. Finally, one sensible man, fearing the punishment of city officials, quieted them (Acts 19:35-41).

The Ephesians were just like many in our day who fear man more than God. But, may we ask, if you fear the judgment of men, how think you to escape the judgment of God? After all, it is God and His Word you oppose, unconverted friend. Do you think He will hold you guiltless?

Paul was not afraid (v. 30), for he had also learned that the servant of the Lord can

II. Count on God—He Will Deliver (Eph. 6:13-18).

Writing to the church in this very city where the Lord opened "a great door and effectual" for Paul (I Cor. 16:9), he admonishes them and us to make full use of the provision which God has made for victorious warfare.

There is a complete armor, and a mighty weapon, the sword of the Spirit, but none will do us the slightest good unless we put it on and go into battle. If we think we can do without the breastplate of righteousness (and some Christians and church workers seem to think they can), or neglect to carry and use the shield of faith, we can only expect defeat. We fight great spiritual enemies (see vv. 11, 12, of this chapter) and we need the best in both offensive and defensive equipment.

The girdle of truth binds up the warrior and eliminates the hindrances to rapid movement. The breastplate is righteousness, not his own but Christ's, but it must be appropriated and used.

The soldier must be well shod for the long rough journeys and to give him a good foothold in the day of battle. Peace in the heart provides such a firm vantage point in the fight for God.

Faith is the quickly moved shield, catching all the fiery darts. Here again it is not my faith or yours alone, but our faith in God, putting him between us and our enemies.

The sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, is our all-powerful weapon. Let us not neglect to use it. We are so prone to talk about the Bible, to defend it, to argue for its truths. Talking about a sword does not make it effective. Let's really use it.

Prayer is always to be counted on and it is both a defensive and offensive weapon. It keeps us in touch with the Captain of the Lord's hosts. We call for help, get orders and transmit news of victory through prayer.

Tart Cranberry Tastes Good, Saves On Sugar

There's no getting around it--cranberries do take a lot of sugar if you're going to have them sweet. However, if sweetened only slightly, their natural tartness is a tasty accompaniment to any meal and does save on the sugar supply.

Cranberry sauce used with fish and meat takes less sugar than some of the other ways of fixing cranberries. According to Mildred Nelson, extension nutrionist, Iowa State College, sirup may be used to sweeten this type of sauce or the familiar cranberry, orange and apple relish. But, if using sirup in cranberry jelly, add a little gelatin to make sure it will jell. Half again as much sirup as sugar is needed when substituting for sugar.

If cranberries prove too expensive to use in large amounts, step up a cole slaw, pineapple or fruit salad with a cube of cranberry gelatin. Cranberries add color and variety in flavor no matter what form they're in.

Tart Cranberry Tastes Good, Saves On Sugar

There's no getting around it--cranberries do take a lot of sugar if you're going to have them sweet. However, if sweetened only slightly, their natural tartness is a tasty accompaniment to any meal and does save on the sugar supply.

Cranberry sauce used with fish and meat takes less sugar than some of the other ways of fixing cranberries. According to Mildred Nelson, extension nutrionist, Iowa State College, sirup may be used to sweeten this type of sauce or the familiar cranberry, orange and apple relish. But, if using sirup in cranberry jelly, add a little gelatin to make sure it will jell. Half again as much sirup as sugar is needed when substituting for sugar.

If cranberries prove too expensive to use in large amounts, step up a cole slaw, pineapple or fruit salad with a cube of cranberry gelatin. Cranberries add color and variety in flavor no matter what form they're in.

Thanksgiving Is Here Again

The going may have been rather rough since last Thanksgiving, but the most of us have things to be thankful for, and it is our hope that you have had your share of the good things the past year.

One of the things that we have to be thankful for is our old friends as well as the new friends we have made since last Thanksgiving Day.

We wish everyone a happy Thanksgiving Day in this year of peace.

Farm Machinery Still Below Amount Needed

The hopeful farmer who has been patching, fixing and repairing his machinery all during the war years, waiting for the time when he can replace it, is likely to be back at the same old stand this winter, says C. H. Van Vlack, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

While it's true that more new equipment will be available next spring than during the war, there still won't be nearly enough to go around, Van Vlack says. And since replacement parts also will be hard to get, the farmer will again have to put machinery repair, care and ordering of parts as one of the musts on his winter work schedule.

Van Vlack says proper housing and protection of parts against rust or decay are among the most important items of machinery care. Along with this is the need for checking all machines for needed repair parts and getting them ordered right away.

Where painting is needed, Van Vlack suggests blocking up the machine so all parts may be easily cleaned. All grease should be removed with turpentine or kerosene and loose rust and scale removed with a wire brush. Two coats of base paint will increase the durability.

Bright parts of the machine should be proteced from weather by a coating more easily removed than paint. Used engine oil will do if the machine is housed Ordinary axle grease gives more lasting protection if the machine is left outdoors.

METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES HAD DINNER

The Loyal Workers and the Good Fellowship Sunday school classes met at the Klemme Methodist Church dining room Sunday to enjoy a turkey dinner. The turkey was provided by the Good Fellowship class and was deliciously prepared by Dr. and Mrs. Anderson. Fify-four were present for the dinner.

Following a program in charge of Supt. Otto Lemke, the two classes voted to merge into one under the name of The Adult Bible Class.

C. A. Larsen was named president; Roy Schafer, vice president and Mrs. Otto Lemke, as secretary and treasurer. Mrs. Henry Busse is the teacher, and Emil Beier as assistant. Other officers elected were Mrs. E. J. Arnold, chairman of Flower Committee; Mrs. J. A. Chambers, Chr. Visiting Comm., and Mrs. D. P. Anderson and Mrs. Benn Coobs, Kitchen Committee.

SCHEDULE DISTRICT FERTILIZER MEETING

Timber Is Profitable Winter Crop In Iowa

When the last ear of corn is picked, farmers will find it profitable to turn their attention to their most important winter crop—timber.

Richard Cambell, Iowa State College forester, says that the high demand for native lumber, coupled with the use of wood for fuel and posts, is causing more and more farmers to look upon timber as an important crop Moreover, it is a crop that can be tended in an "off season" of work.

Just as clean and properly handled grain crops produce greater yields, so do properly managed woodlands produce more and better timber. One thing that should be done is to cut out defective, poorly formed and weakend trees. They can be used for fuel and for making posts.

Since a full stand is necessary for maximum crop production. the young, thrifty trees should be left as basis for future production, Cambell says. Sound trees of good form with healthy crowns are the ones that produce high-quality lumber. Such trees should be protected from grazing and fire. This will also enable young trees to come in and replace the mature trees when they are cut.

The forester points out that in a good woodland, a heavy soil layer of organic matter is formed. If such soil is packed by grazing, the layer of organic matter is destroyed, resulting in rapid runoff of rainfall, poor aeration of the roots and poor tree growth.

Trees reach a harvest stage just like other crops, Campbell says. But since timber is a long-time crop it need not be harvested annually.

Only 17 more shopping days until Christmas.

W. S. C. S. WILL MEET

The W. S. C. S. of the Klemme Methodist Church will meet on Thursday, Dec. 5 with Mrs. D. P. Anderson as the leader. Hostesses are Mrs. Trumbell, Mrs. Orville Bridges and Mrs. Carence Lemke.

SMALL OAT SUPPLY NOW IN SPITE OF BIG CROP

While Iowa and the nation produced a whooping big oat crop last year, the supply of oats on hand the first of October was 11 percent smaller than a year ago.

Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist, says the reason for the smaller supply is that considerably more oats were used for feed during the three months from July thru September. Corn and other feed was hard to get, and oats were substituted.

The records show that the disappearence of oats during those 3 months was largest on record and almost 60 percent above average.

Funeral Services Held At Garner Tuesday

Walter Sherman Pritchard, 75, died at his home in Garner Saturday afternoon following a lingering illness. Mr. Pritchard was a representative from Hancock county in the state legislature for 3 terms, the last of which expires Jan. 1, 1947.

A former automobile dealer, Mr. Pritchard was born Sept. 28, 1871, at Belmond, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sherman Pritchard. He attended Belmond high school and Northern Iowa Business college.

On Sept. 17, 1896, he was married to Jennie Elinor Finch at Belmond. Other survivors include 5 sons, Paul of Mason City; John W., Walter S., Harry M., Robert J., and three daughters Mrs. G. H. Campbell, Mrs. R. G. Grobaty and Mrs. L. B. Oberhauser.

Mr. Pritchard was cashier of the state bank of Belmond from 1890 to 1900 and operated farms in Cerro Gordo, Wright and Hancock counties for 14 years before taking over ownership of the Ford garage at Garner in 1914.

A city council member from 1916 to 1922, Mr. Pritchard then became mayor of Garner, serving 2 years until 1924. The legislator was president of the Garner Lions club in 1930 and 1931. He was instrumental in providing a number of civic improvements, served as a director of the Iowa Automobile association and was prominent in the Hancock County Farm Bureau.

Funeral services were held at the St. Boniface Catholic Church at Garner Tuesday at 10 a. m., with the Rev. M. J. Manternach in charge. Burial was made in the church cemetery west of Garner.

ROAD WORK HALTS

Hancock county highway contractors, Harry Rehm and Clare Nelson have ceased operation on the highway contracts and have hoisted their machinery for the winter. The contracts existing between Hancock county and the 2 men will be completed in the spring.

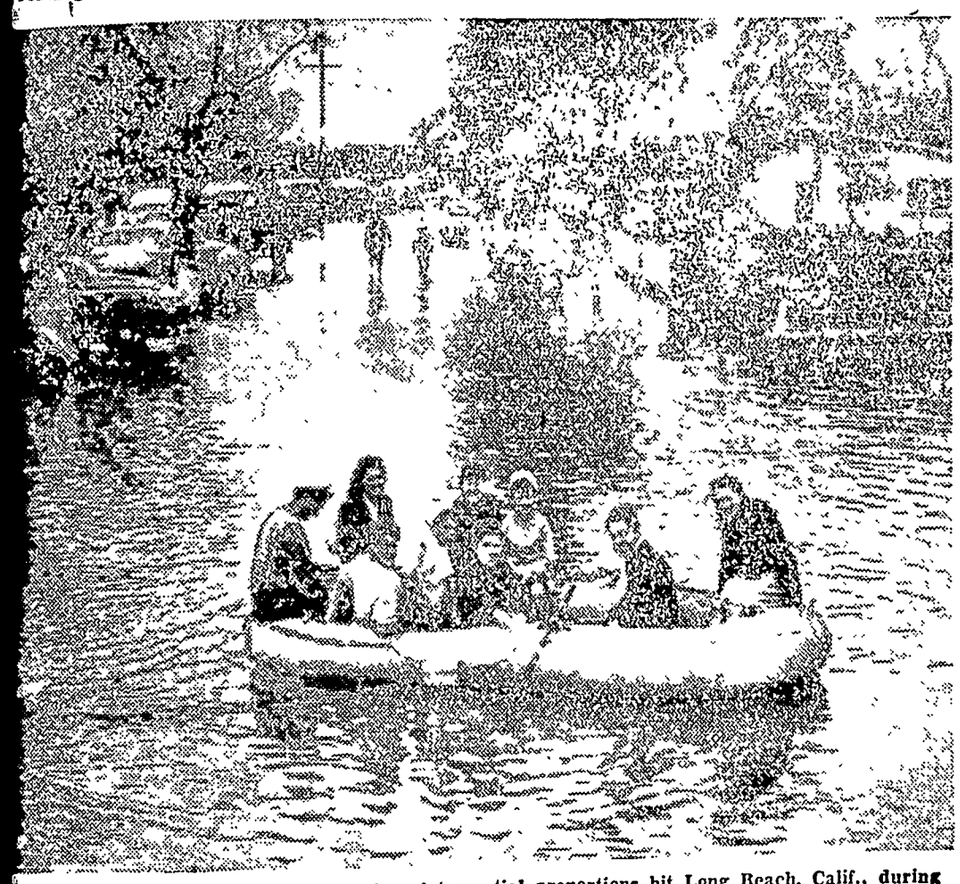
PENITENTIARY . . . Views of the rodeo staged in the Texas state penitentiary at Huntsville was provided by women prisoners, who call themselves the "Goree Gals." Bert Stonehocker and his mule were in the cast to provide laughs. Bert was released from the penitentiary the day before the rodeo. Racing, roping and wild mare milking contests all contributed to make the rodeo a success. Profits go into a general fund to provide for the rehabilitation program.



FLOOD WEATHER . . . When freak rains of torrential proportions hit Long Beach, Calif., during one of California's stormy weather, the northern section of Long Beach was flooded with upwards of two feet of water. Here lifeguards use navy plane crash boat to evacuate inhabitants of a trailer park.

SOLD VET RE-ENTERS ARMY . . . Pleas of a one-armed veteran, M/Sgt. Richard Montgomery, Pittsburgh, Pa., to Gen. Eisenhower for permission to resume his army service were granted by the army chief of staff to welcome back into service 1,000 of disabled combat veterans for limited service. Maj. Gen. Witsell, left, administered oath to Montgomery, right, as he was sworn into the army as the first disabled combat veteran under the service.

OLDEST HERO . . . Austin Denham, 96, of Los Angeles, believed to be the oldest living holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, recently was presented a citizenship medal by members of Bellarmine-Jefferson guards.

CARPET GOES TO MECCA . . . One of the most picturesque of Moslem ceremonies, the departure of the Holy Carpet for Mecca, took place in Cairo, Egypt, recently. Here is the carpet, loaded on a camel, just before the departure. Every year the Egyptian government sends to Arabia gifts which are to adorn Mecca's shrines. Most important of these is the Holy Carpet, a huge black brocade, embroidered with gold thread which is laid over Ka'Aba.

MAY LEAD REDS . . . Maurice Thonez, head of the Communist party of France, whose party won 168 seats in the national assembly, the largest number of any single party.

THE hot spot of baseball in 1947 will be the Yankees—the Yankees and Larry MacPhail. For both are hot spots.

Even with a team that finished third last season, the Yankees smashed all past attendance records by an incredible marg.n They were the first major league team in history to pass the two million mark with a few hundred thousand to spare.

Bucky Harris

But what about 1947? The new manager of the Yankees, Bucky Harris, is one of the best in baseball. His assistant is Charlie Dressen of the Dodgers, who, among the insiders, is given almost equal credit with Leo Durocher for the remarkable showing of the Dodgers last season.

Dressen is one of the most underrated men in baseball. He has proved in the past to be an able manager and he has proved with Brooklyn's nimble Dodgers that he could slip into the second slot and still be a star.

The combination of Harris and Dressen should give the Yankees ranking class at the top. Their next problem will be a ball club that can handle the Red Sox-Tiger threat in 1947.

MacPhail is not the type to accept a third-place brand with what you might call equanimity. MacPhail is too fiery and keen a personage to accept the general verdict that it will take two or three years to bring the Yankees from the barren lands into the uplands, which they held and defended for so long a time.

A team that has Robinson as catcher, plus an able infield—Heinrich at first, Stirnweiss at second, Rizzuto at short and Brown at third—plus DiMaggio, Keller and others in the outfield, can't go badly two years in a row.

What about the pitching? One answer is that Yankee pitching allowed fewer earned runs last season than any other club except the Cardinals.

New men will be added and the present guess is that the Yankees of 1947 will be a long leap beyond the Yankees of 1946. Their hitless postwar dip should be over by now, especially with such normally good hitters as DiMaggio, Rizzuto, Stirnweiss and Heinrich.

The Army-Navy Game

Pomp and pageant still mean a lot to this country. Army and Navy at Philadelphia will be a sellout for 104,000 spectators, even if Army figures to win by 40 to 0. Which Army won't do.

While it appears as though there has never been an Army-Navy game that looked as one-sided, it must be remembered that Navy still has good football players. Navy has had a rough road this season, but so has Army. It will be different after 1946. Navy next fall probably will return better material than Army will have.

Navy is taking her postwar shellacking now. Navy already is passing through her major depression. Army still has one to face, as far as anyone can see. Any team that loses Blanchard, Davis, Foldberg, Poole, Tucker, Fuson and Enos, with only two replacements left from the 1946 starting team, must stare into the shadows for some time to come.

Army-Navy games are always closer than they figure to be. A year ago, Army ran up 21 points against Navy in the early going. Everyone looked for a 40 to 0 count. But after that first crash, Navy had the better of the argument in the last two periods.

So there not only will be an Army-Navy game, but also 104,000 spectators will be on hand to see it. And it can be a much closer meeting than one might predict.

Football vs. Baseball

No matter how peaceful the skyline seems to be, there is always someone taking the joy out of life. Now an inquisitive correspondent wants to know which game draws the greater number of people—football or baseball. He also asks for an exact check on this count.

For one thing, baseball has a far longer season—five and a half months against two and a half months. For another thing there are close to 200 football teams with varying degrees of real drawing power as compared to a considerable less number of baseball teams that can match this collection at the gate.

Big league baseball last season drew close to 18 million customers through the turnstiles. The Yankees drew well over two million admissions in 154 games. No college or pro football team can match this count in nine or 10 games.

Army, Notre Dame, Michigan, Navy, Pennsylvania and Ohio State are among the leaders this fall. They should average around 400,000 spectators each. For example, Army drew 86,000 at Michigan, 80,000 against Notre Dame, 75,000 against Pennsylvania, and will play before 100,000 against Navy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for December 8

PAUL ADMONISHES THE CHURCHES

LESSON TEXT—I Corinthians 11:20-27; Romans 13:13, 14; Ephesians 5:18-21.

MEMORY SELECTION—Let us walk honestly, as in the day.—Romans 13:13.

Temperance is readily taught from the epistles of Paul for he was constantly moved by the Holy Spirit to exhort the churches and individual Christians to a careful and worthy walk before God.

In doing so he was not afraid to speak plainly about the use of intoxicants Perhaps his brethren in the ministry today should consider him and take courage.

Our lesson is a temperance lesson, and since some twist that word "temperance" to fit almost any kind of indulgence, we should like to quote a careful evaluation of it by Dr W R White:

"Temperance is a seriously misunderstood word. The best definition we know defines it as abstaining from that which is harmful, and using moderately that which is legitimate. We would not advise a man to be moderate in teasing a rattlesnake. We would not tell him that it is all right to steal, lie or commit adultery just so he is temperate about it. We would not tell a man to use dope moderately. . . . We could tell a man to be moderate about eating meat or any other wholesome thing."

The only way to be temperate about liquor is to let it alone!

I. The Wrong Way and the Right Way—in the Church (I Cor. 11:20-27).

There were a number of disorderly things about the Corinthian church which needed correction. One of these concerned the Lord's Supper. A time which should have given them a blessed unity in fellowship and love had become just the opposite.

It was their custom to eat a so-called love feast before the sacrament, and instead of making it a time of loving and sharing, the rich ate their sumptuous meals and let a poor brother gnaw on a crust of bread.

Then feasting led, as it so often does, to excesses. Some became drunken on the wine and even partook of the Lord's Supper while intoxicated.

We are not so much concerned with the Lord's Supper in this lesson as we are with the behavior of those who attended. Think of coming to the holy table drunk! It seems impossible, and yet it happened.

Do we not still let the poor in our midst shift pretty well for themselves? The rich flaunt their affluence and let the poor get along on their crust of bread. The church needs to renew its scriptural appreciation of what fellowship and communion really means.

II. The Wrong Way and the Right Way—in the Community (Rom. 13: 13, 14).

This chapter of the epistle to the Romans concerns the right behavior of the believer in his civic relationships. He is a citizen of heaven, but he is also a citizen of the community in which he lives.

The use of intoxicants which a generation ago was a shameful thing is now generally accepted. The home in which liquor was served was a disgrace; now "cocktail" is one of the first words children learn.

What is the explanation? Is liquor any less destructive and demoralizing? Certainly not! Is it then true that people are more candid and open about what they do? No, it is rather that moral standards have slipped to the point where they are no longer ashamed when they should be, if they thought straight!

Along with the liquor go all the things enumerated in verse 13. Oh, the awful depth of sex degradation, of plain ordinary indecency and dishonesty, of strife and envy. It is not a nice picture, but it is true.

The right way is found in verse 14. It was reading these two verses in his mother's open Bible that led Augustine to Christ. He saw and took the right way. Will others do likewise?

III. The Wrong Way and the Right Way—in the Heart (Eph. 5:18-21).

This is a personal matter. The man or woman who finds satisfaction in wine wants the overcoming power of the narcotic influence to take away the sense of responsibility for life. It is a weak and hopeless way to avoid facing reality.

The right way is to let the Holy Spirit take full control of the heart and life. This is to be an experience of complete surrender, being "filled with the Spirit."

Does life then become drab and uninteresting? No, indeed! For the first time you will be really joyful.

That inevitably leads to thankfulness, a grace too little known and practiced. It is for all things at all times. Do not overlook that fact. Then too there will be a delightful attitude of consideration and respect for one another (v. 21) and of devotion to God.

Loud Speaker in Plane

A little known wartime development of the U. S. navy was a loudspeaker system for giving orders from an airplane to persons on the ground.

Weighing 500 pounds, the device enables a man flying at 10,000 feet to be heard by everyone within an eight-square-mile area beneath him.

Your Christmas shopping problem is eased considerably if you have smokers on your list! Select a carton of mild cigarettes or a package of choice smoking tobacco for these friends—practical gifts they are sure to use and enjoy. PUBLIC NOTICE

Due to the present coal situation it has become necessary for the Civil Production Administration to call a brown out.

From the Civil Production "instructions," article 7, Street lighting should not be used in excess of the amount determined by public authority to be necessary for public safety.

We were read a telegram from the Central States Electric Company and the lights should not be tuned on before six fifteen P. M.

We disregarded this order, regarding it a safety measure, to have the streetlights on in the evening, when so many were on their way home, and to conserve on the lights after midnight and morning.

But we received a telephone call yesterday from Central States Electric Company, that if we did not comply with their order we would be subject to Federal prosecution. Rather than a test suit we have complied, and there will be no street lights before 6:15 P. M., until the restrictions are lifted.

EARLY CHICKS RAISED IN IOWA ON INCREASE

Iowa poultry raisers are shifting to more early chicks, a wartime gain likely to continue, reports Ralph Baker, Iowa State marketing specialist.

Baker says that in 1940 obout 32 million chicks were hatched in Iowa from February through March. In 1945 the number hatched in these months had climbed to 56 million. The 1946 figure was 58 million.

This year only 25 million chicks were hatched from May through July, compared with 44 million in 1945 and 34 million in 1940. Feed shortage caused some of the cut.

Baker points out that as a result of earlier hatching and generally better management, Iowa producers have been getting more fall and winter eggs. In the 5-year period, 1935-39, Iowa hens laid an average of 27 eggs each during the 5 months of October through February. By 1945 this number was up to 46 eggs.

Reports from hatcheries indicate that some already have sold all the chicks they can hatch in February, March and April next year. Baker says this means that producers who want early chicks from better hatcheries will need to order soon.

With the possibility that chicken prices may drop sharply next fall, there is an added need to buy chicks early next spring.

AROUND IOWA

BAD BEGINNING

Recently Charles Jones purchased the Drive-in-Market at Clarinda from William Rodgers. Almost before the ink was dry on the contract, fire broke out in the market, gutting the interior. All stock was a total loss, partially covered by insurance.

LOST HIS WAY

While Hugh Hunter of Searsboro was working around his barn one day last week, a young man materialized out of a near by corn field. The visitor said he was flying to Newton but had lost his way and made a landing nearby to inquire. On being assured that Newton was nearby, the young man climed back into his plane and soon was on his way.

LOST ARM

Melvin Ross, of Libertyville, lost an arm in a hunting accident recently. His right arm was across the muzzle of a shotgun when the latter was accidently discharged, causing loss of the arm and severe injuries to Melvin's left hand which was also in the way of the blast. Two fingers on the left hand were amputated.

66 CUPS

Ralph Whipple, of Indianola, paid a visit to Washington last week and was elected president of the Washington "Coffee Club." A group of business men in Washington constitute the club, having coffe together each morning and always invite one stranger to join them. The stranger is always elected "president" of the club, after which he learns that the president always pays the bill. Mr. Whipple's unexpected honor cost him 66 cups of coffee.

WRONG MAN

At Lemars, Ralph Doud, who operates an elevator, got a number of telephone calls extending sympathy for the fact that his elevator had been destroyed by fire. As it turned out, Mr. Doud's elevator is still intact but an elevator belonging to another Ralph Doud, in Dakota, had burned and folks were confused by the radio news announcment.

FOUND BY PLANE

Ehrn, son of John Carbough of Little Sioux was killed by a train, search was immediately made for Mr. Carbough, who was known to be on a trapping expedition along the Boyer River. When telephone calls to residents along the river failed to locate Mr. Carbough, Leland McMahon, Denison flyer, was pressed into service and quicly located the trapper along the river bank.

FELL INTO BUZZ SAW

Anthony Klootwk, 68, of Boyden, was attempting to lift a heavy piece of wood when he lost his balance and fell into a buzz-saw, receiving a deep gash through his collar-bone and shoulder. Death followed about two weeks later due to heart condition brought on by the wound which was healing nicely.

SKUNK

Algona police are very unhappy. Someone killed a skunk, and threw the carcass into the police car, which was fortunately unoccupied at the time. When the depredation was discovered, the Algona force immediatly launched a hot pursuit of the culprit — on foot.

KILLED

When his clothing caught on the power take-off of a corn picker being operated by his father, five year old Charles Meyers, of near Iowa City, was killed instantly.

LOST HIS FINGER

At Iowa Falls, Lee Hart stuck his finger into his shot gun barrel to clean some dirt out of it. The gun accidentally discharged, and Mr. Hart is now minus a finger.

RESCUED HUNTERS

Adel is proud this week of Barney Smith, well known former resident who with a companion saved the lives of three hunters who were caught in a snow slide on the Big Horn mountains in Wyoming. Had not the rescuers arrived in time, the three hunters would probably have perished by freezing within another hour or two.

BRUISES IN STOCK CAN BE AVOIDED

Jabbing livestock with a pitchfork may speed loading, but it's also a good way to waste meat and lose money.

County extension director Paul Henderson says the figures on pounds of meat wasted annually, because of bruises and injuries to livestock, are appalling. Recent figures show that 150 million pounds of meat are made unfit for human food each year because of bruising alone. That is enough meat to feed 400,000 people for a year.

The sad part about those figures, Henderson says, is that most of the loss could be avoided. Much of the damage is done during loading and marketing. Rough handling, inadequate loading chutes, nails or sharp objects in trucks, pens or fences, overcrowding, slippery floors--all contribute to the damage.

Now, with meat almost impossible to buy, extra effort is needed to market sound beef, pork, and mutton. Patience and common sense are the two main ingredients in the formula for handling livestock on and off the farm.

CLINTON, BENTON LEAD IN ALL PARTS OF IOWA

Clinton and Benton oats outyielded all other varieties compared with them in Iowa community grain trials this year, according to Iowa State College agronomist. But Gopher and Iowa 105 forged ahead of the newer Tama and Boone varieties in the three major areas of the state this year.

The reasons, say the argonomists, are the Helminthosporium blight, which attacked Boone and Tama, and the fact that rust was not bad enough to cut the yield of Gopher and Iowa 105 as it does in most seasons.

Marion oats, which were released about the same time as Boone and Tama, continued to outyield Gopher and Iowa 105 except in central Iowa trials. Marion is apparently resistant to Helminthosporium, along with Clinton and Benton.

The trial results show that in northern Iowa, Clinton yielded an average of 81.4 per acre; Marion, 76.7; Gopher, 75.5; Iowa 105, 69.7; Tama, 64; and Boone, 60.8

In central sections the average was Clinton, 82.9; Gopher, 78.8; Iowa, 105, 73.7; Tama, 66.2; and Boone, 60.3. Southern Iowa yields were Clinton, 69.6, Marion, 69.4; Gopher, 68.9; Iowa 105, 64.8; Tama, 58.1; and Boone, 52.9.

In the 4-year average, 1943-46, however, Gopher and Iowa 105 still rank at the bottom in all sections except southeastern Iowa, the agronomists point out.

Because seed treatment appears to give substantially increased yields when Helminthosporium is present, and because rust so frequently cuts the yield of such varieties as Gopher and Iowa 105, the agronomists believe that planting treated Boone, Tama, Control or Vicland seed next year will be preferable to seeding the older varieties.

The best bet, of course, is to plant Clinton, Benton or Marion if at all possible.

DIED IN WELL

When the wall of a pasture well in which he was working caved in, Dale Cross, State Center farm worker, was caught under several hundred pounds of dirt and died of suffocation. Cross was at the bottom of the shallow well eight feet deep. Efforts of Paul Benner, his employer, to rescue him were unavailing and it was necessary to call neighbors.

1-FOOT EARS PRODUCED BY A NEW CORN INBRED

The continuous probing of scientists into the mysteries of corn breeding has injected still another note into the ever-changing picture of corn production.

Dr. G. F. Sprague, USDA senior argronomist working at Iowa State College, has come up with a new inbred which for the past 2 years has produced ears of corn which average a foot in length.

Not only are the ears of unusual size for an inbred, but the strain also is extremely stiff-stalked. And in single cross it has been the highest yielding of any variety at the college.

While the inbred still is classed only as a "hopeful," Sprague says it may point the way to making possible the production of hybred corn on a single cross basis—that is, the crossing of two strains.

Almost all of the commercial hybreds now produced are double crosses, or the result of crossbreeding two single crosses.

Should the large ear size of the new inbred make a single cross production practical, much of the time and labor needed to produce hybred seed corn could be eliminated. And farm production of hybred seed would become more practical.

The new inbred strain, known as 1427, was developed from a stiff-stalked "synthetic," which to the plant breeder inplies it was made up from a group of various inbred lines. The synthetic was then selfpollinated for 6 years.

Sprague says that none of the new inbred seed is yet available and may not be in quanity for some time.

MORE COMETITION SEEN SOON FOR IOWA LUMBER

Richard Campbell, Iowa State College forester, warns that the current conditions of a "seller's" market in native lumber cannot last indefinitely, and says the wise operator will take advantage of the present opportunity to put his program on a sound, long-time basis.

If this is done, Campbell says, the operator will be able to meet the keener competition which is certain to result when lumber demands return to normal.

Meanwhile, the forester points out, Iowa timber production is on its way toward setting a new all-time high. A record was set last year with a cut of more than 72 million board feet. The previous high in native lumber cut was 68 million board feet in 1889.

Campbell says official figures have not yet been released on this year's cut. But a tentative estimate for the first 7 months of the year places it at about 44½ million board feet. If the trend continues, the cut will exceed that of last year by several million feet.

New wood-using industries have come into the state, Campbell says, and wood-using industries in surrounding states need Iowa lumber.

WATER HEATER AID TO CLEAN MILK AND CREAM

To take a lot of the drudgery out of farm dairying, to save time and money and to help insure that the milk and cream produced will be marketable, a hot water heater in the milkhouse is hard to beat.

In pointing this out, A. W. Rudnick, Iowa State dairy specialist, says such a heater need not be expensive to do the job. Several low-cost heaters, priced from $2 to $15, already are on the market. Most of them are of the type to be immersed in water.

The need for having plenty of hot water handy in the milkhouse has been emphasized this fall, Rudnick says, because of the penalities for marketing dirty milk and cream.

Any plant which markets its products out of the state becomes subject to federal pure food laws. When inspectors find local plants accepting milk or cream which fails to measure up to standards of cleanliness, they can revoke the plant's privilege of sending its products out of Iowa. The effect of this would be the closing of the creamery in many cases, Rudnick says. And because of the threat, local plants will be forced to return milk and cream which fails to meet federal standards.

K. H. S. HONOR ROLL

With the close of the second six weeks in Klemme High School, twenty seven students found themselves on the Honor Roll as they took their report cards home for Thanksgiving turkey and two days vacation from pencil, books, and teacher's nasty looks.

The minimum requirement for admittance to the Honor Roll is that a grade of B or better is obtained in all subjects.

Of passing interest is the fact that only three of the twenty seven are boys.

At the top of scholastic endeavour our freshman Gloria Haefner, sophomore Donna Fjetland, and senior Phyllis Christiance were tied with four A grades apiece.

In the category of Three A's and one B the senior class was represented by Ivan Blumer, Marcille Josten, and Lois Ann Lau; the sophomores by Phyllis Boland; the freshman by Luella Priebe.

Fresman Ruth Janssen and Lillian Wille; senior Clarence Larsen; and junior La Vonne Beier received two A's and two B's.

The junior class was well represented in the one A catagory with Alice Anderson, Beulah Goll, Esther Klinge, and Erdene Nelson placing. Darlene Etchen and Marin Kastler, freshman; Norma Early, sophomores; and Dean Jacobs, senior represented their classes.

The students who received a grade of B in all subjects are Beverly Beier, freshman; Isabelle Gibbs and Marjorie Lau, sophomores; Ruth Kurtz, junior; and Peggy Lou Coobs, Emily Lou Johnson, and Jean Kurtz, seniors.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

How to Stop Worrying

I guess folks in our town do about as much worrying as in yours—over housing and prices, and crops, and jobs—and the little domestic problems that are always coming up.

Dad Hoskins, who's lived to the happy age of eighty, has a simple formula for stopping worry. About every problem, he asks himself: Is there anything I can do about it? If there is, he never postpones making a decision, or taking necessary action.

If there isn't anything he can do about it, he sets aside a "worrying hour" after dinner, and gets his worrying over in one concentrated period. When that's over, he relaxes over a friendly glass of beer with Ma Hoskins—and they talk about pleasant things together, until bedtime.

From where I sit, that's as workable a formula as you could find . . . right down to the mellow glass of beer that seems to wink away your worries.

Worker's Role in Politics Analyzed

Labor's Interests Fused With Average Citizen's

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — "There never will be a Labor party in the U. S."

In the aftermath of the election, I couldn't help cogitating these words, spoken to me several years ago by an official who helped write some of the most important New Deal labor legislation a decade ago.

Baukhage

The reasons given were that workers in America were individuals first and members of labor unions afterward—they were primarily citizens with group interests common to other citizens. They didn't look at themselves as a political unit.

In analyzing the new congress, some people have made the mistake of pointing to the defeat of candidates conspicuously endorsed by the CIO-PAC and the victory of those marked for purge. Then, because the PAC is an institution which has behind it one of the two big international union organizations, these people imply that because of the defeat of the PAC, labor itself was defeated. As a matter of fact, labor was not beaten by any opposing group. It was not a question of labor, politically organized, meeting organized political opposition. It was a case of a lot of men who happen to belong to unions plus a lot of others who don't going to the polls and utterly disregarding the wishes of a group which had tried to attach itself to the labor union and thus proving (as my friend said) that American labor is an American citizen first and a lot of other things next and when he sits in his union meeting he is a member of that local and not a member of a political party.

I haven't the slightest doubt that many an American citizen, who otherwise might not have voted, did so because of the energetic efforts of persons inspired by the CIO-PAC booklets and contacts, the chief aim of which was to get voters to the polls. I am equally certain that of these voters who exercised their franchise chiefly because of CIO-PAC nudging, many voted quite the opposite to what the CIO-PAC wished.

GOP Win Stems From Many Causes

But this election was something more than a revolt against the frank effort of CIO to reward those who had espoused specific measures or to punish those who didn't. When Guffy, Mead and Murdock were mowed down in the senate, men who certainly spoke the speech as labor considered it should be spoken, when 20 congressmen, marked for the purge at the PAC meeting in Atlantic City last spring, were all re-elected with one exception (and that was Representative Slaughter, beaten by the President's own special efforts in the primaries); when things like that happen, you know that plenty of perfectly good union members in perfectly good standing were voting against the preachments of the PAC. Perhaps if it had not been for two other circumstances PAC's views might not have been so vehemently opposed up and down the line. Both have to do with good old American customs which spring from frontier days when emergency situations had to be met with emergency measures for the sake of simple self-preservation. One of those customs which has precedent implied all through the constitution is that too much power isn't good for anybody, and in a republic you don't elect people for life, or put one party in power indefinitely.

That is one thing that accounted for most of the votes against the "ins" regardless of the candidates' persuasions. Another factor which added to the landslide quality of the vote is the old law of action and reaction. Americans have a habit of going to extremes. They have certain tastes inherited from pioneers that make them like their music loud, their horses fast, their stakes high, their goals worth winning. They are not as fast to start either a fight or a frolic as some nations, but when they do get "het up"—oh, my! Failure to recognize that fact has caused what was the greatest military nation of its time to be licked twice in a generation.

It was this characteristic, I feel sure, which caused Americans of all sorts to swing much farther toward the conservative side than they normally would have done. Their patience had been exhausted by the efforts of a screaming minority to implant Communism on our soil and thus attempt to bring to this country the very thing from which America was supposed to be the escape, tyranny of the minority.

Of late it has become the style to sneer at the majority. The "vulgar herd" and the "mob" were the contemptuous epithets of kings. The modern majority-scorner is more careful of his language. He phrases it so that it will appeal to the "peasant and worker" or to the readers of persuasive and expensive page advertisements in metropolitan papers. The language differs when it comes from the extreme right and the extreme left, but its purpose is the same: minority rule. Totalitarianism as produced by a Hitler or a Stalin is not too different from that more subtly suggested by the powerful pressure group in a capitalistic country.

The 80th congress has a tougher job than the 79th. We hope it will be able to handle it. It was not elected to smash labor. It was elected to carry out a mandate (among others) to help keep labor from smashing itself.

Parties Split On Hot Issues

It may be that after the next election we can get down to the old party lines again, but it can't be done yet. There is still a pretty bad scrambling of Democrats and Republicans on many issues which will split parties as it has before.

It will be a relief if we do get back to honest labels again.

The British are still having their troubles on this score. The Conservatives, who are the "outs," have discussed changing their name. They have done it before. They have been known as the "Tory," the "Unionist" and the "National" as well as the "Conservative." Sir Hartley Shawcross, brilliant British prosecutor, taunted them about this recently and even went as far as calling them "neo-Nazis."

This sounded strange from those dignified lips which hurled one of the most restrained and yet most devastating charges against the Nuernberg war criminals that I have ever heard in a courtroom.

Marianne Forgives Fritz

'Twas the day after Christmas in Frankfurt, Germany, 1945, when all through the ether there was static enough to make a trans-Atlantic broadcast impossible. I had an exclusive story, so I sent it as a dispatch to David Wills, my substitute, in Washington.

The story (I said in my dispatch) would probably be denied, and I admitted it seemed incredible, for it revealed a plan of the French government to help re-populate France by admitting German war prisoners to citizenship. It seemed impossible, that, with the ancient Franco-German hatred so recently fanned to new fury, Marianne would take her "traditional enemy" to her bosom.

The story was broadcast and that was the end, until, some 10 months later, it was confirmed in a matter-of-fact statement of the French minister of population, then touring America.

A copy of the original dispatch which I exhumed from the files reflects my feeling in its incredibility as I stood amidst the ruins of a German city with the memories of a twice-devastated France clear in my mind. The idea now apparently is accepted without comment.

How well the plan will succeed, I do not know. But to me it is a comforting thought that it has been proposed because it shows so clearly how war hates are artificial things, and bear no part in the relationships between individuals.

WISDOM OF AGE, CHARM OF YOUTH . . . This study of the blending of youth and age in friendship shows silver-haired Tom Davis, legal counsel for Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, intoning a bedtime prayer for a young friend, Frank Adler Jr., aged two, at Miami. For his words of wisdom, Davis is rewarded by the winsome charm of his young friend.

NEWS REVIEW

Decontrol Boosts Prices; Polar Jaunt Scheduled

Price rises all along the line accompanied decontrol of the nation's economy, with producers hiking items for full coverage of higher wages and material costs and promising lower prices when output reached volume proportions.

Biggest manufacturer in the industry, International Harvester boosted prices of farm implements and tractors 9 per cent to offset wage increases amounting to 60 per cent since 1941 and higher material costs. Declaring its intention of keeping prices at a minimum, the company stated that it based its increases on present costs and did not anticipate future higher operating expenses.

Zenith Radio corporation announced an increase of from 2 to 20 per cent on radios and radio - phonograph combinations.

Leading shoe manufacturers expected a 10 per cent rise in all standard lines as a result of the increase in the cost of hides from 15½ cents a pound to 30 cents.

Previously, General Motors and Crosley had boosted the price of passenger cars by $100 and industry spokesmen predicted increases in some steel items, building materials, clothing, batteries and lumber.

Long held within rigid ceilings despite mounting janitorial and maintenance expenses, landlords petitioned for a 15 per cent boost in rentals. An estimated 16 million housing units have been under rental control in addition to hotels, rooming houses and tourist camps.

HIGH JUMP: Important Operation

Amid rumors that other nations were preparing expeditions to search for reported uranium deposits around the south pole, the U. S. announced that Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd would lead a navy contingent to Antarctica in December on a scientific study.

While Byrd's force will make exhaustive geological surveys in the polar wasteland to uncover any uranium, the famed explorer declared that his band also would undertake intensive studies of geographical, meteorological and electro-magnetic conditions. Weather developing in Antarctica affects all parts of the world.

Four thousand men, 12 ships and at least a score of aircraft will compose Byrd's operation High Jump, as the expedition will be known. No part of the task force will be kept in the region during the Antarctic winter, but Byrd will establish a small base capable of supporting a small party for 18 months in the event of national need.

PANAMA CANAL: Study Alteration

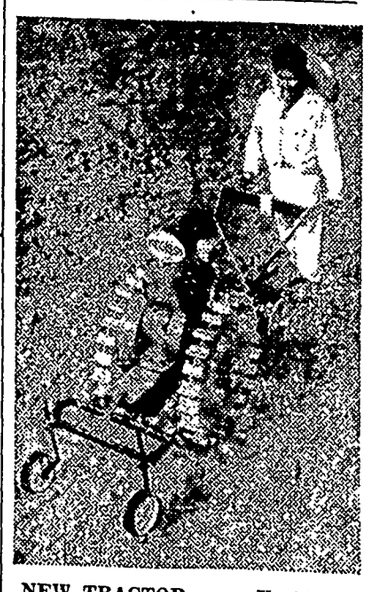
Working under a special congressional grant, top meteorologists and hydrodynamic, dredge and excavation engineers are busily engaged in studying the alteration of the existing Panama canal or construction of a new waterway to accommodate heavier modern traffic and decrease vulnerability to atomic warfare.

Erected at the turn of the century, the canal's narrow channel and locks are too small for the latest warships and merchant vessels. Water storage capacity of Gatun lake reservoir will be insufficient to handle prospective traffic by 1960 or a diversion of traffic from Suez canal in event that vital artery is closed by war.

To meet modern needs engineers are considering increasing size of reservoirs, lengthening locks from 1,000 to 1,500 feet and widening them from 110 to 200 feet. Against these plans, some technicians argue that it would be better to build a new canal with fewer curves and wider turns. However, it would be necessary to clear the bordering jungle, install sanitary facilities, and erect dock and administrative installations. The U. S. also would have to dicker with Panama for land rights.



NEW TRACTOR . . . Unable to buy sufficient farm tractors in the United States to supply the demand, Progreso Industrial de Mexico had this tractor designed and built for sale south of the border. It will run on gasoline, kerosene or cleaning solvent.

PRODUCTION AT PEAK

More Work Urged To Fill Needs

WASHINGTON. — To meet its mushrooming industrial needs, the nation will have to work harder or return to longer working hours, the government warned.

Although the nation's economy is running at top peacetime speed, demand for most products still is unsatisfied, an agriculture department report maintained. Harder work or longer hours, the report added, appear as the only means of boosting industrial production.

Shortages Persist.

"Production of many basic materials is now near capacity, demobilization is virtually completed and unemployment is now at a level generally considered to be close to a practical minimum," it said.

"Further substantial increases in industrial production will have to be attained to a larger extent by longer hours of work and by more output per worker."

The report said the September index of industrial production stood at 177 per cent of the prewar base 1935-39 and five per cent higher than September, 1945.

"Despite large increases in the production of almost all types of consumer and producer goods, acute shortages persisted in various key lines," it added.

Incomes Still Soar.

Individual income payments, meanwhile, are soaring to new highs. In August, allowing for seasonal adjustments, the national income hit a new record level of $169,500,000,000. This was three per cent above the wartime peak hit in February, 1945.

Part of the increase was attributed to the fact that some workers already are working longer hours. Average work week in all manufacturing industries in August was 40.3 hours.

Coupled with an average wage of $1.11 an hour, this brought the typical manufacturing paycheck to $44.61 a week, six per cent lower than the wartime peak of $47.50 in January, 1945, but nine per cent higher than the $40.87 in September, 1945.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Tiny Vermont Town Picked As Symbol of World Peace

WNU Features

POWNAL CENTER, VT.—For the first time in its history, Pownal Center is on a map larger than that of its own township. A few weeks ago Pownal Center was not even considered a wide place in the road—today it is internationally famous as the epitome of the deep and abiding peace the United States hopes to achieve for the whole world.

Selected as a typical quiet rural scene to symbolize peace, a picture of Pownal Center recently was reproduced on the back cover of the United Nations Weekly Bulletin.

If the U.N. had appointed a learned committee of experts to search the world over for a serene and peaceful community as a world model, it could not have arrived at a more perfect choice than Pownal Center.

Peaceful Community.

The old, white New England church lifts its octagonal steeple above a community in which there is neither juke box, pool hall, hot-dog emporium, corner drugstore or motion picture theater.

Its handful of old homes, its church, a one-room schoolhouse, a garage, a couple of filling stations, a little grocery store, a roadside souvenir shop, some neat tourist cabins, a crumbling, pre-revolutionary cemetery and an ancient inn strung along the highway — these comprise the center.

No one is very rich in Pownal Center and no one is very poor. It is essentially a farming community.

The township meeting is held annually in March. People from all over the township crowd into Pownal Center's union church, built in 1789. There the citizens of the township elect the three selectmen, who govern the whole community, as well as all other elective officers. In open meeting, they thresh out the matter of local taxes, road improvements and school matters.

Peace Is Unmarred.

In the six years he has been sheriff, Arthur H. Bourke hasn't had to jail anyone.

While the rest of the world is plagued with juvenile delinquency, Pownal Center with her 150 inhabitants sits back and wonders why the center has never had a case of juvenile delinquency.

It would be quite true, in one sense, to say that nothing ever happens in Pownal Center. Nothing, that is, but the ebb and flow of the seasons and the ebb and flow of life itself, of births, marriages and deaths.

Nestled in Hoosic valley and hemmed in by mountains on both the east and west, Pownal Center is linked with postwar realities only through the rushing traffic of Ethan Allen highway.

Servicemen Return.

But there is no isolation in the world today, even for a community that epitomizes peace. Out of the community's 150 inhabitants, 11 men and one young woman served in the armed forces during World War II. Now all the men are home again, the community rejoicing that all are safe, and the girl, married to a naval officer during the war, lives in Virginia.

Few residents of the center believe that the atom bomb will ever shatter the peace of their own little valley. What really worries them is what the bomb will do for the rest of the world.

Scientists To Note A-Bomb Anniversary

WASHINGTON.—The Atomic Age was born December 2, 1942, according to official decision of the army. On that day, under the west stands of Stagg field at University of Chicago, scientists in the Manhattan project's metallurgical laboratory made a nuclear reactor work for the first time, proving that man can release and control energy.

As a result of the army's decision, December 2 will be observed as the anniversary of an event "which was a milestone in the advancement of science," according to Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, director of the Manhattan project, the army's atomic energy organization.

A special anniversary meeting will be held in Chicago December 2 by the Argonne laboratory, successor of the Chicago metallurgical laboratory, and 25 participating universities.

Police Join Collection Craze; Seek Collector

BALTIMORE, MD. — Some people collect stamps, pipes or war souvenirs. Someone in south Baltimore apparently collects hub caps. As the latest addition to his collection, he collected eight in a single block one night. Now police have served notice they may become collectors themselves. They plan to collect a hub cap collector.

Christmas Club Fund Reaches Peak Figure

NEW YORK.—Christmas club depositors will receive a record total of $124,557,464 from their accounts in mutual savings banks this year, according to the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. The total, representing accumulations of 1,761,377 depositors, is 13 million dollars higher than in 1945. Average distribution this year is $70.72 per account.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

AIRPORT CHATTER

Former combat fliers in the Philadelphia area have formed a pilots' club. Purposes of the club are to give veterans an opportunity to keep abreast of latest aviation developments and to participate in hangar flying, air carnivals and barnstorming tours. . . . The word "Glenwood" has been painted on top of the Glenwood, Iowa, armory for benefit of air traffic. The sign includes numerals giving distances to the nearest airport, Council Bluffs, and the nearest paved landing field, Omaha. . . . Using materials salvaged from two barracks on an old civilian conservation camp site, Montrose, Colo., is constructing a new hangar at its municipal airport. The hangar's specifications are designed for storage of eight planes. . . . The airport operated at Clarinda, Iowa, by Ray Schenck has been approved by Civil Aeronautics commission, and 10 students are learning to fly under the G.I. Bill of Rights. . . . Sundance, Wyo., has completed its air marker, the first in that section of Wyoming and third in the state for non-commercial airports. The marker has the name "Sundance" in letters 10 feet high and information indicating direction and distance to the Sundance airport. . . . Nevada, Mo., dedicated its new municipal airport hangar with an air circus sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Prizes were awarded the oldest and youngest visiting pilots and the pilot coming the longest distance. Spot landing and paper cutting contests were other attractions.

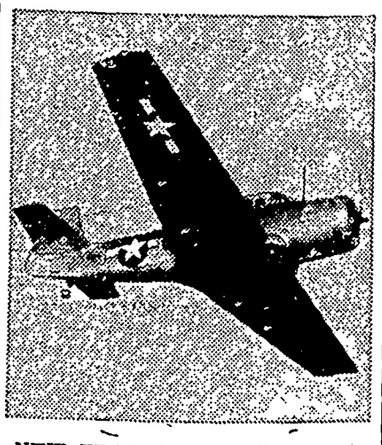
RECREATION CENTERS

Development of airports as recreation centers for small towns and rural America is envisaged in an analysis of building trends in airports.

With 3,050 new airports and 1,625 improvements already planned from a program of federal aid, in addition to almost an equal number to be built from private capital, virtually every rural family will be within easy distance of an airport.

To make their airports self-supporting, airport operators are seeking out every possible source of revenue. Additional attractions, according to present trends, will include bowling alleys, retail and service stores, and amusement concessions, providing recreational activities for the entire family.

The survey also revealed an architectural trend toward constructing airports on the "open" plan, large window areas providing spectators with an unbroken view of field operations. By encouraging spectators, the small town airport will add to its concession revenue.



NEW TRAINER . . . Representing the greatest advancement in naval primary trainers since World War I, the Fairchild XNQ-1, the navy's newest primary trainer, made its first test flight at the Fairchild Aircraft division in Hagerstown, Md. Built along the lines of a fighter, it embodies several major improvements.

AIRMAIL POST OFFICES

From a single unit operated by a lone clerk in 1927, the list of United States airmail field post offices has multiplied to 31 with 1,013 clerks. It was less than 19 years ago that the first field station on record opened its doors at Cleveland for the purpose of expediting flow of airmail, then a comparatively new domestic service although the government had been experimenting with it since 1918. Additional airmail field post offices soon were set up in other strategic cities.

e fiscal year ending June 30 was $106,846,521, representing a cost of $3.50 a year per patron.

Transportation Varies.

For years the mail was carried in buggies drawn by teams. Later specially-built, weatherproof wagons were utilized. Now, most persons on rural routes get mail delivered by automobile, of course, but there still are many routes in northern states where horses and sleighs come into use in winter and some in mountain states where horseback delivery still is in vogue.

Rural free delivery proved itself a boon to rural dwellers from the first, relieving the isolation of farm life. With more rapid distribution of newspapers and magazines, it moved not only the town but also the state, nation and world into rural communities. It saved farmers trips to towns.

Varied Services.

In the best tradition of rural mail delivery, carriers have secured aid for sick people, notified farmers that their stock was out, put in fire alarms, helped with stalled vehicles and performed innumerable other services.

The main job of R.F.D., however, is to get the mail through, and in these 50 years carriers have more than carried on the postal mandate—given in the New York post office's free translation from Herodotus, ancient Greek historian:

"Not snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

Old Revolutionary Mine Discovered

DOVER, N. J.—Discovery of an old iron mine in an unsurveyed wooded section of Picatinny arsenal's reservation recalled Revolutionary war period mining in this area. The old mine was found by two arsenal guards while posting "no gunning" signs.

Abandoned mine workings have been discovered in the four northern New Jersey counties of Morris, Warren, Sussex and Passaic. Seldom, however, are large workings uncovered that have gone unnoticed for years.

Arsenal engineering division maps reveal that Chester Iron company was one of the early owners of the abandoned mine site. Officials believe the workings may have been either the Copperas mine or Green Pond mine. Ore for cannonballs for Washington's Continental army was taken from both mines.

Aristocrats of Stock World To Be Shown at International

Famed Exhibition To Draw Entries From All States

By W. J. DRYDEN
WNU Farm Editor.

Only a few hours before the shattering blow of Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, the curtain had been rung down on the greatest International Live Stock exposition ever held in Chicago's International amphitheater.

Now, five years later, the curtain will rise on the 43rd edition of the famed International, universally heralded as the "world's greatest" livestock exposition, in the same amphitheatre setting, on November 30. The exposition, ranked as one of the leading exponents for livestock improvement, was disbanded during war years.

Revival of the International after the wartime lapse will be marked by color and fanfare at opening day ceremonies in the amphitheatre, which is the largest structure in the world devoted to livestock expositions. The show will continue until December 7.

Improved Show Seen.

All indications are that the 1946 International will far excel the one held in 1941 in all respects. Missing, however, will be B. H. Heide, for years general manager of the show. William E. Ogilvie, former assistant manager, who has been identified with the International more than 20 years, will serve as manager for 1946.

With exhibitors registered from every state, the entry list may surpass the previous high of 13,149 animals representing all leading breeds and breeders of North America. In addition the junior department, including the 4-H club, will be represented by 2,000 young breeders.

The National Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club congress is an important feature of the International. Many of the grand champion awards are carried away by the youngsters in competition with their elders. In addition, junior contests are held for the various breeds, as well as for meat animals, garden, girl's record, clothing, food preparation, canning, better methods of electrical use, home beautification, achievement, leadership, poultry, dairy foods, field crops and frozen foods. Four-H boys also will take part in the sheep shearing contest.

Big Money to Winners.

Chicago packers have available nearly six million dollars, which will be used to purchase prize animals exhibited at the International. More than $100,000 in prizes for fattest steers, hogs and sheep also will be given the winners.

Recognizing the importance of interesting young men in the study and improvement of breeds, special livestock judging contests, both collegiate and non-collegiate, in which winning teams from all sections of North America will compete, have been arranged.

More than half the total entry will consist of cattle, with some 8,000 heads entered. In this division, Herefords, Aberdeen Angus and Shorthorns will be largest classes entered. Many of the national breed associations will hold their annual meetings in connection with the International. Boys and girls will be among the big winners. They have won the grand championship a total of nine times to date.

ON PARADE . . . Highlight of the 43rd International Live Stock exposition will be the cattle parade, at which all the prize-winning animals will be shown.

Bidding on all classes is expected to hit a new high. There even are hopes that the winner of the grand champion will receive more than the $40,000 given the winner at the Kansas City show.

Entries in the sheep department will pass the 900 head record, with exhibits from at least 20 states. Shortdowns are usually numerically the largest, closely followed by Shropshires and Hampshires

Stress Wool Show.

To encourage production of better wool, to stimulate interest in proper preparation of wool for market and to ascertain commercial grading of fleeces of the various breeds, special emphasis is being placed on the wool show.

This year's barrow show is expected to surpass all previous exhibitions in interest and size. This is attributed to postwar production conditions and increased interest among boys and girls. Bulk of the entries will come from the Corn Belt region. By counting the carlot entries as individuals, nearly 2,500 hogs will be entered in the International. Many of the entries will be shown by leading colleges of the nation, as in the case of cattle and sheep entries.

There may be fewer horses on the farms than 10 years ago but entries at the International will indicate no shortage. Draft horses from many states and Canada will compete for the valuable list of awards. Draft gelding show will be particularly strong. Breeders are reporting a greatly revived interest in horse breeding, which has encouraged the breeders to display their wares.

Most popular feature of the International, to the general public, is the evening horse show. Outstanding youths, harness classes, three-gaited classes, hackneys, roadsters and saddle classes will be shown. Shetlands, harness horses, hunters and jumpers will put on a show that has seen few equals.

Arrange Displays.

With 4-H clubs, commercial organizations and U. S. department of agriculture co-operating, educational displays and features will be of high quality. In addition to the meat show—where the consumer again may see quality steaks—vegetables, grains, canned products as well as sewing and a dress or fashion review will be a feature.

The International Grain and Hay show, for 24 years a popular feature of the show, again will boast the largest farm crop competition in the world, with entries from nearly every state in the union and from Canada. The collegiate crop judging contest also is a feature of this show. Last year's winners were from Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college.

Corn kings, wheat kings and hay queens will be competing against corn princes, wheat princes and hay princes. The junior division is always on hand to give strong competition to their elders. Junior entries are also winning factors in the carlot contests of cattle, hogs and sheep. The entries will be larger than usual.

CLASSIC OF SHOW . . . The nightly horse show brings out a packed house.

SOARING PRICES . . . The stakes (and steaks) are high at sale of the International grand champion steer, another feature of the show. Previous record price at the International was $3.35 per pound, which undoubtedly will be exceeded by a wide margain this year.

Bumper Cranberry Crop Is Harvested

WASHINGTON. — Turkey eaters, honing their appetites this holiday season, will not want for tangy cranberry sauce, for another bumper crop of the tart berry that adds tradition as well as zest to holiday feasts has been harvested in the Cape Cod district.

True to form, the Cape Cod sector again will supply about two-thirds of the nation's cranberry supply. Occasionally, as in 1944, the Cape Cod crop falls short of expectations and the berry is scarce in the nation's grocery stores.

Thousands of harvesters, working with slotted scoops and nimble fingers through the fall months, have combed the nation's bogs to gather more than 800,000 barrels. The crop is second only to the 1937 output of 877,300 barrels. In 1942 as well as in 1937, Massachusetts marshes produced a few thousand barrels more than their estimated total of 550,000 barrels for the present crop.

More than $50,000,000 is invested in the scientific business of growing and processing cranberries. The industry puts to use about 50 square miles of land that previously lay waste, unsuited to any other type of agriculture. The new crop, worth about $9,000,000, will reach stores in the form of sauce, juice and dehydrated fruit, as well as in raw fruit form.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Rag rugs will stay flat and will not rumple if they are washed in hot water and again in cold water. Use a heavy starch. Iron when dry.

If you are making a stuffed toy for your youngster, put a few pebbles in a pill box in with the stuffing, to produce a rattling noise.

Boil the clothesline in strong salt water to keep it from freezing in winter.

Painting a porch ceiling white will give added light to an adjoining room.

When making a new dress for your little daughter, make a matching hanky. She'll remember to take one then, for she'll always be looking for one to match.

If you need a kitchen stool to get at those high shelves, use an old baby highchair. Remove arms and tray and paint the stool to match your kitchen set.

The material in fibre rugs is excellent and durable for youngster's rooms. Many makes have double life since they are reversible with pattern on both sides. When you buy one of these rugs see that it has woven ends of fairly heavy weight for lasting wear.

When washing collars and cuffs of shirts scrub lightly with a small brush. This quickly removes the soil and saves time.

Sailboat With Twin Hulls Reaches Speed of 20 MPH

The fastest sailboat in this country is undoubtedly the "Sea Spider," a 25-foot catamaran, whose extremely sharp twin hulls, joined by a framework supporting the mast and cockpit, are 12 feet apart, says Collier's.

In recent trials on Long Island Sound, this craft reached a speed of 20 miles an hour, which is faster than the records of other types of sailing vessels and even many motor boats.

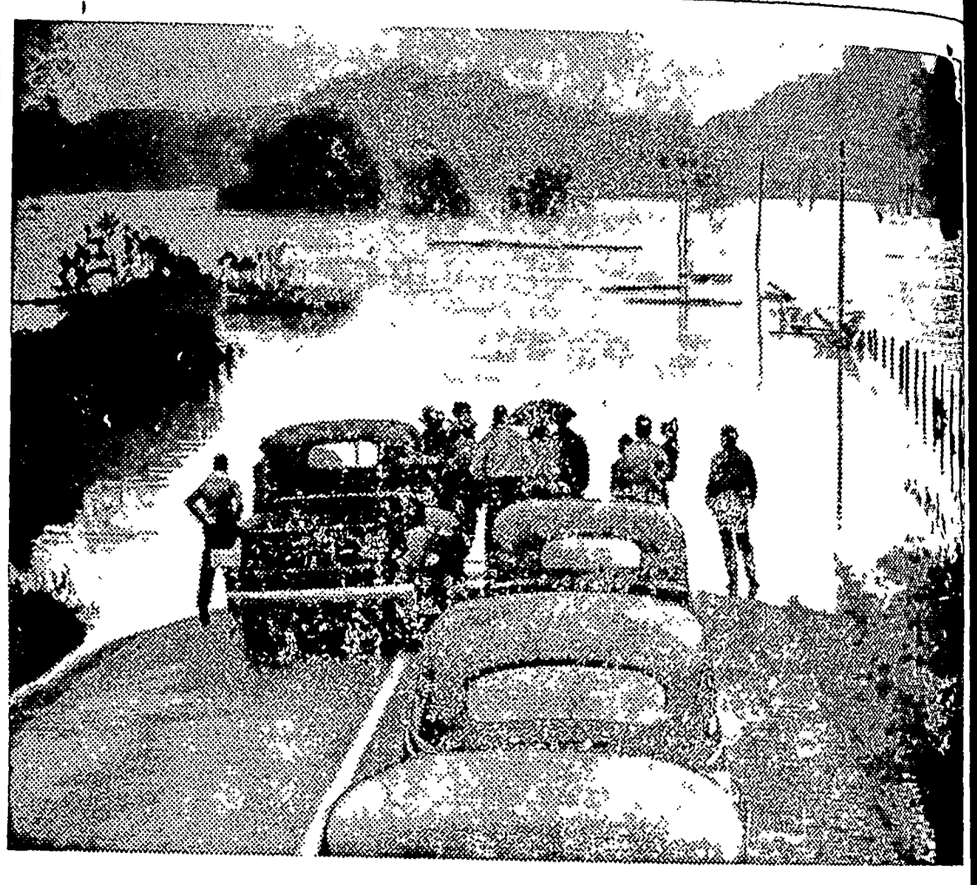
Come In And Get Acquainted

Harold Kothenbeutel



Let's cross these rivers before we come to 'em!

RIVER development and flood control rank high on the list of America's post-war plans. Many of these projects call for dams which may also produce electric power.

This involves issues that should be discussed and settled now—river to cross in advance.

Many of us in the power business have had a long experience with river-side plants, in the production of both steam-generated and hydro-electric power. In fairness to all taxpayers and in the interest of the many million users of electricity, we therefore outline our convictions and suggestions on river development and flood control.

1 When a dam is proposed, all of its purposes should be clearly defined in the legislation—flood control, navigation, irrigation or power. And just as clearly, the benefit to the people affected should justify the cost.

2 If power is produced at government-built dams, it should be sold to existing power systems, without special privilege or discrimination. This will save the expensive duplication of transmission facilities, help to co-ordinate the entire power supply of each region, and assure its widest possible use at the lowest practical rates.

3 Any savings made possible by this plan should be passed along to the users of electricity, under regulation by State Commissions or other properly constituted regulatory bodies. This will assure all the benefits of river development and hydro-power without the added expense of government going into business and competing with its own citizens.

Government in any business endangers all business. Government in business escapes many normal business obligations, enjoys free mail, pays no federal taxes and few, if any, other taxes, little or no interest. If government can sell electricity on this basis, it can sell shoes, groceries, automobiles, or anything else the same way. Government may properly regulate business in the public interest but should not operate business. It should not play in the game for which it makes the rules. In other words, government should not try to be referee and quarterback at the same time!

FEEDLOTS FILLING WITH CATTLE NOW

Shipments Into Corn Belt During Oct. Were Most On Record

Most On Record

Any idea that the high price of feeder cattle this fall kept farmers away from the markets has been tossed out by the latest figures on feeder cattle shipments.

Reports from the Iowa State College Agricultural Economics Department show that Corn Belt cattle feeders shipped in more stocker and feeder cattle in October than for any other month on record. Shipments in were 14 percent larger than during October last year, when the previous record was set. Movement into Iowa and Illinois has been especially large.

Increase General

For the 4 months July through October, shipments into the Corn Belt states also established a new record, amounting to 23 percent more than a year ago.

The Corn Belt is not the only area to show an increase in cattle feeding. Heavy shipments have been made into the wheat pastures of Kansas, and there have been heavy movements from range to feedlot within Nebraska and South Dakota.

This movement of cattle into feedlots means that the volume of finished cattle should pick up after the first of the year, with little improvement in supply expected before then.

CHECK TREE LIGHTS FOR HOLIDAY SAFETY

As you check ahead of time for ingredients to make fruit cake and cookies, check the Christmas tree lights to see that they're in good working condition, allowing plenty of time for needed repairs.

Habit usally dictates where the Xmas tree is to be placed. But that place should be close enough to a convenient outlet so the lights can be strung on the tree with the use of an extension cord. Then the orginal plug can go directly into the outlet.

Extension cords are always hazardous and should be avoided, says Naomi Shank, exension home management specialist, Iowa State College. A convenience outlet installed where the family wants the tree placed is a worthwhile gift for the family and the house in terms of the safety it provides. This same outlet will then be used the year 'round for several things such as a lamp, radio, clock, night light or vacuum cleaner.

Electric candles and wreathes for window decoration should be closely checked before using. Chances are, during the war blackout years, these traditional decorations were stored in the attic where extremes in temperature were hard on rubber. Check for sound insulation with no bare wires showing. Miss Shank also suggests having a flashlight handy to the Christmas tree so there's no temptation to strike a match if the lights go out.

At school parties and banquets several pails of sand and water, also a fire extinguisher, placed near the Christmas tree are good precaution in case of fire. All exits should be open and well-lighted.

DAIRYMEN IN BEST SPOT OF LIVESTOCK FARMERS

The long-time dairy outlook continues more favorable than for any other major Iowa livestock enterprise, reports Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

While butter output is expected to increase slightly next year, supplies will be far short of prewar days. Prices should be maintained at profitable levels during 1947.

As with butter, milk production next year is expected to fall short of needs, and officials of the United States Departmen of Agriculture are asking dairy farmers not to cull their herds more than is their normal practice. Dairy herds have been severly culled during the past year or two.

The national goal for dairy products calls for a total output of 120 billion pounds of milk next year, although it is estimated that farmers could profitably sell several million lbs. more if it could be produced.

WINDBREAK OF FUTURE MAY BE PLANNED NOW

Winter is a "wishing" season on many Iowa farms, says Richard Campbell, Iowa State College forester. And one of the farmer's main wishes, when winter winds start sweeping across his unprotected farmstead, is for a windbreak which would take the brunt of the icy blasts.

A windbreak can't be established overnight but this is the time to make plans for planting it next spring.

First item in the planning is to select a suitable site. In general the windbreak should be located on the north and west sides of the farmstead and should be at least 100 feet from the house. Likewise, locate the windbreak far enough from all main buildings to keep snow from drifting aroud them.

Studies indicate that a windbreak will give protection up to 20 times its height, with the most effective zone of protection at a distance of from six to eight times the height of the trees. Thus if a windbreak is 30 feet high, it should be located preferably from 180 to 240 feet from the main buildings.

Once the planting area has been selected, fence the area to exclude all livestock and poultry. The area should be large enough so a 10-foot strip can be left between the outer rows of trees and the fence.

If the area is not in sod, it should be plowed in the fall, if possible, followed by a good disking and harrowing in the spring. If the area is in sod, strip the sod off an area 3 to 4 feet across where each tree is to be planted. If the barnyard drains into the area, the flow should be diverted by ditching or making dikes.

HANCOCK COUNTY REAL ESTATE OWNERS AGAIN PAY TAXES 100 PER CENT

For the fourth consecutive year, the County Treasurer's office is able to report that there will be no publication of delinquent real estate taxes.

On January 1st, 1946 the the County Auditor handed to the Treasurer for collection the following taxes for the year, $774,475.00. Drainage assesments for the year, $65,179.12, making a total for collections of $839,654.12.

The treasurer states, "It is indeed a pleasure to have the folks of the county respond to their obligations in this way, as no other County of the State has made a similar statement."

The Homestead credit in the County amounts to $90,180.00, which amount was allowed on the home owners' property. $62.50 is the highest amount allowed on any one place and it frequently covers the full amount of tax on a piece of property.

The delinquent tax collection for the year is very small as they have been taken care of as they become due. Only $3,530.00 is shown for the year's receipts on this.

The balances in the various accounts: Poor fund, $72 245. 00 and Emergency fund, $21,719.00 All other accounts also show good balances.

With a good balance on hand, it is imposible to reduce the taxes of the county as the cost of operation is way above average. Our schools must still have more money with which to operate. Although the school buses were purchased last year, the tax for 1947 will have a slight increase.

Automobile and Truck licenses went on sale December 1st. The license money amounts to approximately $85,000.00 and the county receives fifty cents for each registration, making a total of $3,390.00.

Farm Bureau Membership Drive Begins

Plans for the Farm Bureau membership drive in Hancock county are getting under way, according to organization director, Chas. F. Jackson.

The membership goal in this county for 1947 is 1450, an increase of 100 over 1946 The state goal is 115,000.

The membership kick-off meeting has been scheduled for Jan. 3, 1947. It will be at Garner, where 200 membership workers are expected to meet in preparation for the greatest membership drive in history. Every effort will be made to complete the drive in one week this year.

Mr. Jackson urged old members to pay their membership dues at the County Farm Bureau office prior to the kick-off. This practice saves time, money and effort and makes it possible to do a better job of solicitation of new members, Mr. Jackson said.

DIVORCE AND PROPERTY GIVEN TO BRITT WOMAN

Louise Kosick was granted a divorce from Frank A. Kosick in district court on charge of cruel and inhuman treatment. The decree was granted Monday by District Judge Tom Boynton. The couple was married Nov. 21, 1945.

Louise Kosick was granted ownership of lots 4 and 5, block 5, Charles Miller's first addition to Britt, together with all personal property thereon in the use and conduct of the Britt cabin camp.

Alimony was granted in the amount of $50 a month commencing on the first of each month beginning Jan. 1, 1947.

NEW LAWMAKER CALLED TO DES MOINES PARLEY

Hancock County Representative-Elect Penn Eckels went to Des Moines Saturday to attend a meeting of newly elected members to the house of representatives. Eckels was elected at the election in November and will take office Jan. 1. He succeeds the late Hon. W. S. Pritshard who has served Hancock county for the past 3 sessions of the legislature.

New Press For Trap Factory

Ed. Thompson went to Des Moines Monday where he ordered a new stamping press for his mouse trap factory. The new machine, which will be shipped the latter part of this month, is an 18-ton press. The press now being used is a 22-ton press. With two presses running the work will be speeded up.

DRAINAGE DITCH CONTRACTS ARE LET

Large Hancock County Job To Start In Spring

Hancock county supervisors awarded a contract to Wilbur Nielsen Construction company of Blencoe for the reconstruction of the open ditches on Hancock county drainage district No. 8, at a letting Tuesday. The contract totaled $52,356.46 and involves the excavation of opproximately 330,000 yards of silt and dirt. The dirt moving price was 14 cents per cubic yard with incidentals making up the balance of the contract.

Klemme Man Gets Contract

The Concrete Products Corporation of Humbolt was awarded a contract for furnishing pipe and tile on the project and this contract totaled $1,291. Roy I. Schaefer of Klemme was awarded the contract for labor for the laying of the tile drain, his contract totaling $669.

The project is one of the largest drainage projects undertaken in the county in recent years and work is scheduled to get under way as soon as the weather is favorable in the spring and must be completed before Dec. 1, 1947.

Engineer William Henschen was appointed construction engineer on the project. William Boehnke, Charles A. Frisbie and Engineer Henschen were appointed a reclassification and assessment commission on the project.

MR. AND MRS. DUTHERIDGE ENJOY TRIP TO FLORIDA

Tampa, Florida,
December 5, 1946

Dear Jorgensons:

We had an interesting trip and enjoyed seeing the colored folks picking cotton in the big cotton fields through the south.

We spent an enjoyable Sunday afternoon along the Gulf coast at Gulf Port and Biloxi, the trees being festonned with Spanish moss. The route took us through the Bankhead tunnel under the Mobile River at Mobile, Ala.

It was very warm here when we arrived last week but is cooler now and really lovely. There are many mountain crested drives to take from Tampa. We enjoyed a trip to Sarasota yesterday and saw miles of orange and grape fruit groves.

There are several hundred in this court and more arriving each day. Everything has been pleasant so far, and hope its the same for our friends and neighbors in Iowa.

Yours truly,
Mr. and Mrs. Ted Dutheridge

GARNER YOUTH FINDS BUSINESS OF SHOWING CATTLE AT EXPOSITIONS INVOLVES TAKING LONG CHANCES

This business of showing fine cattle at the fairs and expositions involves something of a gamble. Don Greiman of Garner went to the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago with his 1,145 pound calf which brought him the grand championship at the Waterloo Livestock and Meat Institute. It also placed 2nd in the fat stock show at Iowa State fair, incidently.

At Waterloo Don almost put his calf on the block, but decided that he would gamble by taking it to the International. His father, Addis Greiman, is a Pure Bred Angus breeder and winning the purple ribbon at the International naturally would be worth something to the owner of the herd from which the champion came So Don withdrew his calf from the Waterloo sale and watched the reserve sell for $1.05 a pound.

Don's calf placed 5th in its class at the International. Not a bad record considering the competition but still not so good when sale day arrives. The calves with the blue and purple ribbons are the ones which will draw the big money.

The Garner youth refused to guess what he might get but admitted he hoped it would not be less than 50 cents a pound. That price would mean a loss of at least 55 cents a pound as compared with what he could have gotten at Waterloo. A little multiplication will show that it amounts to $629 75 cash money. That's quite a lot of money to an 18 year old North Iowa farm boy but Don refused to cry over it. He just admitted that it takes a lot of luck along with good feeding to top the world's most important stock show.

Eugene Haberkamp Has Birthday Dinner

A number of relatives gathered Sunday at the Becker sisters home to honor Eugene Haberkamp who celebrated his 21st birthday.

A two-course dinner was served. Miss Anna Becker had baked and decorated a cake for the occasion and which was lit with candles and used as a center-piece at the table. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in decorations.

Those present besides the Becker sisters and the honored guest were: Verner Haberkamp and daughters Mary Joan, Susan and Nancy; Mrs. Louise Josten; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Becker; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Becker; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Katter; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Josten and Rosemary; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Josten; Mr. and Mrs. Duane Josten; Verner and Allen Lau.

Eugene received some nice gifts in remembrance of the occassion.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lemke Surprised on 10th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Neuberger and son, Clear Lake; Mrs. Lewis Neuberger; Wert Loger; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Neuberger and family; and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Neuberger and family, pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lemke Friday evening in honor of their 10th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemke's anniversary was on November 15th but as Mr. Lemke was in the hospital at Iowa City at that time the suprise was carried out at a later date.

The evening was spent visiting after which a delicious lunch was served by the self invited guests. Mr. and Mrs. Lemke were presented with a lovely gift as a remembrance.

FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY MEETS

Association Pays Claims Of $14,310 In '46

T. C. Nelson was re-elected president of the Hancock County Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance Association, at a meeting of the board following the annual meeting at the I. O. O. F. hall Other officers re-elected were: John Hippen, Kanawha, vice-president; Orville Maben, Garner, secretary, and E. I. Brooker, Forest City, treasurer.

Directors elected for a 3-year term are: A. E. Boman, Forest City; E. I. Brooker, Forest City, and John Hippen, Kanawha. Other directors holding over are T. C. Nelson, Orville Maben and Clint Daniels, all of Garner; Penn Eckels, Britt George T. Gerdes, Woden, and Harry C. Ruka of Goodell.

The association has been conducting an insurance business in the county for the past 58 years and now has a total of $17,000,000 insurance in force. Net gain for the past year is $1,125,000 according to Secre-tary Orville Maben's report. Total losses paid during the past year were $14,310.

Muskrat Season Closed December 10th

The shortened muskrat season closed December 10 and trappers have until December 20 to dispose of muskrat furs on hand, or they may secure a cost-free permit from the State Conservation Commission to hold fur for later sales. Fur dealers report a decline in the number of muskrat furs marketed to date but expect the volume to increase during the last few days of the holding period.

Trappers wishing to ship furs out of the state for sale may secure shipping permits by writing the State Conservation Commission, Des Moines. The season on all protected fur-bearing animals, except muskrat, on which the season was open this year closes January 10.

KLEMME YOUTH BAGGED SILVER FOX LAST WEEK

Elwyn Etchen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Etchen who reside about three miles southwest of Klemme, shot a silver fox on his father's farm last week Saturday.

Elwyn saw the fox out on some plowed ground. He got out a .22 calibre rifle and killed the animal with two shots. He considered it very lucky as a small calibre bullet does not often kill a fox. The fur is beautiful, black with silver hairs and a white tip on the tail.

Silver foxes are not native to this country and the fox evidently escaped from some fur farm in Iowa and wandered to the Etchen farm. Elwyn collected a $2.50 bounty, the same as for a red fox, from the County Auditor. He plans to have the fur tanned.

Liberty 4-H Boys Elect Delwyn Stromer For 1947 President

Liberty 4-H boys elected Delwyn Stromer as president, Chas. Hadack vice-president, Norman Stromer secretary, Ronald Bredlow treasurer and Duane Prochaska reporter for 1947. The boys also selected Dale Greiman as their leader and LeRoy Bredlow assistant leader. They urge all boys in Liberty township between 10 and 21 years to get enrollment cards in at once. Start projects now.

ANNUAL ELECTIONS HELD PAST WEEK

Township Committees Also Named

Alfred V. Josten, Garner, was renamed chairman of the County AAA Committee, A. E. Rasmussen, Garner, vice chairman, and C. A. Bird, Woden, third member at the annual County AAA Election held in Garner on Saturday forenoon, December 7th.

Alternates to the committee elected were Sam A. Barber of Kanawha and A. C. Fredricks of Britt.

The county election followed a series of township AAA election meetings held during the past week in each township at which farmers selected the committeemen to serve them in administrating the AAA Program for the coming year. Delegates to the County Election were selected at these same meetings.

Farmers have made great strides in carrying out agricultural conservation program practices. But the need for conservation is still tremendous, and peace years — with a let-up in the necessity for unlimited crop production — will bring more opportunity to take care of the Nation's soil and water resources.

Each year, the program has been decentralized a little more, and more program responsibility has been given to local committeemen. In 1947, ACP committeemen will determine the conservation practices for which assistance is offered; they will allocate among farmers the funds available to the country for meeting conservation needs.

These decisions affect every farmer, the whole community—they should be made by men who have the confidence of the majority of farmers. Farmers should see that the county's conservation funds are spent wisely—for the practices most needed in the county — by cooperation with elected men of good judgment.

Listed below are the results of the township elections. In each case, the delegate elected to represent the township at the county election was the chairman of the township committee, with the exception of Boone Township where Frank J. Schwab was chosen delegate.

New Era Makes Advent at Capitol

GOP Sweep Frees Truman Of Burdensome Program

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — There is a feel of Christmas in the Washington air which is prompted by more than the evanescence of the joyous spirit of Noel — just try to get onto a Connecticut avenue car headed for the F street shopping district. The White House presents its usual decor of pine and ribboned wreath. And, at this writing, the chief tenant is, I believe, dreaming of a Missouri Christmas among his friends.

Baukhage

Whether he spends the holiday beneath his own rooftree or the one which Uncle Sam so generously provides, it can be said that it will be a far merrier occasion than a year ago. He will be among his friends as well as his family, and as one of his official circle put it, with his "professed" enemies (the opposite party) in power his "unprofessed" enemies (officially his friends) having no further opportunity to toss brickbats or bandy threats about his head.

I recall another crisp, cool winter day last February a year ago, when we wended our way to the President's weekly press and radio conference. Bemused pansies (I recorded in this space) showed frostbitten faces in the garden of the White House grounds.

We were discussing the difficulties and differences which President Truman already was encountering at the hands of his own party in congress.

"Congress has to be realistic in an election year," I quoted someone as saying, "They are facing real issues. And the President's program isn't realistic."

"Whether or not it is realistic," another member of the group replied, "it isn't his program. He inherited it. It's New Deal and New Deal is Old Hat now. It doesn't represent Harry Truman's ideas at all, but he has to go through with it."

As we look back, it is plain enough that whether it was New Deal or what it was, the program of the President was one that the people rejected on election day, the moral obligations of the past, the effect of the pressure groups, the ukase of the party of bigwigs were swept away and Harry Truman, who didn't want the job that was thrust upon him when death commanded, was made a free man.

The President's satisfaction springs not from any spirit of "I told you so" hurled at his alleged supporters, not from any lack of loyalty to a cause well lost. It was simply the weary but happy flood of relief of a man who, having attempted what he knew was an impossible task, saw that task ended, and friend and foe forced fairly into the open.

War Terminated Honeymoon With Congress

My mind goes back to another scene shortly before the death of President Roosevelt. I sat in the office of the vice president talking of days when the caissons went rolling along and both of us — many miles apart — rode beside them. We talked also of the then forthcoming San Francisco conference of the United Nations and Mr. Truman's theme was what he felt to be his function. Paradoxically enough—as it turned out later—it was helping establish liaison between congress and the White House, complementing the highly successful effort of Secretary of State Hull which resulted in the forging of a bi-partisan foreign policy. And in so short a time, after Mr. Truman became President, that liaison between Capitol Hill and 1600 Pennsylvania avenue snapped in twain, never to be reunited.

Three months after the President took office I recorded: "The political armistice in Washington will end shortly after the President's (Truman's) return from Berlin—by that time domestic discontent will be crystallizing, the honeymoon will be on the wane. . . ."

And I then had the temerity to predict that if . . . "the Japanese war should end . . . within the year . . . President Truman will be stripped of the protecting armor of the Commander-in-Chief. Then the slings and arrows which even Roosevelt's enemies were wont to deflect to congress and other government agencies will be aimed squarely at the man in the White House."

That prophesy required no gift of the occult. Mr. Truman knew it then—or I wouldn't have.

From now on the President is his own man. The legislation he offers, whatever its fate may be, will be moulded to suit his own heart's desire. He has fought the fight to the best of his ability, assailed from the right and the left and the rear as well as the front. Now he will write his own ticket, be it good or bad. Few Presidents have had such an opportunity or faced a more severe test.

Presidential Bee Hums

Washington withdraws from official activity for the holidays without getting any real impact of the advent of the new regime. There has been the preliminary hurly-burly of reorganization on Capitol Hill but the same old faces are evident and the same old voices speak. The active Republican leaders in both houses of congress have been so much in the limelight for the last year anyhow that they merely appear to be stepping up, rather than stepping in. It all seems quite routine and casual.

There was just a touch of the excitement of the beginning of a new era when house and senate steering committees had their first meetings and made their first official statements concerning legislation and policy. Most of the steps had been foreshadowed and the change of venue was not fanfared.

Senator Taft Politically Cautious

The last 14 years make up the longest period of lean years that any party has suffered. I witnessed the end of two 12-year drouths through which the Democrats thirsted; close of the one that began with William McKinley and ended with William Howard Taft, when Wilson accompanied the "new freedom" to the White House. And the next, another 12-year period, when the New Deal followed Hoover's exit.

The Democrats had only a short interlude at the pie-counter between Taft and Harding and their return in 1933 came in the midst of such a domestic crisis, with the mad days of the NRA following on the heels of the bank holiday, that our attention was diverted from politics. But what the Democrats did to the Republican officeholders "wasn't good," as one Republican put it recently. He added: "We are going to do the same for them."

Congress begins with the Republican Presidential plum within easier reach than any which have dangled in many a year and it is no wonder many hands are reaching hopefully for it. In fact, Senator Vandenberg early sounded the warning that more thoughts should be concentrated on the responsibilities following the victory of '46, and less on the possibilities of '48, for the good of all concerned.

The battle between the Taftites and the anti-Taftites began even before election and the Ohio senator himself is so determined that this time he will win the nomination that he leans over backward to avoid criticism. He refused to go on a broadcast for even a three-minute statement of Republican policy and he took off for Central America shortly thereafter.

Labor Ranks View Mine Dispute as Wage Guide

LABOR:
New Crisis

Once again it was John L. against the government!

This time, Washington appeared determined to force a showdown with the burly United Mine Workers chieftain, but it had its job cut out for it as 400,000 UMW members stood steadfastly by their leader and both the AFL and CIO threw in their support.

As in previous UMW walkouts, Lewis held a hand full of aces. Punish him as it might try, there were the 400,000 skilled and irreplacable miners who refused to go down into the pits before clarification of the status of their contract; there were approximately 12,000,000 members of organized labor who looked with disfavor upon government use of the injunction to break a strike, and the courts were still to decide the legality of terminating the UMW-government pact.

But, encouraged by the country's overwhelming swing to the right in the recent elections and the possibility that the courts might decide in his favor in interpreting the legal aspects of the case, President Truman was set to push John L. to the limit in his efforts to wring wage and hour concessions from the government.

Under the UMW-government contract, the miners received $75.25 weekly for a 54-hour week, in contrast to $23.88 weekly for a shorter week in 1939. Lewis' latest demands were said to call for a 40-hour week with earnings approximating those for 54 hours.

Arrival of the latest soft coal crisis saw the government prepared for emergency distribution of bituminous stocks. Only householders, hospitals, utilities and other essential public services were to receive deliveries. Railroads were scheduled to haul only food, clothing, medicine, fuel and other necessities and to reduce locomotive passenger service by approximately 25 per cent.

Humming again after the crippling strikes of last winter, industry faced another slow-down to conserve fuel supplies and spread them over the period of the walkout.

Coal Mining Red Style

From Russia, where the Communist commissariat has its own method of settling labor problems, comes word of the working of a gigantic new coal field in northern Siberia by slave laborers from Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, Ukraine and Crimea. Consisting mostly of political dissidents, the laborers are housed in wooden barracks and subsist on porridge and 600 grams of bread daily. About 38 mines have been developed in the 5,000 square mile field.

'PX' TRAIN IN JAPAN . . . The army recently opened a new "PX" train which travels throughout Japan to serve G.I.s and their families and other Allied personnel where other PX facilities are unavailable.

CIO Goal

Like the AFL, the CIO watched the coal strike with interest, not only because of the injunction proceedings generally condemned by labor but also because Lewis' acquisition of new wage concessions promised to blaze the way for boosts all along the line.

Meeting in Atlantic City, where John L. formed the CIO 11 years ago, CIO Pres. Philip Murray sounded the battle cry for another round of wage increases by lamenting the rise in prices which offset previous boosts and assailing the uneven distribution of wealth.

Seeking to indicate the extent to which recent price rises have crossed out the 18½ cent an hour wage raise won by the CIO earlier this year, Murray said that steel workers now are earning $13.04 less a week than they did last March. Pointing to the ability of industry to bear higher wages, Murray said that profits in the last quarter of 1946 would total 15 billion dollars compared with 10 billions for 1944.

HOUSING:
New Wrinkle

The public received its first good look at the Lustrom corporation's heralded porcelain enameled steel home in Hinsdale, Ill., outside Chicago, and the showing marked another step in the battle of the company with the Tucker automobile corporation for possession of the huge Dodge-Chicago plant.

The battle took a sensational turn with charges of Preston Tucker, the auto magnate, that a prominent Washington attorney had promised to use his influence in having the National Housing authority remand its order turning the Dodge-Chicago plant to Lustrom if given the Tucker corporation's legal business plus a stock interest. Named as the attorney, Theodore Granik vigorously denied the allegation.

FORECAST FOR 1947

Survey Shows Rise in Building

NEW YORK. — Representing an increase of 35 per cent, 630,000 dwelling units will be constructed in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains during 1947, according to an estimate made by Thomas S. Holden, president of F. W. Dodge corporation, fact-finding organization for the construction industry.

The figure represents a gain of 35 per cent in number of units and 38 per cent in dollar volume from the anticipated 1946 totals. The estimates are based on elimination next year of present priorities and allocations of materials, Holden said.

For all construction, Holden said, an increase of 25 per cent is expected, bringing the dollar total to more than $9,500,000,000 compared with $7,700,000,000 this year in the states surveyed.

Holden said it was probable construction activity would continue on an increasing scale without serious setback and added, "if this turns out to be true, construction may be the principal sustaining activity tending to moderate the impact of price recession on the general business structure."

Decontrol of material prices will stimulate increased output of many scarce items; Holden said, with new cost levels "lower than black market prices."

Sees Labor Shortage.

Declaring that "the major bottleneck will be shortage of skilled labor," Holden said that while apprentice training has been stepped up, "recruitment has not kept pace with needs in a number of important trades."

The estimated increase in residential building, he said, was based on assumption that new construction will be completely exempted from rent ceilings, which he decribed as "the principal deterrents to apartment building."

Holiday Rush Descends On Santa Claus, Indiana

WNU Features

SANTA CLAUS, IND.—Advent of the Christmas season brings a rush to every community in the land, but especially so to this tiny Indiana village where Santa Claus makes his headquarters. The jolly old gentleman already is swamped under the biggest avalanche of mail and tourists in history.

Thousands of letters and gift packages with the famous "Santa Claus" postmark are being dispatched to eager youngsters throughout the nation. Postmaster Oscar Phillips estimates that he handled more than a million pieces of mail last year, with present totals indicating that the record will be exceeded this year.

Letters to Santa Claus, which pour in from every state in the union, are answered by the Santa Claus American Legion post, commanded by James Yellig, the "Santa Claus" of Santa Claus Land.

Open Children's Park.

Not content with its rushing mail business, Santa Claus this year launched a children's park and toy center as an added tourist attraction. Located in a landscaped 40-acre wooded area, the park is open throughout the year.

Of major interest to the children is the Enchanted Trail, a path extending for a third of a mile, on which wide-eyed youngsters gaze in awe at sculptured Mother Goose characters set in lifelike dioramas.

Little Boy Blue is depicted asleep under a haystack. Humpty Dumpty is shown in a precarious position just before tumbling off the wall, Jack is climbing the beanstalk and many other characters are portrayed in their storybook settings.

Ride on Trains.

Tiny children are taken on free rides on a miniature train, about 18 inches high and 15 feet long.

Plans are under way for opening a larger "Santa Claus railroad," with a train 4 feet high and 59 feet long which will take 30 tots at a time on a "trip around the world." Miniature replicas of Grand Canyon, the Swiss Alps and the pyramids of Egypt will line the roadbed while the train will pass through a tunnel and cross a bridge across the "Atlantic ocean."

On a visit to the toy center, children are enraptured by the toy and gift shop, where leading toy manufacturers display their wares. Special interest is centered on a display of antique toys from both the United States and foreign lands. Childhood's more earthly needs are met in a restaurant and soda fountain.

Dolls In Distress Overtax Facilities Of Novel 'Hospital'

BOSTON. — Lack of space, shortage of help and an influx of patients plague all hospitals — and that goes for Boston's 43-year-old Doll Hospital, Inc., too.

Mrs. Fred Hockaday, proprietor of the novel establishment, scans the hospital's facilities and laments: "We have 400 cases right now, four times as many as before the war. We're closing two days a week in an effort to catch up with the work."

The shortage of help poses another problem. Even the hospital receptionist, a 42-inch bisque blonde, currently is on the ailing list. The reason: A little boy poked her eye out while he was waiting for a wig for his sister's doll to be fitted.

'Surgeon' Does Repairs.

For expert help in the doll-healing business, however, Mrs. Hockaday has five assistants, including a "surgeon" whose fracture treatments are renowned throughout dolldom.

The current crop of patients ranges from a 135-year-old wooden doll with a shattered leg to scores of so-called "unbreakable" babies. The cluttered workroom is never shown to doll owners as a guarantee against shattering childhood's cherished idea that the "hospital" is a glorified ward presided over by nurses in white linen.

One little girl recently showed up with her governess and a small bunch of flowers, requesting: "Please put this by my doll's bed."

Old Age Not Incurable.

Mrs. Hockaday and her staff regularly restore old-time Parisian wax complexions, round-out dented papier mache skulls and restring limbs of last century bisque beauties. Her hospital does not consider old age an incurable malady. Many of the patients, she admits, "cost more to repair than they did in the beginning, but we do our best because children love them so."

An avid collector of antique dolls, Mrs. Hockaday has some 75 of her uncounted collection on display at the hospital. "But not my swimming doll, which goes right across the tank with a beautiful breast stroke, because if I kept her around, my little visitors never would go home."

Free Copies of Best Seller Are Unwanted

PHILADELPHIA. — Although the Bible is the world's best seller, War Assets administration is unable to dispose of nearly one million pocket-sized Bibles even by giving them away.

Two weeks after the WAA had announced the small Bibles would be given free to religious and charitable groups which applied for them, only four organizations had submitted requests and their combined orders did not exceed 1,000 copies.

The Bibles, of the King James and Douay versions as well as some printed for members of the Jewish faith, were left over from 11 million copies bought for the armed forces.

Shadow of Mountain Prompts Time Change

PALM SPRINGS, CALIF. — Because lofty Mt. San Jacinto, 11,000 feet above sea level, casts an afternoon shadow over this desert community, the city council passed an ordinance establishing daylight saving time for 120 days this winter. The sun goes down about 3 p. m. during the winter months as a result of the shadow, but the ordinance saves an hour's sunlight.

With advent of the "Air Age," when you may want to take your infant daughter or your pet dog or cat along on a plane trip or you may decide to ship some baby chicks, lobsters or even flowers to some distant point, you'll probably be interested in the effects of altitude At behest of Western Air Lines, Air Transport association made a study of the subject.

In general, animals can endure higher altitudes than man while babies of every species have a greater "altitude tolerance" than their elders, the study revealed.

Dogs in good health suffer no ill effects at 25,000 feet and cats can stand 24,000 feet. Naturally, birds are extremely resistant to altitude but chickens of any age have an average tolerance of about 17,000 feet.

Live lobsters and crabs, wrapped in wet burlap, can stand no more than 17,000 feet. Fish, on the other hand, can go to 20,000 feet without harm if they have plenty of water.

Cut flowers and fruits, if carefully packed, can travel up to 25,000 feet. Above that level the petals of sweet peas collapse and ripe plums split their skins.

La Guardia airport, New York's international plane terminal built on filled in land, is sinking at the rate of six inches a year and may "all be awash" in two years. Frederick G. Reinicke, New York commissioner of marine and aviation, said the field would have to be closed within nine months to two years for reconstruction.

The system aids dealers and pilots.

que Barter Theater Plays nificant Role in U.S. Drama

On a sunny June day in 1933, the Barter theater, first theater to accept produce as well as cash at the box office, was officially opened to a packed house and a full pantry. The theater is located in the old Main street opera house, erected in 1830 and the second oldest in the nation. The theater, incidentally, is part of the town hall. It is linked with the mayor's office and the local hoosegow is in the rear, with the dressing rooms next to the cells.

Pigs Are Prolific.

First ticket to Barter theater was traded to a farmer for a baby pig, which became a pet of the Barter colony. At the end of the season Porterfield proposed to serve the pig at a farewell banquet for the staff, but the actors rebelled. Porterfield acquiesced and sent the pig to his father's farm, where it formed the foundation for an unending supply of hams for the colony's dining tables. Sugar-cured hams from descendants of that little pig also went to playwrights in lieu of royalties, Porterfield never having paid a cash royalty.

Intrigued by the new theater, townsfolk and farmers flocked to the opening night performance.

News that tickets could be secured "in trade" traveled fast. Soon the town barber arrived with an offer of haircuts and shaves for first row seats.

Live chickens and other fowl, honey, potatoes, onions "enough to last for a century," lettuce, corn and chocolate cakes were included among the bartered items.

Constant problem for Porterfield's chief dietitian is to evolve new recipes with which to use the cottage cheese which two elderly women present for their admissions nightly. Once the two women brought more cheese than usual and asked for "ten cents change because we thought we would like to buy a soda after the show."

In early years of the theater's existence, produce accounted for almost 85 per cent of the total take, sometimes more. Porterfield begged for money. Today, the reverse is true, about 90 per cent of the receipts being in cash. Taking cognizance of current shortages, Porterfield now begs for produce.

Trace Group's History.

History of the Barter theater is divided into two periods, the prewar barter period and the postwar professional period. The distinction, Porterfield hastens to explain, does not indicate that prewar companies were not composed largely of professionals. During that period, however, the actors received no compensation except bed and board.

Since raising the first curtain on June 10, 19[illegible], the Barter colony has presented 154 plays in more than 1,000 performances. In addition to the regular Abingdon season, the players have trouped to nearby Virginia towns of the "fog circuit," so designated by Barterites because of the ghostlike fog that is whisped each night through the mountains of southwest Virginia.

Gets State Grant.

Now, after being closed during war years when the young founder-director entered the army air forces, Barter theater has resumed operations. Aided by a subsidy of $10,000 from the commonwealth of Virginia, Barter now ranks as the first "state theater" in history of America. From this start, Porterfield envisions an expansion of such theatrical enterprises throughout the nation until something resembling the Old Vic theater of England has been achieved.

The state grant has enabled Barter to be set up on an annual basis with a permanent company. Although now on regular salary, however, the actors still double as stage hands, box office cashiers, ushers and even as caretakers of ducks, pigs, chickens, goats and other barnyard denizens, some of which are recent box office receipts while others are descendants of the original barter animals.

Plan Extended Tour.

At close of the regular season in Abingdon this fall, the company launched an extensive statewide tour covering 70 Virginia cities in an attempt to provide every citizen an opportunity of viewing the best in drama as staged by the theatrical group which the state has underwritten. Performances in other southern states will follow, with two weeks in New York climaxing the trip.

On the results of the tour hinges the feasibility of state subsidized drama throughout America, adherents of the project agree.

CAPPING THE CLIMAX!

Where are all the dishtowels of yesteryear? Back in the kitchen, where they belong, and, in their place on your well-brushed heads we find stocking caps and more stocking caps. We've already told you that a knot in your stocking cap means you have an "all time all timer" (that's hit parade talk for going steady) but we've just received a last minute report that throws new light on the subject.

Pin-up-Girl — You swing the long end of your stocking cap across the front and over your shoulder, and you hold it there with your cutest gadget pin. (This year it's a silver animal). Looks super-smooth with a cardigan blazer.

Parking Place — Didn't take you long to discover that a stocking cap was the ideal spot for your collection of pins, charms or what-have-you. You pin the charms on with tiny safetys. The trick is to see how many things you can load on your cap and still hold your head up.

Tricks with Trims — For dress up, trim a plain wool jersey stocking cap with large sequins. For sports, sew on assorted buttons. For fun, embroider the names of your favorite friends. Certainly looks as if stocking caps had gone to your head!

The little housekeeping noises from downstairs didn't jar particularly, and Ben Wilson felt that he might even go for some eggs and bacon—if there was any bacon. He smiled luxuriously at the thought of his five day work week with its six-day take-home pay.

Coffee . . . that was what he had been looking for last night at the party. He shouldn't have gone along with the boys after the foremen's meeting was over; but, well. . . . He began to backtrack through the evening in lazy, semi-wakeful stages. Something bright, he remembered, like a flame. Something about cinders; not in his eye—or were they. . . .

Well, of course! Harry's cousin, the unattached red-head that took the place over the moment she arrived. That suggested the analogy; the way that the gang crowded around her like a pack of moths.

Harry had left early—something about a fishing trip—but Lucinda had said that she was a big girl now and that she was going to stay. Ben remembered kidding her about her name, calling her "Cindah," which, he explained with great elaboration, was cinder with a Boston accent. He thought that was very clever—last night. Finally he got around to wondering who had taken her home. He remembered vaguely some sort of election, but he couldn't put his finger on what happened from there on out. Then he remembered his coat.

He began to backtrack through the evening in lazy, semi-wakeful stages.

His bare feet hit the floor with a splat. Why, oh why, in his cups, had he overlooked that great Truth: That no matter how perfect a woman's coiffure, the odds are heavy on it shedding at the wrong time. Trudy, his wife, was a decided brunette—there was no "out" in that direction.

The swinging door leading to the kitchen let out a creak. Trudy Wilson put on her best wifely smile. "Did I wake you up? I let you sleep late because—Ben, what's ailing you? You're green!"

The coffee was black and hot. Trudy was cheerful, almost solicitous. It just could be that there was nothing wrong after all. The thought brought him up with a jerk. He took a deep breath:

"That dark grey coat I had on last night—what happened to it? I think I left some papers in it."

"In the hall closet—no wait, dear! Finish your coffee, won't you. You're not going anywhere looking like that!" Trudy half rose, but Ben shoved back his chair and barged out of the room.

He groped for the light switch. The coat was in plain view and a quick once-over afforded no trace of strawberry blonde hair or any other signs of the previous evening's foray.

He was just turning to make a gallant return to the kitchen when a peculiar scent touched his nostrils.

The newly acquired strength trickled down into his bare toes and disappeared into the equally bare floor. Perfume! The coat was reeking with the stuff!

Gently Trudy took the coat from his damp fingers. Hesitantly, she held the shoulder of it under his nose.

"You smell that?" she asked simply.

"How could I miss?" he breathed.

"Now don't get mad, Ben." Trudy Wilson stopped her husband with a tiptoe kiss. "It's nothing that the cleaners can't remove, if you'll just wait. I spilled the whole bottle of that new smelly moth repellent when I was trying to put a few drops on the light bulb up there."

"You know," she added defensively, "moths go crazy around a light—or a flame, Ben!"

"Hush, child, and let me kiss you," Ben said a moment later. "I don't know how your moths can even stand to get near that stuff; it's potent!"

"I hope so," murmured Trudy. "There's a big one around here somewhere that I really wanted to get."

"Was a big one," corrected her husband, and as she looked up quizzically, he added, "He's been singed, seared and purified—you won't have any more trouble from him. You know, out like a light—or a flame."

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Hard To Beat

So Easy. No Cooking. Saves Dollars.

No matter what you've been using for coughs due to colds, you'll be the first to admit that this surprising relief, mixed in your own kitchen, is hard to beat, for real results.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed—a child could do it. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough relief—about four times as much for your money. Tastes fine—children love it. It never spoils.

You can feel this home mixture taking right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness and difficult breathing, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Just try it, and if not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

FEEDLOTS FILLING WITH CATTLE NOW

Shipments Into Corn Belt During Oct. Were Most On Record

Most On Record

Any idea that the high price of feeder cattle this fall kept farmers away from the markets has been tossed out by the latest figures on feeder cattle shipments.

Reports from the Iowa State College Agricultural Economics Department show that Corn Belt cattle feeders shipped in more stocker and feeder cattle in October than for any other month on record. Shipments in were 14 percent larger than during October last year, when the previous record was set. Movement into Iowa and Illinois has been especially large.

Increase General

For the 4 months July through October, shipments into the Corn Belt states also established a new record, amounting to 23 percent more than a year ago.

The Corn Belt is not the only area to show an increase in cattle feeding. Heavy shipments have been made into the wheat pastures of Kansas, and there have been heavy movements from range to feedlot within Nebraska and South Dakota.

This movement of cattle into feedlots means that the volume of finished cattle should pick up after the first of the year, with little improvement in supply expected before then.

CHECK TREE LIGHTS FOR HOLIDAY SAFETY

As you check ahead of time for ingredients to make fruit cake and cookies, check the Christmas tree lights to see that they're in good working condition, allowing plenty of time for needed repairs.

Habit usally dictates where the Xmas tree is to be placed. But that place should be close enough to a convenient outlet so the lights can be strung on the tree with the use of an extension cord. Then the orginal plug can go directly into the outlet.

Extension cords are always hazardous and should be avoided, says Naomi Shank, exension home management specialist, Iowa State College. A convenience outlet installed where the family wants the tree placed is a worthwhile gift for the family and the house in terms of the safety it provides. This same outlet will then be used the year 'round for several things such as a lamp, radio, clock, night light or vacuum cleaner.

Electric candles and wreathes for window decoration should be closely checked before using. Chances are, during the war blackout years, these traditional decorations were stored in the attic where extremes in temperature were hard on rubber. Check for sound insulation with no bare wires showing. Miss Shank also suggests having a flashlight handy to the Christmas tree so there's no temptation to strike a match if the lights go out.

At school parties and banquets several pails of sand and water, also a fire extinguisher, placed near the Christmas tree are good precaution in case of fire. All exits should be open and well-lighted.

DAIRYMEN IN BEST SPOT OF LIVESTOCK FARMERS

The long-time dairy outlook continues more favorable than for any other major Iowa livestock enterprise, reports Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

While butter output is expected to increase slightly next year, supplies will be far short of prewar days. Prices should be maintained at profitable levels during 1947.

As with butter, milk production next year is expected to fall short of needs, and officials of the United States Departmen of Agriculture are asking dairy farmers not to cull their herds more than is their normal practice. Dairy herds have been severly culled during the past year or two.

The national goal for dairy products calls for a total output of 120 billion pounds of milk next year, although it is estimated that farmers could profitably sell several million lbs. more if it could be produced.

WINDBREAK OF FUTURE MAY BE PLANNED NOW

Winter is a "wishing" season on many Iowa farms, says Richard Campbell, Iowa State College forester. And one of the farmer's main wishes, when winter winds start sweeping across his unprotected farmstead, is for a windbreak which would take the brunt of the icy blasts.

A windbreak can't be established overnight but this is the time to make plans for planting it next spring.

First item in the planning is to select a suitable site. In general the windbreak should be located on the north and west sides of the farmstead and should be at least 100 feet from the house. Likewise, locate the windbreak far enough from all main buildings, to keep snow from drifting aroud them.

Studies indicate that a windbreak will give protection up to 20 times its height, with the most effective zone of protection at a distance of from six to eight times the height of the trees. Thus if a windbreak is 30 feet high, it should be located preferably from 180 to 240 feet from the main buildings.

Once the planting area has been selected, fence the area to exclude all livestock and poultry. The area should be large enough so a 10-foot strip can be left between the outer rows of trees and the fence.

If the area is not in sod, it should be plowed in the fall, if possible, followed by a good disking and harrowing in the spring. If the area is in sod, strip the sod off an area 3 to 4 feet across where each tree is to be planted. If the barnyard drains into the area, the flow should be diverted by ditching or making dikes.

HANCOCK COUNTY REAL ESTATE OWNERS AGAIN PAY TAXES 100 PER CENT

For the fourth consecutive year, the County Treasurer's office is able to report that there will be no publication of delinquent real estate taxes.

On January 1st, 1946 the the County Auditor handed to the Treasurer for collection the following taxes for the year, $774,475.00. Drainage assesments for the year, $65,179.12, making a total for collections of $839,654.12.

The treasurer states, "It is indeed a pleasure to have the folks of the county respond to their obligations in this way, as no other County of the State has made a similar statement."

The Homestead credit in the County amounts to $90,180.00, which amount was allowed on the home owners' property. $62.50 is the highest amount allowed on any one place and it frequently covers the full amount of tax on a piece of property.

The delinquent tax collection for the year is very small as they have been taken care of as they become due. Only $3,530.00 is shown for the year's receipts on this.

The balances in the various accounts: Poor fund, $72 245. 00 and Emergency fund, $21,719.00 All other accounts also show good balances.

With a good balance on hand, it is imposible to reduce the taxes of the county as the cost of operation is way above average. Our schools must still have more money with which to operate. Although the school buses were purchased last year, the tax for 1947 will have a slight increase.

Automobile and Truck licenses went on sale December 1st. The license money amounts to approximately $85,000.00 and the county receives fifty cents for each registration, making a total of $3,390.00.

Several of the children have been absent part of the time this week.

We have been busy making Christmas decorations. Some of the things we have made are wreaths, candles, bells, chains and we each colored a Santa Claus.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News

We have been working problems involving interest in 8th arithmetic while seventh arithmetic has delt with bar graphs.

The seventh grade are reading Christmas Carol by Dickens.

Nellie Grieman was absent most of last week.

We began work on our Christmas projects in art class Friday. When we finish them, we expect to design our own wrapping paper and gift card for each.

Freshman Report

This week in English we tried our luck at writing poetry. The following poem was composed by Gloria Haefner.

Music

Music is a wonderful thing
It can do so much for you.
It can paint pictures on your mind.
Pictures beautiful and true.
Pictures of moonlight on the lake.
Pictures of butterflies wide awake,
Pictures of marches and heroes brave,
Pictures you will treasure and save.

Music is a wonderful thing,
It can do so much for you.
It can make you feel sad and lonely,
It can cheer you when you are blue.

Our interest in science is now centered on "Our Use and Control of light." Thomas Edison invented the electric light. We all enjoy the use of this great achievement.

Addition, subtraction and now multiplication and division of algebraic problems have been mastered in algebra.

Don Finders has returned to school following his recent operation.

We have been studying about the Crusaders in World History.

The Seniors
—Elizabeth Goll

Characters have been chosen for the play that the nine o'clock Literature class is planning to present for our Christmas party. The play is "The Chritsmas Carol" by Charles Dickens, the main characters belong Scrooge played by Dean Jacobs. Most of the class has some part in the play, minor as it may be, and we're all planning to work together so that all of K. H. S. may enjoy it.

Usually all of us want to talk at once during class discussion in Business Law. Well, no one seemed to say much on Friday, which is our test day. The reason for this is that we had an oral test and practically everything we said was graded. "Carriers" will be taken up next week.

"The War of 1812" has been this weeks history topic except for Friday when our news reviews and condition of the coal strike were discussed.

Ten column work sheets have been the problem in Booking—and I do mean problem in Bookkeeping and I do mean problem. When an error of only two or three cents is made we think it would be much easier to put in the amount out of our pockets rather than to find the mistake. We'd really be accurate Bookkeepers, don't you think?

"Temperature Measurement" in other words "Heat is being studied in the Physics class.

By the reports you can easily see that our basketball team is doing all right for themselves. But how about a little support from the adults in the crowd just for good measure? We high school students have good lungs and use them, but a litle more volume would be appreciated. The excuse that you don't know the yells just won't work for as you may have noticed "they're old as the hills" come on and help us out.

Strong flavored vegetables go well with the pheasant, duck, quail or coot bagged this time of year.

HOUSE PLANTS MAY NOT BLOOM IF ROOM TOO HOT

Home makers whose house plants refuse to bloom may find they are keeping the plants in rooms with too high a temperature. Larry Grove, Iowa State College horticulturist, says most flowering potted plants form their buds at about 65 degrees Fahrenheit. Plants kept at high-temperatures often will not bloom.

The daytime temperatures can be raised to 70 degrees once the plants have set their buds. And since no food is manufactured by plant leaves in the absence of light, the room temperature may be allowed to drop to 55 or 60 degrees during the night without offecting the plants.

PROFIT IN FINISHING HOGS WELL THIS YEAR

With one eye on the large corn supply and the other on the strong demand for pork, Iowa State College farm economist say this is one year when farmers will find it profitable to do a good job of fnishing their hogs.

Hogs with a good weight and finish can be sorted out and sent to market. But the lighter animals and the ones that lack finish should be kept on the farm for longer feeding.

Many trade observers believe that some sections already have reached the peak in hog marketings. As the price schedules level off though the balance of the winter. Late winter and early summer may see a large supply of hogs on the market, however.

Buyers of furniture should know what they're paying for to be sure of getting their money's worth, say home furnishing specialiss at Iowa State College. Construction should be thoroughly gone over before buying.

If farmers continue to market light light hogs, the peak in hog prices will come rather early next spring; if they hold present hogs to heavier weights, the peak will be delayed, according to Lauren K. Soth, Iowa State College farm economist.

A Grand American Tradition

ppers had a grand old nion last week—for the since the war.

l little Cuppers came, by rain, from as far west ska and as far east as They crowded Dee and use, set up quarters in , or stopped with neigh d a jollier gathering you ave imagined!

ked to their final Saturr supper, when they sang , drank beer and cider, . Dark Cuppers and blonde ones—Vermont accents and Alabama drawls—doctors and farmers . . . all with their differences of taste and politics, yet as close and harmonious in spirit as a group could be.

From where I sit, it's a great American tradition—not just family reunions, but the ability to get along as one harmonious family, regardless of differences of taste—whether it's taste for politics or farming, beer or cider.

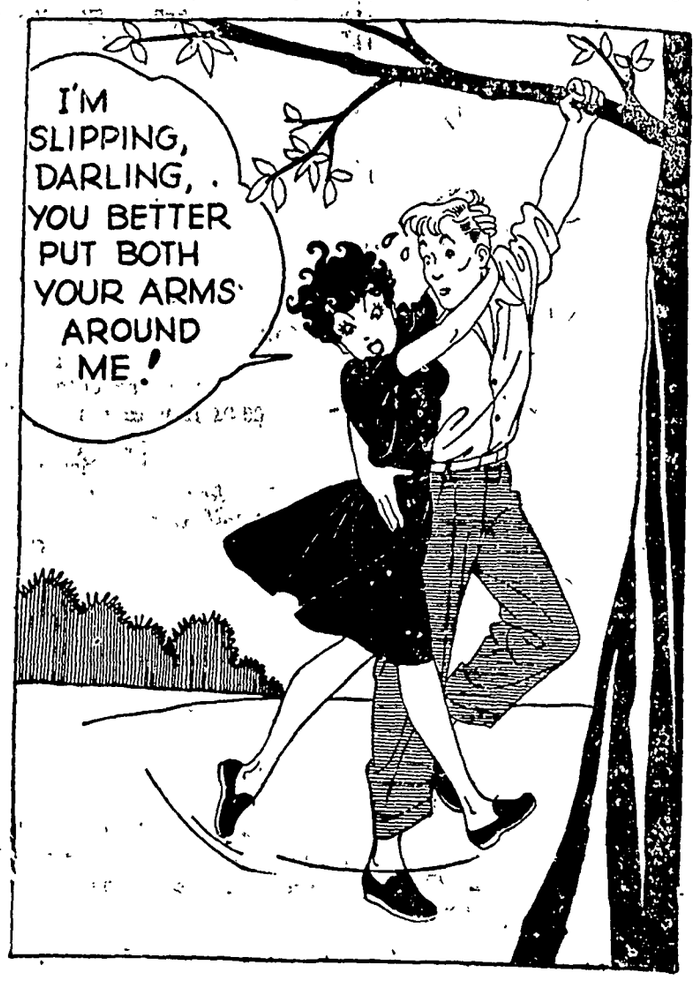
MOPSY by GLADYS PARKER



He Met the Dragon

A tramp knocked on the door of the inn known as "George and the Dragon." The landlady opened the door, and the tramp asked: "Could you spare a poor hungry man a bite to eat?"

"No!" and she slammed the door.

A few minutes later the tramp knocked again. The landlady came again. He asked: "Could I have a few words with George?"

PHILEMON: A LETTER ON CHRISTIAN BROTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—Philemon 4-20.

MEMORY SELECTION—Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.—II Corinthians 3 17.

Christian brotherhood! That may not sound like a dynamic influence destined to change the world, but that is just what it has done. We study today a letter written about a slave boy at a time when slavery was accepted as right, but it stated principles of Christian consideration and brotherly love which were eventually to overthrow slavery. It is still at work today when and where we let it!

This letter, written by Paul and yet by the Holy Spirit, personal and yet eternal and spiritual in its application, is a model of letter writing, and equally a model of Christian brotherhood. It concerns one Onesimus, a slave who had deserted his master and probably defrauded him (v. 18). He had been converted and now was being sent back to his master.

I. "I Might Be Bold—Yet I Rather Beseech Thee" (vv. 4-9).

After a fine spiritual salutation (vv. 1-3), Paul enters upon an appeal to Philemon which is a model of tact and courtesy.

First he lets Philemon know of his prayerful interest in him. Paul had been praying for him, that's why he could say such a helpful word.

Then he recognizes Philemon's goodness and his effective testimony for Christ. This was an excellent approach to the making of a request, and be sure that it was not empty or hypocritical flattery. We do well to recognize the fine qualities of our Christian brother, and we could profitably speak of them more than we do.

Then Paul was ready to make his request. See how nicely he does it. He skillfully reminds Philemon that he (Paul) might make some demands, and especially in view of his age and his imprisonment. But he will not do so; rather he says, "I beseech thee."

II. "Without Thy Mind I Would Do Nothing" (vv. 10-16).

Paul, the aged prisoner, had found in his new convert, Onesimus, a real helper. He would have liked to keep him. In fact, says he to Philemon, Onesimus could do for me the things you would want to do if you were here (v. 13).

Paul could have felt sure of the willingness of Philemon. He could have assumed that the request would be granted. And in any case, Philemon did not even know where Onesimus was, so why not keep him? He did not reason thus.

True Christian consideration respects the personal rights and the property rights of another. We must not assume, or demand, or put pressure on anyone (v. 14) to get what they have or to draw out their service.

Another expression of consideration is found in verses 15 and 16. Philemon had lost a heathen slave, now he is receiving back a Christian brother. No worker will give less in service, and, no master will demand more, because both are Christians.

Now Paul touches on one of the finest elements involved in Christian brotherhood, namely, co-operation. We are to live and labor together for a common cause. Pleading for his friend and brother, the young slave Onesimus, he says:

III. "If Thou Count Me a Partner, Receive Him" (vv. 17-21).

Partners share the benefits and the burdens of their joint enterprise. Partners in the gospel, like Paul and Philemon, shared not only spiritual blessings, but also the responsibilities. Paul was presenting such an item to Philemon in the return of Onesimus. Something had to be done about the debt of Onesimus, his failure as a servant. Paul says, "Charge it to me, your partner."

It has been pointed out that there is here a blessed example of the important doctrine of imputation, which is the "act of God whereby he accounts righteousness to the believer in Christ," because he "has borne the believer's sins in vindication of the law." So we note that verses 17 and 18 perfectly illustrate imputation.

Paul's promise, "I will repay it" (v. 19), was the legal phraseology of a promissory note in his day. It was a bonafide partnership transaction, yet it was coupled with a reminder of indebtedness. Everything Philemon had and was he owed to Paul; but, says the latter, "I will not speak of that now."

No right-thinking person is content always to be on the receiving end. The humblest recipient of favor or the smallest child who feels the love of another wants to respond. The considerate friend will, therefore, not always insist on giving, but will graciously (like Paul) open the way for co-operation, for partnership.

"A proved bull means half the farmer's herd"

THAT'S a strong statement, but there's truth in it. Selection of good cows is only part of a sound dairy program.

At our place, we figure that the selection of a good bull is just as important. And when we say picking a good bull, we mean one that has production records for his sisters . . . and for his mother's and father's sisters, too. Good proved sires are herd builders. The next best thing is a son of a good proved sire out of a good cow.

THELMA RENNER A DECEMBER BRIDE

Is Married To Harold Daescher, Clear Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Renner of Clear Lake announce the engagement and marriage of their daughter, Miss Thelma Lucille to Harold Daescher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Daescher of Mason City, which was performed on Friday evening, December 13, at the Klemme Methodist Church at 8:00 o'clock with the Rev. Herschel E. Harvey reading the double ring ceremony. The event was also the groom's birthday anniversary.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Royal blue street length dress with a blue orchid surrounded by yellow, pink and white rose buds. She was attended by Mrs. Ruth Jorgensen who wore a melon street dress with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses with pink and blue sweet peas.

The groom was attended by Carl Jass of Mason City, Iowa.

The bride's mother wore a black dress and the groom's mother wore a pastel suit. Both wore corsages of red roses with pink and white carnations.

Twenty four lighted candles formed a background for the ceremony and nuptial music was played on the electric sound system as a prelude, processional and recessional. Rev. Harvey sang, "I Love You Truly," and was accompanied on the piano by his daughter, Miss LaNelle Harvey. The Misses Margaret Daescher and Dorothy Jass were the usherettes.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents south of Clear Lake, where the home was beautifully decorated, blue and white being used as the color scheme, and lighted with candles.

The bride's table was decorated with two large baskets of white mums and a decorated wedding cake served as the center-piece. Thirty five guests were present and included:

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Renner; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Renner, Jane and Bill; Mr. and Mrs. Norval Renner and Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Daescher of Clear Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Daescher of Mason City; Misses Margaret and Sharon Daescher, Mason City; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jorgenson; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jass, Dorothy and Jannette of Mason City; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smit and Mr. and Mrs. Jens Pederson of Clear Lake.

Hancock County Farmers Ready For Spring Work

Hancock County farmers took advantage of the good weather the past two weeks during the belated "Indian Summer" by getting a lot of their plowing done, which usually has to wait until spring.

Nearly all of the corn and beans have been harvested in the county and farm work well ahead of the average fall season.

Besides doing fall plowing many farmers had time to disc down corn stalks during the dry, warm days.

Dorothy Baack Bride Of James Rae, Detroit, Mich.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Baack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Baack of Klemme, Iowa, to Mr. James A. Rae of Detroit, Michigan, took place at the Scovel Presbyterian Church at Detroit on Saturday, November 30th with the Rev. George Jeffery officiating.

A candlelight servcie was used before an altar banked with palms and baskets of 'mums. To the strains of Lohrengrin's Wedding March, the bride entered on the arm of her father.

She was attired in pearl grey wool crepe with a long sleeved dress with brown accessories and her corsage was a single orchid. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Her attendant was Miss Donna Emrich, of Detroit, a close friend of the bride who wore coral wool crepe with black accessories. Her corsage was of light green gardenias.

The groom was attended by Don Rohle of Columbus, Ohio, a close friend.

The bride's mother wore a black crepe dress with matching accessories, and the groom's mother wore Dubonnet velvet with black accessories. Both wore corsages of yellow carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the parlor of the church where 150 guests were entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Rae took a honeymoon trip to the Smoky Mountans in Tennessee, after which which they are at home in Detroit at 844 Delaware Ave.

The bride is well known in Klemme, having attended the Klemme High School and was named Klemme's Band Queen in 1942. She was employed at Mason City and the past 3 years was employed in the office of Dr. Shemback in Detriot.

Mr. Rae is a Wayne University graduate and is employed as public accountant at the Edison Co.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Baack and Mrs. Carol Kropp and Carroll of near Klemme; Mr. and Mrs. Don Rae of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

WILL BRING TREATS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

All Children Invited To Come To Klemme

This next Tuesday, December 23 will be a gala day in Klemme for the youngsters of this territory, as Santa Claus will be here with treats for all the kiddies. He will arrive about 2:00 p. m. on Main Street and will hand out treats assisted by a Civic Club committee.

If there is sufficient snow on the ground, he will come by sled with sleigh bells and all, and if the weatherman won't cooperate for a white Christmas he will use the more modern mode of transportation, arriving from the north and coming down main street.

The jolly old fellow has had more difficulty than usual in getting his supply of treats for the kiddies this year, due to the sugar shortage, but he assures all youngsters that there will be plenty of treats and they will be the best obtainable anywhere, anytime. Santa just won't let the kiddies down and this year he has gone all out to insure his appearance here with adequate treats for all the kiddies.

Ill-Advised Policies Bring Downfall

Lack of 'Political Sense' Leads Wallace to Oblivion

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — Unless some strange shift in the tide of national affairs takes place between the time these lines are written and when they appear in print, the name that once bristled in the headlines, made the Paris peace conference shudder and completely confounded the Truman administration will be filed under "W" and forgotten by most people who aren't subscribers to the New Republic.

Baukhage

I refer to the name Henry Agar Wallace.

I have talked with a great many men who knew Wallace well. Most of them who liked him still like him. But many who supported him in the past follow him no longer.

One of them said to me:

"Henry Wallace has been drowned at last in a sea of ideas. He has gone down for the third time and there is nobody with a lifeline handy."

I think of two other men, one an experienced government official, a trained politician; another an ardent New Dealer who happens to be equipped with a mathematical mind sharp as a steel trap—each of these men followed Henry Wallace a long way. But each man at one point in his career suddenly stopped aghast at one of Wallace's self-created misadventures, shrugged his shoulders and regretfully turned away.

One of the first criticisms you hear from Wallace's political friends is that he has no political sense.

As head of the department of agriculture, Wallace, according to most disinterested observers, was a success as a policy-maker and an administrator. (Don't bring up the little pigs—he did that against every one of his natural predilections.)

As secretary of commerce he was a dismal failure.

Wallace did understand agriculture, agriculturists (farmers) and agronomy. He believed that he had (and has) the correct formula for solving the economic (business) ills of the country. But what he didn't realize was that he was handicapped by what is incorrectly called an "inferiority complex" when it comes to dealing with human beings who made the wheels of business go round. He had a strange and deep suspicion of the business world. Perhaps that wasn't so strange for it reflects the natural attitude of the farmer toward the "city slicker." Perhaps it was another phase of that "shyness" which characterized Wallace.

Let's look at this "suspicion" business:

On one of several occasions, Wallace as secretary of commerce addressed a prominent group of conservative business men. His colleagues watched the event with considerable trepidation. They knew the group was unsympathetic to Wallace and that Wallace knew it. However, it provided an opportunity to create a friendly atmosphere, if nothing more. Wallace made a swell speech. His colleagues were agreeably surprised. His audience was almost captivated. In fact, as the speech went on, one after another of the listeners showed that Wallace's views were well received—were anything but inimical to business. Many of the ideas he advanced were accepted as sound, sane and sensible. So far—so good. Wallace reached the end of his prepared script and then, suddenly overcome with this strange defensive complex, this "suspicion," said something to this effect: "Tonight I have probably wasted your time and mine, for I realize that you couldn't possibly agree with me nor I with you." The whole effect was ruined.

Intimates Admire Wallace's Integrity

Men who know Wallace best agree that he is absolutely honest, that he is unselfish, that he can be a very deep student of a subject which interests him, that he has a powerful ambition to be a leader of the forces that will preserve old-fashioned American free enterprise and competitive capitalistic endeavor. But he is willing to adopt strange methods to achieve this. (Remember the little pigs.)

In making clear to his friends that it was his ambition to be secretary of commerce he convinced them of his belief in five propositions. They were that:

1. He believes the capitalistic system cannot survive another war.

2. He believes the capitalistic system cannot survive another financial depression such as we went through in the early 30s.

3. He is convinced that the country is headed for another such depression.

4. He believes that this catastrophe can be avoided if certain simple measures are taken.

5. He believes that this end—the perpetuation of free enterprise — justifies almost any means.

As soon as Wallace became secretary of commerce he attempted to reorganize the department along lines which had made the department of agriculture so successful insofar as co-operation between government and farmers is concerned. One of the first steps was to try to establish a system of "field agents" (similar to agriculture's county agents). Good men were hard to find; it takes time to build such a system. The personnel recruited under such conditions and within so short a time would be bound to include many incompetents and thus open the system to immediate attack by an unfriendly congress. Nevertheless, Wallace pushed the idea as far as he could during his tenure of office. This, his critics say, showed his inability to perform in a field with which he was unfamiliar, showed his lack of "political sense" (or, if you will, his failure to grasp the complexities of inter-personal relations).

Like many other men who have been thrust into high government offices without sufficient political experience, he attempted to absorb that experience vicariously. The very fact that he lacked an understanding of political and personal relations caused him to accept advisors and counsellors who frequently led him astray. Perhaps if he had been less advised his conduct would have been less ill-advised.

Jealous Eye on Antarctica

Adm. Richard Byrd is about to take off again for Antarctica with a horde of anxious nations worried to death lest he run away, with the five million square miles of ice-capped rock which covers the south polar regions as the dew covers Dixie (but different!).

The foreign claims are legitimate enough, for daring explorers have been nibbling at that piece of frost-bitten plateau (bigger than Europe) ever since John Briscoe actually discovered what was given the name of Enderby land in the early nineteenth century. Many others followed, but few took the keen interest in the Antarctic waste that Admiral Byrd did, although he didn't turn in that direction until after he had flown over the North Pole.

Which reminds me of a dull Sunday, May 9, 1926. I was keeping watch in the Washington office of a feature syndicate which had the rights to Byrd's adventures. We knew he was going to hop off for the pole from Spitzbergen with Floyd Bennett soon, but we didn't know when.

Messenger boys had a habit of dropping unimportant messages on the particular desk which I occupied and I hardly glanced up when one, still soggy, was tossed within my reach. I finished the last episode of the comic strip I was studying and opened the envelope. It contained one word, "polaris."

That was the code word that meant that Byrd had flown over the North Pole and was back alive.

On November 29, three years later, he flew over the South Pole. The flight was only a small part of extended explorations made on two separate expeditions.

Now Byrd is off again, with jealous competitors watching him with jealous concern. His expedition probably will be met with mixed emotions by the penguins who are the only human-looking inhabitants of Antarctica.

PARADISE FOR BIRDS . . . We can't count them but we are told that there are 1,263,000 gooney birds on Johnston island, which played an important part in U. S. operations during the war in the Pacific. The birds take off en masse when an airplane lands or departs from the island, setting up an ear-splitting squawk.

Occupation Probe Killed; Disarmament Gets Boost

U. N.: Move to Disarm

The war-weary old world seemed headed for substantial disarmament as Russia took the lead in the United Nations to force a reduction in militarization.

In the first U. N. step toward disarmament, members agreed to report on the strength of their armed forces at home and abroad by January 1. Originally, the Reds had asked that the report be confined to the number of Allied troops on foreign soil, but the U. S. and Britain were quick to call for count of forces at home as well.

Continuing to dominate the disarmament spotlight, Russia then proposed the creation of an international commission to supervise disarmament, reversing previous Soviet objections to such control. Favor for the proposal, however, was qualified by misapprehension over the Russian provision that such an international commission would be subject to the veto power of the security council.

ARMY: Buck Occupation Quiz

Acting upon the urgings of Secretary of State Byrnes and Senators Vandenberg and Connally, his foreign policy advisers, the senate war investigating committee killed the projected inquiry into the conduct of U. S. occupation forces in Germany.

The Democratic majority acted even after George Meader, committee counsel, had sharply criticized the war and state departments for occupation irregularities following a month long study of conditions in the reich. There have been recurring reports of the disorderly conduct of U. S. troops, widespread black market activities of military and civilian personnel, and economic chaos occasioned by political differences among the major occupying powers.

With German civilians already looking askance at U. S. troops, military authorities have opposed an official inquiry for fear of losing further face in the reich and among the other occupying nations. As the governing force in the American zone and the pivot of the western allies in Europe, the U. S. must command the respect of both the vanquished and Russia.

TEXAS: Landlords Sit Down

No rental property owner herself but a Gold Star mother who lost a son over Germany, Mrs. Frank Morris of Dallas took over command of a landlords' sit down in Texas to abolish rent control and restore owners' rights to manage their own holdings.

As 3,000 dwelling units in Dallas remained empty because of landlords' refusal to let them and vets walked the city's streets in search of housing, Mrs. Morris termed rent control a violation of traditional American rights.

Two World War I vets were in the forefront of the landlords' movement. Abed with heart trouble resulting from German shell fire in 1918, Joe H. Blann held one five-room cottage and 18 flats vacant after OPA had obtained a $289 judgment against him in a price squabble. Bemedaled Capt. John R. Lowery kept 63 apartments empty because he charged owners possessed no control over destructive tenants.

WORLD TRADE: Draw Blueprint

Representatives of 18 countries — except Russia — have been meeting in London with the signal task of drawing up a blueprint for world trade to be considered at an international conference to take place in the fall of 1947.

As the delegates in London sweated over their labors, a recommendation for full employment emerged as one of the No. 1 accomplishments of the parley. Recognizing the inter-relationships of nations in economic affairs, the conferees agreed that all countries are responsible not only to their own people but to all others to maintain purchasing power and a high demand for consumer goods.

Methods for working out this principle were left to individual countries. In cases where one nation was selling more to another and thereby developing an unfavorable trade balance, the creditor country was given discretion to determine what steps to take to even out the exchange.

LACK WARTIME IMPETUS

Savings Mount; Pace Is Slower

WASHINGTON. — Accumulation of savings, both by individuals and business, has continued to increase during 1946 but the gain has been "moderate" compared with the wartime increase, according to a report released by the Federal Reserve board.

Personal holdings of liquid assets —cash, bank accounts and government bonds — increased by $4,600,000,000 in the first half of this year to a total of nearly $152,000,000,000, but the gain was described as "moderate" compared with the wartime increase.

Expenditures Rise.

The slower rate of saving was attributed to "reduced consumer savings as the rise in consumer expenditures for goods and services, many of which had not been available during the war, exceeded the increase in consumer incomes."

Although individuals' time deposits grew almost as fast as during the late war years, growth of demand deposits slowed and that in government bonds ceased as cashings of Series E bonds outstripped new purchases from February through September.

Business holdings of government securities declined $4,600,000,000 in the first half of 1946 as large tax liabilities were paid and funds were sought for capital expenditures and other production and distribution needs, the reserve board reported.

Deposits Stationary.

Business demand deposits increased somewhat, but time deposits and currency showed almost no change; leaving business liquid assets at the high level of about $70,000,000,000 at midyear.

The broad regional pattern of more rapid growth in bank deposits in the West and South than in other parts of the country has continued this year, but the difference has become less sharp.

The swifter wartime deposit expansion was attributed to concentration of special military camps and depots and relatively greater expansion of industrial facilities.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Hermit Is Entire Population Of Isolated N. Y. Community

WNU Features

COLD RIVER CITY, N. Y.—With Noah John Rondeau, 63-year-old hermit, as its only resident, Cold River City ranks as one of the nation's most novel one-man communities. Although it probably won't be found on any map, the community has been dubbed Cold River City by its gray-bearded occupant.

Perched on the edge of a 75-foot ravine "30 odd miles from nowhere" in the heart of the Adirondack mountains, Cold River City boasts no modern conveniences, not even a kerosene stove. To reach the town, visitors must start out from "civilization," 38 miles away at Saranac lake and hike into the woods—unless they're lucky enough to hitch a ride part way on a forest service truck.

Rondeau has been living in the woods more than 30 years now, 15 of them as a professed hermit. He loves the woods and isn't as lonely as many another person sitting in a crowded railroad station. As his nearest neighbor is 19 miles away, he necessarily has few visitors.

Rangers Bring Supplies.

Forest rangers, who pass by every few weeks or so, are his best friends. Formerly Noah would trek the 38 miles to Saranac lake twice a year to do his marketing. Of late, however, the rangers have been packing in supplies for him. Fellow can't be a real hermit, in his estimation, if he wants to run out to market every so often.

Time means little to the aging solitary. If he wants to know the hour, he just takes a squint at the sun. Rondeau doesn't believe in clocks. "Busted up the last one I had 'cause the derned thing kept waking me up with the ticking," he said.

There never has been a Mrs. Rondeau. He doesn't like women.

"Never did like women around," he said. "They talk only once a day — from morning 'til night—and besides, they want to boss a man around. Then they sometimes want to bring their mother to live with you."

Despite his isolated home, Rondeau is pretty well up on affairs of today. He scans his weeks old newspapers avidly, whenever the rangers or passing hikers leave them.

Versed on Affairs.

"I've read up a good deal on atomic power, and in a way I was sorry they made a war weapon out of it. But the way it saved so many of our boys' lives, I guess it was a good thing," Rondeau commented.

He also has his opinions on world affairs. Denying that he's an isolationist, Rondeau nevertheless believes the United States is "too concerned about other countries."

Rondeau went to New York City once, 20 years ago. But he didn't like the looks of the place. "Everybody seemed a-bustling. It was all helter-skelter to me."

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

AIRPORT CHATTER

Airport development, state legislation affecting aviation, safety and education were stressed in the third annual Iowa aviation clinic held at Des Moines November 29 and 30, with leaders in the aviation industry and pilots from all parts of the state attending. The clinic was sponsored by the aviation committee of Des Moines chamber of commerce, Iowa Flying Farmers and National Aeronautic association chapters of the state. . . . Life is different on the farm nowadays — an airplane gave aid to corn picking on the U. M. Babb farm near Chillicothe, Mo. When the Babb corn picker broke down in the midst of the harvest, Earl Babb, a son and former army air forces captain, rented a plane at a Chillicothe airport, flew to Des Moines, Iowa, for spare parts, and was back in a few hours. . . . The huge runway construction project at the new $2,500,000 municipal airport at Dubuque, Iowa, has been completed. The 835-acre field is provided with two taxiways, both 150 feet wide with one 5,600 feet long and the other 4,900 feet. Installation of lights, seeding and fencing will be started in the spring. . . . The campaign for installation of air markers at Michigan airports has a staunch backer in Kim Sigler, newly-elected governor. "I'll attend to that first," he promised. . . . Add to the growing list of college aviation clubs, the Bruin Flying club recently organized by 25 students at University of California at Los Angeles. Many of the fledgling fliers are war veterans. A cross-country hop to Palm Springs is planned during the Christmas holidays. . . . Two new airplanes have been added to the Storm Lake, Iowa, airport equipment for use as flying ambulances. . . . First reunion of the Grasshopper squadron, one of aviation's most exclusive groups of pilots, was held in Washington December 6. Members of the squadron demonstrated military possibilities of light airplanes to the army in the 1941 maneuvers throughout the south and west.

Texas antelope are on the move—but not of their own volition. They are being trapped by airplane, then moved by truck from sheep ranges to the better pasturage offered on cattle ranges of the Panhandle. Working from the air, trappers drive the herds into a long-wing corral half a mile in length. The corral is composed of an outside net wire and an inner wall of heavy cord net, with a four-inch mesh, serving somewhat like a fish net. The net gives with the charge of the antelope, lowering the danger of injury. Four men work on the ground, leaving their blinds to close gates behind the trapped animals. Trapper O. F. Ethridge used his airplane to do a "buzz" job that corralled 103 antelope in one roundup.

HIGH FLIERS

Something new in international flings has been inaugurated in Florida. Mama and papa can put baby in bed, tour the hot spots of Cuba and be back in Miami by dawn. Pan American Airways' "night club special" leaves Miami at 9 p. m., arriving in Havana 90 minutes later. After a gay whirl of night spots in the Cuban capital, the international fun seekers speed back home in a 54-passenger Clipper. Overflow reservations necessitated two Clippers on the first flight.

Colorful Dances Of West Shown On Student Tour

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Early American, Mexican and cowboy dances are portrayed in all their vivid color and flavor by the widely-traveled western dance team of Cheyenne Mountain high school here, which recently completed a jaunt to the midwest for its regular fall trip.

The dancers make an annual trip to a different part of the country, presenting the unique program of dances. Before the war they appeared in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. Travel is, by special bus, a gift to the school.

Dr. Lloyd Shaw, superintendent of the school and authority on square and folk dances, directs the student dancers.

During their recent midwestern jaunt, the dancers appeared before the Wisconsin State Teachers association convention in Milwaukee as well as in Chicago, La Grange, Ill., Sheboygan and La Crosse, Wis., Minneapolis and St. Cloud, Minn., and Lincoln, Neb.

Women Legislators Set Record in Iowa

DES MOINES, IOWA. — Three women will sit in the Iowa legislature convening here in January to set a record feminine representation. Although three women among 158 members of the legislature isn't much representation, it does establish a record as never before have more than two women served in the legislature at one time.

The "apron-string" section will consist of Sen. Kathlyn Kirketeg, 43, of Bedford; Rep. Edna Lawrence, 40, of Ottumwa, and Rep. Amy Bloom, 57, of Dayton. All are Republicans and all are former school teachers.

Art Termed Ageless — And So Are Students

HAYS, KANS. — Kansas State college's perennial art student is the title conferred on Mrs. H. F. Addison, 68. After living in Hays for 44 years and watching the school grow, Mrs. Addison's desire for learning got the better of her and she enrolled in the art department eight years ago. She hasn't missed a course since then. Her interests ranged from drawing to design.

Until Morning

By BERTHA MAE INBODY

Young Dr. Janet Rhodes pulled the brown suede hat closer over her eyes. She couldn't look up—to see the exchange of Santa Claus glances between beaming mothers and little boys. Once—was it but one Christmas ago?—a little hand had held tightly to hers.

She was jostled by the merry rush. Children with bundles, mothers and fathers—and little boys! He, too, had carried packages that seemed too large for him, last Christmas Eve "Mumsie, what's in this one?" he had asked, excitedly. "It's so-o-o fat!". So clearly now his question came to her, that she answered half aloud, "Oh, Billy, you just wait—until morning!"

A dry sob, catching at her throat, seemed to steady her. She must pull herself out of it. At six-thirty her "Children's Hour" must be on the air. "Fairy Godmother," the children had named her.

Thousands of little figures, crowding close to the loud speaker, listened breathlessly. "Little soldiers," she called these little pain-weary bodies.

The Fairy Godmother shut her eyes. In imagination, her arms held her own little crippled soldier, who fought so bravely against infantile paralysis. But promises of Santa Claus must go out to them. Unconsciously she ended with the words: "But you just wait—until morning!"

Unrecognized by her, it was bitterness that kept her from reading the scrawled, childish messages that came to her. Tonight the basket seemed to mock her. A tipsy little envelope, sliding from the top, seemed to block her way out She stared at it, stooped, picked it up. It clung to her hand, pleading. From it she drew a soiled card and deciphered the words:

"Dere fairy godmother, there is bugles with horses on them ain't there. Nick in the bed next to mine sez no, won't you pleeze tell Santa to bring me one. My leg's gettin better. Merrie Crismus Jimmy Dean, children's hospitul."

Janet pushed through the crowds Smiling eyes looked directly into other smiling eyes. She was to buy a bugle—with a horse on it! Two hours she searched, fruitlessly. Then, like a flash it came to her. She would have a small horse soldered to the bugle. Over-ruling the salesman's objections that there wasn't time, she emerged triumphant with the coveted gift. Again the words: "Mumsie, what's in this one? It's so-o-o fat!"

Breathlessly she entered the brightly lighted room of Children's Hospital, where the annual Christmas party was almost over. She slipped the package behind the tree and sank into a chair. Her eyes drifted across the room—to Jimmy Dean. Even if he had not held a tiny bugle, she would have known him by the bravery behind the disappointed eyes. And when one is an orphan, even fairy godmothers sometimes fail you.

Santa was now taking up the package, saying, "This goes to Jimmy Dean."

Doctor Janet watched the transformation on Jimmy's face and eyes. It was like the look, like the light in—her arms tightened, but the child was gone. Bewildered, frightened, fascinated, she stared at the child in the wheelchair. The eager little hands fumbled with the gay ribbon, then the biggest, shiniest bugle came into view. He hugged it to himself. "I knew, oh, I knew he would bring it if I asked her to tell him!"

Janet sat there, entranced. Nurses were taking their charges away, and Jimmy was out of sight. And then, somehow, she was running after him, and her arms were about it.

Santa Claus Has Often Been Cruelly Murdered

Many men in history have murdered Santa Claus. It was not long ago that Adolf Hitler turned the city of the famous Manger Plays, Kripenspiel, into Dachau, the most notorious concentration camp in all Europe.

In 1930 the Mexican government officially did away with the fur-robed Santa Claus and in his place placed a feathered snake, the ancient god of the Aztecs.

PROGRESS OF COAL STRIKE . . . Stanley Jarzabek's smile turned to a more serious expression as the coal strike continued. As seen in these two views of the New Kensington miner, the first, left, taken as he left the Harmar mine at Harmarville, Pa. At right, after he had been out on strike for several days and things didn't look so bright. Many of the miners have been spending their "vacation" gathering wood.

CAVE MASSACRE TRIAL . . . In the second row are Col. Gen. Eberhart von Mackensen, left, and Lt. Gen. Kurt Meltzer, right, flanking an interpreter as their trial for responsibility for the Ardeatine cave massacre of 335 Italian hostages, many of whom were picked up at random from people walking on the street, got under way. In front of them are members of the German defense council. Mackensen was commander of the Nazi 14th army and Meltzer, occupation chief in Rome. The trial is being conducted at Rome.

CHRISTMAS IN ARIZONA . . . Decorating giant Sahuaro cacti in the famed "Valley of the Sun," these cowgirls make the cacti do Christmas tree duty.

PEN PAL-PITATION

The way you clutter up the U. S. mails is a national problem. Even with so many of the boys back from overseas (and isn't it about time, too?) You're still making the postman ring twice for letters to and from pals from all corners of this and other countries. Here are your preferences in paper: Your selections in stationery.

Musical Manuscripts—You love the new writing papers that has a different Song Title at the top of each sheet and the first line of the song written all 'round in border effect. You pick the song that fits the situation. For instance, "I Can't Begin to Tell You" would mean—well, that you can't begin to tell him, we suppose

Novelty Note — You like those tricky decorations—like a picture of two sailors at the top of the paper, with the title "Gobs of Love." And you're in love with the paper that's printed all over with little charms, like the ones you wear on your bracelets. Of course, you still go for the Jabberwocky paper—but that's an oldie.

Personal Paper—You have your own stationery made up with your photo printed in the upper left-hand corner, or you have it engraved with your nickname, instead of your initials.

Or—most personal of all, you kiss a lip-print on the paper and preserve it with a coating of colorless nail polish. More impressive than the usual "X."

OVERHEATED

A Denison woman recently took a heating pad to bed with her because of rheumatism. During the night she awoke, smelling smoke, and on lifting the covers the bedding burst into flame. Outside of shock, she was unhurt.

LOST FINGER

Corn picker tragedies are still much evident in Iowa. At Dunlap, Laurence Heller fared better than most, losing only two fingers and Edmund Smith of the same vicinity suffered fractures of all fingers of his right hand.

Mrs. Harvey Barz and Mrs. Melvin Neuberger were Thursday afternoon visitors in our room.

In Art we have been making Christmas decorations for our room. We put our Christmas tree up last Tuesday. Alan Neuberger brought some lights for our tree.

Cecil Jacobs treated the room with frost sticks Thursday as it was his birthday.

Fifth And Sixth Grade News

—Mrs. H. G. Voetberg, Teacher.

We now have our Chritsmas tree up. Our room is decorated with things we have made in Art class.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. Neuberger visited our sixth grade geography class.

Recently we have had three birthdays in our room, Delwyn Brede, Sharon Bridges, and Larry Stille. Each brought treats to school which were enjoyed by all.

We have been reading how Christmas is celebrated in other parts of the world. It's been very ineresting to know in what ways we do things alike.

In fifth grade history we have been reading about the Gold Rush of 1849. On Tuesday we each wrote a diary of one week telling of our experience of an imaginary trip taken during this time.

In English we are trying to build efficient and unified sentences. But it seems hard because we are so accustomed to stretching our sentences to the limit.

What makes Mr. Rector spring those daily Biology quizzes? I am sure that he found out what he wanted to know; that most of us should read our lesson more.

Probably every member of the high school is looking forward to the Christmas party which will be held December 19. At this party there will be the gift exchange. Here's hoping that there won't be a lovely snow storm to stop us from coming.

Ruth Janssen has been ill with pneumonia and we are all glad to see her back in school again.

Klemme basketball boys were defeated for the first time in the season by Garner. But there is one consolation, it was a close sroce of 27 to 28 in Garner's favor.

Cheerleaders were chosen on Wednesday with Emily Johnson, Ruth Kurtz, Ardel Rosendahl, and Alice Meyer in the lead. These are now our cheerleaders, so lets stand behind them, what do you say?

A Note From The Juniors

One more week of school and then vacation. Everyone is looking forward to Christmas because everytime you come into the study hall everyone is slaving away getting their work caught up before vacation time. Well, I did see a few working!

The Literature classes are working on the play, "The Christmas Carol." I am sure it will be a big success.

Mrs. Leith is becoming well satisfied with the geometry class if only the people would not whisper in back of the room, thats not saying that we in the front of the room are all nice children and never whisper.

The typing classes are certainly interested in those typing charts hung up in the back of the typing room. I believe we are all finding out that we had better try to decrease our errors.

The American Junior Red Cross is a very good cause, so why not let us all do our bit in making it a success.

SHAMROCKS CHALK UP ANOTHER WIN AT CORWITH

Coach Pat Patterson's Shamrocks rung up another victory at Corwith Tuesday night by winning 38 to 22 after getting off to a slow start by holding a half-time lead of 7 to 5 over Corwith.

Corwith's reserves defeated the Little Shamrocks 29 to 12 in the opener.

KILLED IN CRASH

Richard Scutter, 20, of West Bend, was recently discharged from the Marines and has been helping his father, a mortician. Last week Dick was driving a pickup truck to return some chairs from a farm home where a funeral had been conducted. His truck collided head on with another vehicle, and Dick was killed instantly.

CHRISTMAS TREES AS FIRE HAZARDS

"Each year the question arises as to the fire hazard of Christmas trees and decorations," says a bulletin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. "The flamability of the trees used is well known, and considerable thought has been given to the question of rendering them less easily ignited. Various methods of treating trees with flame-proofing solutions have been tried, but none has proven to be successful.

"Because of the inability to make Christmas trees flame-proof, it is urged that other protective practices be adopted.

"Keep the tree outdoors until ready to install it. Do not set it up until a few days before Christmas. Place it in the coolest part of the house. If necessary, shut off the radiator close to it.

"Under no circumstances use any cotton or paper for decoration of the tree, or around it.

Be Careful With Lights

"Do not place electric trains around the tree. Use only electric lights and see that all of the strings are in good condition and not frayed. Those which have been inspected by Underwriters' Labratories have a paper band around the wire or a statement on the box.

"Do not leave tree lights burning when no one is in the house. From time to time inspect the tree and see whether any of the lights have started to turn brown. If so, change the location of the lights. When the needles start falling, take the tree down and discard it.

"If it is desired to keep the tree up for a few days longer, then do not keep lights on for more than a half hour at a time.

"If any decorations are used about the house, do not permit them to be around or near chairs or other places where persons may smoke. It is preferable to have them up near the ceiling, well above the head of anyone standing up. If lights are desired in windows, never use candles; keep curtains and other flammable material pulled back at least six inches from any light.

Precautions for Public Places

"In hotels, churches, hospitals and other places of assembly and in hallways of offices, the location of the Christmas tree is of vital importance. It should not be located near any stairway or elevator which would provide an upper draft. It should not be near entrance doors or otherwise blocking entrance doors or otherwise blocking exits.

"It is very essential that all doors leading to other parts of the building, particularly upper stairs, if located close to a Christmas tree, be normally kept closed.

"A definite inspection should be made each morning by someone of authority to determine whether the tree should be left up for a longer time, and whether it should be lighted again. Remember a small tree can be as beautiful as, but less hazardous than a large one.

"Christmas trees in offices should not be located in such a position as to block exit from the office.

"In case of fire, leave building. Walk, don't run. Call the fire department."

DISLIKE SIRENS

Mrs. Robert Anderson, French war bride, now of Grinnell, likes Grinnell and everything about it except one thing — the fire siren. Mrs. Anderson grew up in Paris during the war and the wail of the sirens a familiar sound denoting air raids.

MOVED ELEVATOR

Clarinda residents were treated to an unusual sight recently when a grain elevator building was moved from Page Center to Clarinda. Traveling at 5 miles per hour behind a caterpillar tractor, the building presented a novel picture to travelers along the way.

Quail will be safer in Washington county from now on, thanks to Harry Embree of Wellman. He recently delivered 37 fox skins to the county auditor, receiving a bounty of a dollar each. After marking the ears to show bounty had been paid he will re-sell the hides.

NEW SUGAR STAMP BECOMES VALID JAN. 1

Washington— OPA announced Tuesday that a new consumer spare ration stamp for 5 lbs. of sugar will be made valid on Jan. 1, 1947 and will be good through April 30.

"It is anticipated," the announcement said, "that the 2nd consumer stamp for 1947, will be made good before this stamp expires, thus increasing the present consumer ration of 5 pounds of sugar for each 4 months."

An additional 10 pounds a person was allowed in 1946 for canning.

OPA also said that industrial sugar allotments for the 1st quarter of 1947 will remain unchanged from the last quarter of 1946.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said last Friday that baring "unpredictable disasters," the quotas of industrial users will be increased next year by 10 per cent of the quanity they used in 1941.

OPA also announced that sugar allotments for the January-February period for institutional users will remain unchanged.

Industrial users may apply for their allotments at sugar branch offices, formerly OPA district offices, beginning Wednesday.

Christmas In Many Lands

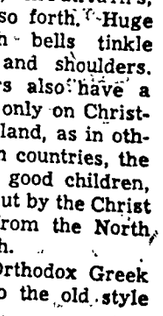
Early Christians did not celebrate the birthday of Christ. It was not until the fourth century that December 25 came to be accepted as the presumed anniversary of the great event. In that year Pope Gregory V set this day officially. His intention was partly to absorb the old pagan festival of the returning sun (the winter solstice on December 22) in a Christian feast. A number of pagan celebrations were overlapped in this manner during the first centuries of Christianity.

It is for this reason that the remnants of ancient rites and customs have become intermingled with genuine Christian practices and symbolism. The Yule rites of the Scandinavian, Germanic and British nations blended with the new Christian holy day in northern Europe. In Italy, France, Spain and other nations descended from Roman colonies, the rowdy festival spirit and customs of pagan Rome hung on to some extent, and merged with the observation of Christmas. In the main, however, the birth of Christ was a religious holiday—joyous, but restrained in mood, in the early centuries of the Christian era. Gradually, however, in the Middle ages, the feast became more robust, as peasants and lords made merry in the baronial halls.

Nativity Plays.

On the other hand, the Nativity plays were purely Christian in origin—having arisen spontaneously in many parts of Europe in the early Middle ages. In one form or another they have been enacted all over the world, with additions and embellishments. There are puppet versions, elaborate pageants, music scores, all treating of the birth of Christ. In Spanish countries the "Posadas" is the name given to a combination procession and party with religious overtones, that covers the nine days preceding Christmas itself. The Polish Christmas play is an intermingling of the Nativity story with elements of Polish history and legend.

The Santa Claus tradition represents the combining of a number of widely differing relics of old superstition and beliefs. The northern Europeans in pre-Christian times believed in a spirit of woods and fields who had to be placated now and then, or he would ruin the harvests. This being was known in Norway as the "Nisse," and by various names in other Scandinavian countries. It is still a custom in rural regions for children to set out porridge and beer on Christmas eve to please the Nisse.



In Britain the character known as "Father Christmas" is supposed to be a Christian version of this ancient spirit of the fields. The Dutch Sinter Klass, or St. Nicholas, is still recognizable as the good bishop of Myra in Dutch plays, but he too is being absorbed in the more popular version of Santa Claus, the fat, red-coated little man with the big bag of presents. This idea of Santa Claus is a south German interpretation. In other parts of Germany the dispenser of gifts is "Dame Bertha." The custom of hanging up stockings comes from Italy.

Switzerland has developed the custom of parading from house to house and singing carols in a picturesque way. Costumes are remarkable. Young men and women wear headdresses representing houses, ships, mountains, and so forth. Huge sleigh bells tinkle from their waists and shoulders. These Swiss carolers also have a peculiar dance used only on Christmas eve. In Switzerland, as in other southern European countries, the gifts are brought to good children, not by Santa Claus, but by the Christ Child, who comes from the North Pole in a fairy sleigh.

Members of the Orthodox Greek church, who cling to the old style calendar, celebrate Christ's birthday on January 6. Many people in Greece, Serbia, Romania and other Balkan states, as well as many Russians, belong to the Orthodox church. Their Christmas feast traditionally begins with a bowl of "kutya," which is a combination of wheat, honey, ground poppy seed and pecans. Mushroom soup, fruit, fish and nuts are also served. A small layer of hay is spread under the table cloth to show humility for Christ's birth in a stable.

So every country and every district often has its own special ways of keeping Christmas. The United States, being composed of people from everywhere, has received customs from every people, and has adopted those it liked, and altered them to fit the American style. So it has been with Santa Claus, the Christmas tree, holly and mistletoe, the Christmas plays and carols, the luscious menus — everything has been gladly taken over, with thanks to the many nations and peoples that have bequeathed them to us.

qually as obliging was a blaze started in a tavern at Hugo, ., burned off the cap of a rant, released a stream of water drowned itself.

More understandable was the strange case of the kangaroo that shot the man. This happened in Australia when Arthur Crosbie shot a kangaroo through the hind legs and it fell on its back. Crosbie reloaded the rifle and put the butt on the kangaroo's neck to pin it down The kangaroo reached up, twined a forepaw around the trigger and shot Crosbie through the arm.

Prompted by the same motive of self preservation, a rabbit that lived just outside Louisville, Ky., resented the activities of William Humphrey, a 16-year-old hunter. He stuck out a paw from Humphrey's game bag, pulled the trigger of Humphrey's gun and shot him through the foot. Humphrey now carries a rabbit's foot for luck when he goes hunting. Guess what rabbit!

Edward M. Brown of Beverly Hills, Calif., saw active service in both the European and Asiatic theaters without a scratch. He decided to relax by going hunting. A companion shot a goose. It plummeted down, struck Brown smack in the chest, knocked him flat, and inflicted injuries that kept him in the hospital 45 days.

Many a bee has caused a traffic accident, but a super-busy one in Hammond, Ind., cracked up three autos by merely stinging the driver of one of the cars. The driver, Walter Sohl, drove into another car, which then crashed into a third machine.

He Gets Buck Fever.

Back in the meatless days Del Halstead licked his chops as he drew a sight on a big buck deer near Buckhorn station, Calif. Just as he released the safety catch on his rifle, he was hit from behind and sent sprawling. Another buck had bounded out of a thicket and landed, ala the marines, in the nick of time. Halstead not only lost his gun —he also lost two bucks!

Same Old Story.

Put a mouse and a woman in the same car and something has to give. So when Mrs. Orson Rheingold of Albany, N. Y., found she was sharing her car with a traveling field mouse, she just did what came naturally. The car smacked into a pole and the field mouse returned to the field.

Gustav Riebow of Milwaukee is a kindly man. So when he and his wife found a turtle in their back yard, they put it in a box on the front seat of their car and started to take it to a nice homey place in the country. The turtle, confused or just plain ungrateful, slipped out of the box, crawled up Riebow's leg and bit him good and hard. Riebow turned turtle and so did the car—via a tree.

Chips Pay Off.

After that, anything must seem dull. But the case of Pete Bird of Shelbyville, Ky., may be worth recording. When a mere boy, Bird was chopping a log on a farm when a chip flew up and struck him in the eye, bringing a cataract and blindness. In 1946—just 42 years later — Bird again was chopping wood. Again a chip flew up and hit him in the eye, tearing the cataract loose and restoring sight.

Then there was the case of the sultry pocketbook. It belonged to Miss Janice Peterson of New York City, who traced smoke to a drawer in her office desk and found a cigarette lighter in her purse had flicked on. "And it hardly ever works when you want it to," she moaned.

A $50,000 boom hit the rural community of Plymouth, Wis., when 16-year-old Robert Marth shot at a sparrow perched on a farm wagon, missed the sparrow, hit the wagon and set off its 1,300-pound load of dynamite. Casualties—650 windows, 1 wagon and 1 sparrow.

Don't We All?

Stanley Szot of East Chicago, Ind., entered the dentist's office with a toothache and left with a headache. As the dentist reached for the forceps, lightning struck the office building and a hunk of plaster from the ceiling conked Szot on the head, where the novocain hadn't reached.

Three-year-old Ernest Liedemann of Chicago tumbled into the Chicago river from a bridge high above. As he hit the water, his clothing caught on a nail that protruded from the piling and held his head above water until he was rescued.

Close runner-up for fall fashions was Abraham Wilson of New York. As Wilson was lowering a couch from a four-story shaftway in a warehouse, he tripped in the rigging and he and the couch plunged downward. He caught up with the couch as they passed the third floor. The force of the impact wedged the couch against the shaft wall, where surprised workers found Wilson curled up cozily.

Another Fish Yarn.

Most fantastic of all, perhaps, is the celebrated case of the sneezing salmon. James Mantakes of La Grande, Ore., caught the salmon, tossed it in the rear of his car and started for home to show the folks. As the car chugged along, desert dust blew into the salmon's gills, and it sneezed. Yes, it did.

This startled Mantakes. He glanced back, saw nothing but a fish and shrugged off the sound. Another sneeze. Mantakes whirled around, this time to see an angry salmon on the back of the seat, glaring balefully at him with bloodshot eyes. As if that weren't enough, a grasshopper chose that moment to come flying in through the window. The salmon abandoned Mantakes, lunged at the grasshopper, missed and fell back in the lap of the now thoroughly disorganized driver.

Mantakes gave himself over entirely to subduing the salmon. The car went crashing off the road. The salmon sneezed spitefully once or twice more—and succumbed.

Victims of All Ages.

Youngest victim of an odd accident in 1946 undoubtedly was a baby girl who was shot before she was born. Her mother, Mrs. Arthur Laughton, was shot in a hunting accident at Winthrop, Me.; and the baby was born prematurely, a bullet wound in her left thigh.

When most people were desperately trying to find auto tires, Stanley Yanick of Chicago just stood still on the sidewalk and one came rolling right up to him. Unfortunately, it had a wheel attached, and it flattened him. The tire was the wrong size anyway.

When Mrs. Ralph Gilmore of Philadelphia heard a certain program coming in on her radio, she hurried across the room to turn up the volume, tripped on a rug and fell, suffering minor injuries. The program Mrs. Gilmore fell for? A broadcast on home hazards by National Safety council!

Santa Claus Provided With Variety of Toys

Cowboy and Policemen Replace G.I. Uniforms

Toyland, 1946 style, is geared to reproduction of America's peacetime living, reproducing in purposeful miniature every phase of homemaking, building and road construction, transportation, science, agriculture, fashion and art. Cowboys and policemen have staged a comeback as juvenile heroes and miniatures of military equipment are keyed to the armed forces' training programs. New toys have been tested by children for fun appeal, age interest and safety.

More than 100,000 different kinds of playthings with a retail value of 250 million dollars, a 35 per cent increase over 1945, are ready for Christmas distribution. The first lines of rubber and steel playthings in four years will bring back such deeply missed favorites as rubber balls, balloons and animals, wheel toys, electric trains, movable eyes and voices for dolls, steel construction sets, musical instruments, noisemakers and pop guns. Many new uses of plastic as well as a bumper crop of wood, cardboard and paper toys also will be represented in Santa's 1946 pack.

Special requests to Santa Claus will call for early shopping. Although volume in most lines is close to prewar levels, unprecendented demand is likely to create out-of-stock conditions in popular lines before Christmas eve. This will be due to the fact that in addition to pent-up demand for toys caused by wartime manufacturing restrictions, five million extra children of toy age were added to the population during the war years (in comparison with the average of the preceding peacetime decade).

Czechoslovakia Cards Designed by Cripples

Christmas cards, produced by the American Relief for Czechoslovakia, were drawn by Ann Halamova and Premek Blazicek, two of hundreds of Czechoslovak children who lost their arms or legs through the explosion of bombs, grenades or mines which the Nazis strewed throughout their country. These tots were trained by the Jedlicka institute in Prague, and the cards, made by children without hands, would be remarkable for normal children even older than they are.

First Christmas

What sweeter musick can we bring,
Than a Carroll, for to sing,
The birth of this our Heavenly King?
Awake the Voice! Awake the String!
Heart, Eare and Eye and everything
Awake. . . .

The Darling of the world has come,
And fit it is, we finde a roome
To welcome Him. The Nobler part
Of all the house here, is the heart,
Which we will give; and bequeath
This Hollie, and this Ivie Wreath,
To do Him honour; who's our King,
And Lord of all this rejoicing!

—Robert Herrick (1591-1674)

Make Christmas Happy By Making It a Safe One

The tree, the drying holly and mistletoe, lighted candles, defective log, all increase the danger of fire If the carefree spirit that characterizes Christmas slips into carelessness, swift catastrophe may overtake us, our loved ones and our possessions. There is no time of the year when it is so essential that extreme care be taken to insure that any possible danger of fire be avoided to make Christmas a happy one

A MESSAGE OF LOVE (CHRISTMAS LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—John 3:16; Ephesians 3 14-21.

MEMORY SELECTION — Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.—II Corinthians 9:15.

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem there were only a few men and women of faith who could see in the Babe of the manger the glory and the power of Christ. It was a dark and unbelieving age into which he was born—and who will say that it is different in the day in which we celebrate Christmas, 1946.

Indifferent, ignorant and sinful people are glad to try to capitalize on the spirit of Christmas, but they still despise and turn away from the Son of God, Jesus the Saviour.

It behooves us, therefore, to present once more the message of the Saviour who came at Christmas, that all men may hear of him.

Our lesson speaks of God's great gift of love and tells what manner of men and women we should be because he did give his Son for us

I. God's Christmas Gift to Us (John 3:16).

God loved—so God gave. Love prompts the heart to give. One may give without loving, it is true, but one cannot love without giving.

God's love for man existed from all eternity. It provided a way of redemption for man and in due season the Saviour came, to live, to love, to die for all mankind.

It was no chance event, no accident in history; it was the heart of God speaking in his "unspeakable gift" (II Cor. 9:15) of his only begotten Son.

That leads us to our second Scripture and our second point: We who receive gifts try to express our appreciation in a polite and proper way.

II. Our "Thank You" to God (Eph. 3:14-21).

Paul's prayer for the Ephesian church (and for us also who are in the "family," v. 15) tells us how we may by our lives as Christians express our gratitude to God.

The church of Christ, made up of those who are believers in him, should show its relationship to God, and its appreciation of his grace by its

1. Strength (v. 16). It does not honor God nor is he properly represented in the world by those who are spiritually weak and ineffective.

It is the privilege of the believer to be "strengthened with might" (v. 16) and this takes place as the Holy Spirit has liberty "with power penetrating to your inmost being," as Weymouth translates it. No part of man's inner being is then left weak or without the light and grace of the Holy Spirit.

2. Love (v. 17). This is the strong foundation of all spiritual development and usefulness. Roots are put down deep (as we change the figure of speech) to hold the life steady, and to provide the nourishment for spiritual living.

This is all possible because Christ makes his home in the heart. Think of the privilege of making such a guest feel at home in our hearts! Let us be grateful, and let us recognize him and honor his presence.

3. Knowledge (vv. 18, 19). The believer has to know not only the knowable, but also that which passes knowledge, namely, the love of Christ.

We shall grow in grace as we grow in the knowledge of the love of Christ (II. Pet. 3:18). We with all of God's people—what a great and delightful company—are to comprehend, to really grasp, the length and breadth and height and depth of his love.

We say with the psalmist, "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain to it" (Ps. 139:6). But then we remember that it is as Christ dwells "in our hearts by faith" (v. 17) that we are able to comprehend such truth.

Most Christians live on a very low plane, going along with a limited and unsatisfactory Christian experience when all this is available to them by faith.

4. Faith (v. 20). Here we see why it is possible to do the impossible, to know that which passes knowledge, to see the unseen. It is by faith in him who "is able to do infinitely beyond all our highest prayers and thoughts" (Weymouth, v. 20) that we attain unto this blessed place of blessing.

So this is the "Thank you" that God wants this Christmas. He wants the unbeliever to turn to him in faith, and the believer to really be what he ought to be and can be in Christ. Then a man's whole life will say, "Thank you, Lord, for saving my soul."

For the tenth successive year the writer of these notes expresses to his readers everywhere his good wish for a most blessed Christmas both in heart and home. May the Lord give us all special grace this year to thank him for his great Christmas Gift by a life wholly dedicated to him.

32-Pound Trout

The largest rainbow trout ever caught by an angler was taken from Pend Oreille Lake in Idaho on July 15, 1946. The official record of its weight is 32.5 pounds, or 13 times that of the average-sized rainbow.

ven Squirrels Rebel at Eviction Proceedings

WAUKESHA, WIS. — Indicating the current housing shortage extended even to the animal ulation, squirrel residents of ere woods near here attempted prevent eviction from their hol- tree homes by tearing down ir eviction notices. At the same e they proved that they are bet- judges of timber than foresters. rees in the area were marked cutting last summer by Cal Stott, United States forest service employe. On each unsound tree—unmarketable and full of hollows that squirrels like to convert into apartments — Stott had stapled a white tag. Trees so tagged were to be cut down and weeded out.

On each tree that was ready for market, Stott stapled a red tag.

When he returned to the woods recently to measure log lengths, Stott discovered that squirrels had removed all of the white tags from their doorsteps.

The squirrels also demonstrated that they are smarter than foresters when it comes to judging trees. One red tag also was missing, so Stott decided to check more thoroughly although the tree had seemed to be sound enough when it was originally inspected. The squirrels were right—the tree was full of holes.

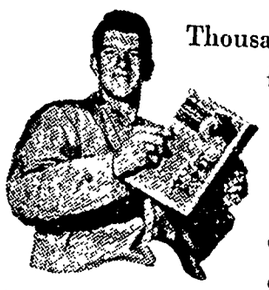
No Rockin' Chair for this Porch!

Carl Porch hasn't much time for sitting around. He is in the poultry and hog business near Greensburg, Pa.—and helps his father operate a 118-acre dairy farm, besides. For the past two years, he has been president of his high school chapter of Future Farmers of America, and now heads up the county chapter. This year he won the Keystone Farmer Degree—which, in Pennsylvania, is the F.F.A.'s highest award. Until last June Carl was a high school student, too. So, all told, he was a right busy young man.

In fact, Carl was too busy to do all his own work. And while looking for a helper some time back, he decided to let electricity take over some of his jobs. For instance, his electric chick brooder (he made it himself) operates automatically. His chicks' water fountains stay warm all winter—electrically.
The laying house—where he keeps 150 selected hens—is lighted on dark fall and winter days to boost egg production. He uses an electric pig brooder—and last spring it helped his fine Chester White sow look after her litter of ten valuable shotes.


Thousands of other farmers and Future Farmers, like Carl, have learned the big value that electricity gives. They also learned, long ago, that business-managed electric companies were the first to bring electricity to the the farms—first to develop ways to use it for many farm chores—first to improve service and lower rates. These companies are still working hand-in-hand with farmers, agricultural experiment stations and electrical equipment manufacturers to help make the farmer's life a more prosperous and even better one.

Capture Alligator In Black Hawk Creek

A 38-inch alligator was captured in Black Hawk Creek recently by Cecil Deeds, Waterloo. According to the Waterloo Courier, Dr. C. W. Lantz, Professor of Biology at Iowa State Teachers College, identified the animal. Dr. Lantz believes the alligator was brought to Waterloo from Florida or from some other state along the Gulf where they are quite common and either escaped or was released in the waterloo vicinity.

No Rockin' Chair for this Porch!

Carl Porch hasn't much time for sitting around. He is in the poultry and hog business near Greensburg, Pa.—and helps his father operate a 110-acre dairy farm, besides. For the past two years, he has been president of his high school chapter of Future Farmers of America, and now heads up the county chapter. This year he won the Keystone Farmer Degree—which, in Pennsylvania, is the F.F.A.'s highest award. Until last June Carl was a high school student, too. So, all told, he was a right busy young man.

In fact, Carl was too busy to do all his own work. And while looking for a helper some time back, he decided to let electricity take over some of his jobs. For instance, his electric chick brooder (he made it himself) operates automatically. His chicks' water fountains stay warm all winter—electrically.

The laying house—where he keeps 150 selected hens—is lighted on dark fall and winter days to boost egg production. He uses an electric pig brooder—and last spring it helped his fine Chester White sow look after her litter of ten valuable shotes.

Thousands of other farmers and Future Farmers, like Carl, have learned the big value that electricity gives. They also learned, long ago, that business-managed electric companies were the first to bring electricity to the the farms—first to develop ways to use it for many farm chores—first to improve service and lower rates. These companies are still working hand-in-hand with farmers, agricultural experiment stations and electrical equipment manufacturers to help make the farmer's life a more prosperous and even better one.

The deed was dated November 10, 1858 and filed Jan. 10, 1859. This is found in Lot Book A, Page 1. This was the first town lot sold in Hancock County. Business was picking up and Mr. Bruce was doing a "Land Office Business," in the town lot sale of Laconia, as his sales will verify. Sales were good until about May 1862 when they seemed to stop abruptly with only two more lot sales on record from that date until the "Vacation of Laconia" filed February 5, 1876.

The average of all lots sold was about $100.00 each. The smallest consideration was $1.00 and the largest amount was $6,000,00 for ten lots (11-20) in block 52.

It is interesting to note that the purchasers of the lots were with one exception from the New England to the Gulf States. It is highly probable that the promoter traveled through Indiana, Ohio, and on east to New Jersey to establish his home, selling lots as he went. Evidence for this is the dates on the deeds made out and later recorded. The really "Big Tim" was Cincinnatti, Ohio, Hamilton County, where some $6,000.00 transactons took place. Only one purchaser lived in Hancock County. He was Thomas Magill of Amsterdam, Avery Township. He bought a block of ten lots for $150.00 and sold them a short time later for the same amount. It might be interesting also to note that Thomas Magill was the public spirited individual from Amsterdam who sold the Old Amsterdam Court Square in Avery Township to the township of Amsterdam and Avery for cemetery purposes in 1860 for the sum of $1.00.

The present records show that Mr. Bruce and his wife Emily sold 143 lots, but also shows 147 lots sold a second time with no previous record of sale. If this is typical of the whole scheme of things, one can only guess at the amount involved. The deeds made of record show the sum of $65,328.00 was paid for lots. If only one half the transfers were made of record, one might well assume the amount of money involved could run upwards of $125,000.00. Remember, this is in a country with a small population and with not more than two individuals in the west half of the county, where Laconia was located.

Lot sales ceased and the last one placed on record was on December 12, 1874. On March 13, 1875 Cosmore G. Bruce and wife Emily sold all unsold lots to Mr. C. B. Maben for $100.00 with a statement: "They are free and clear of all liens and incumberances whatsoever except all tax liens." Mr. Bruce at this time lived in Hudson County, New Jersey. As mentioned earlier just when he went east or how long he had lived there is not clear.

On February 5, 1876 Mr. C. B. Maben filed, with the Recorder, a notice stating he was the owner of the town of Laconia and thereby declared the said town and plat thereof vacated and void.

Thus ended the town of Laconia. The death was as uneventful as the birth but "Paper Sales" certainly held sway during its life.

Considering the price paid by Mrs. Bruce for the half section of land to be a fair price at that time, the amount of money actually invested in lots ($65,328.00) would have bought a tract of land equal in size to two of our townships, or about seventy two (72) sections.

There is no evidence to show that there ever was a building of any kind built at Laconia. I have been told it is very conceivable that the place could have had its share of muskrat houses, but no residential homes.

Just why anyone promoting a sound real estate sales project should select an undrained, inaccessable plot such as this was at the time seems to be hard to understand. The county had no roads, no fences, and no railroads until about twelve years after Laconia was platted. The McGregor and Missouri River Railroad (now the Milwaukee Road) came thru about 1871 and was about four miles north of Laconia. The nearest railroad at the time of the platting was probably at Iowa City.

All that can remain today on the site of this proposed city is two rows of stones, running a mile east and west and midway north and south, which were placed at the south west corners of the several blocks. It is possible that even these stones may be found in a pile or along a fencerow to better prepare the land for cultivation.

Yes, Virginia, There Is A Santa Claus

One day in September 1897, a letter in the handwriting of a child came to the editor of the New York Sun. He called Francis P. Church, an editorial writer, to his desk. "Here take this letter and write a reply to it," the editor said. Church, somewhat disgruntled at being assigned such a trivial task, returned to his desk and with an air of resignation, began to compose his answer. The result was an editorial which appeared in the Sun for September 21, 1897, and which has been "reprinted by request" more millions of times than any other piece of newspaper writing. It follows:

We take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of the Sun:

Dear Editor:

I am eight year old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.

Papa says: "If you see it in the Sun it's so."

Please tell me the truth: "Is there a Santa Claus?"

Virginia O'Hanlon.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can not be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be man's or little children's, are little. In this great aniverse of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no child-like faith then, no poetry; no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, or even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus? Thank God, he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, and ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

SORRY, NO COLORED PAPER

For several years it has been customary for The Times to print the Christmas and New Year editions on colored paper. This year colored paper is not available and even the white print paper is a critical item. We are sorry that the two special editions are printed on white this year, but there was no other course to follow.

MORE PRODUCTIVE ACRES . . . Every acre of cultivated and pasture land on the F. D. Bartlett farm near Lost Creek, W. Va., has been treated with lime from the Rich mountain plant. Corn from these contoured strips provides proof of the increased production from use of lime with fertilizer to improve soil.

AID TO AGRICULTURE

Farmers Find Lime Effective Agent for Soil Improvement

WNU Features

WASHINGTON.—With increasing emphasis on soil improvement, the manufacture of farm lime has become one of the most essential agricultural enterprises in the nation, according to the soil conservation service of the department of agriculture.

The marked spurt in sales of lime to American farmers is revealed in soil conservation service figures which show total sales of less than 2 million tons in 1932 while sales for the current year are expected to exceed 25 million tons.

In Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio lime is as necessary for farm land as salt is in the every-day diet, SCS officials point out. If farmers of these three states did not have lime to counteract excessive soil acidity, some of them would have to close shop, they add.

To assure enough lime for their fields, farmers of the West Fork soil conservation district, which embraces Doddridge, Harrison, Gilmer and Lewis counties in West Virginia, now are operating their own processing plant at historic Rich mountain in Randolph county, West Virginia.

The $30,000 plant was built with state funds by the West Virginia soil conservation committee and then turned over to the district supervisors for operation. The plant has a production capacity of 50 tons of burnt lime a day. Production costs range from $8 to $10 a ton, which covers operating costs and a small return to the state conservation committee. The surplus returned to the state group will be utilized to help finance other worthwhile district enterprises in West Virginia.

"As soon as we get into full producton, we hope to cut the price to $5 a ton," declares G. Manley Curry, chairman of the district board. Members of the board are elected by farmers belonging to the soil conservation district.

Application of lime is one of many soil and water conservation practices used in the West Fork district and some 1,700 other soil conservation districts in the country to keep the land permanently productive, stabilize agriculture and increase yields.

Soil conservation service technicians, who work in co-operation with district farmers, estimate that more than a million tons of lime will be needed as an initial application on the 7,400 farms of the district. Thereafter, 50,000 tons should be applied each year to insure continued maximum production.

A number of district farmers have paid off mortgages and put money in the bank after undertaking soil conservation programs. In addition, they are producing more and better milk, butter, meat, eggs, corn and other commodities.

Virginia's Heroes Get Preference In Statuary Hall

WASHINGTON. — Virginia, long known as the "Mother of States and of Statesmen," is in on the "ground floor" figuratively in placing likenesses of heroes on the principal floor of the national capitol.

Some of the states yet to contribute statues of their famous may find their favorite sons or daughters on the ground floor literally—perhaps in the crypt. The Hall of Columns on this floor now has 17 statues.

Capitol Architect David Lynn said remaining space is becoming limited on the principal floor. Donations by all the states, he said, will cause an overflow to the ground floor beneath the level of the rotunda, Statuary hall and senate and house chambers.

The probable location then, Lynn said, would be the crypt just above the space intended for Washington's tomb.

Thirteen states have contributed no statues and four have contributed only one each of the two allowed for each state.

Two Virginians — Washington and Jefferson—are the only individuals to be commemorated by more than two full statues, although there is a bust as well as a statue of Abraham Lincoln.

Virginia enjoys a particularly outstanding position in representation in both statues and paintings.

Modern Santa Flies Toys to Aleutians

SEATTLE. — Santa Claus of the Aleutians is a navy officer, Lt. Comdr. James A. Whitman, and his assistant is a third-class yeoman, Noah Fluckard of Tulsa, Okla.

Laden with navy welfare funds, Commander Whitman and Fluckard flew to Seattle under orders to gather up as many dolls, bears, trucks, Christmas tree ornaments and lights as they could buy.

Through their efforts, a ton and a half of toys destined for children of naval and civil service personnel in Kodiak, Dutch Harbor, Adak and Attu have been flown to the Aleutians to provide holiday cheer for the 300 navy children and 100 children of civil service employees.

M. Q. (Marriage Quotient to You) Is Latest Test

WASHINGTON. — Possible prediction of the stability of a marriage is offered in a new psychological test reported to American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The test is a type of the familiar "word association" test. The majority of persons will make a similar reponse to a certain familiar word; 9 out of 10, for example, replying to the word "green" with the word "grass." Marked differences of response may mark a deviation from the common pattern of thinking.

Masculinity - femininity scores of happily and unhappily married couples and of divorced couples showed the highest number of rare responses among divorced women, with the least among married women. Single women also showed a high degree of variation.

On July 11, 1782, the British evacuated Savannah and the authority of Georgia was re-established.

Site of Sherman's March.

Georgia seceded from the Union early in 1861 and furnished the Confederate army 94 regiments and 36 battalions. On Georgia soil were fought the battles of Chickamauga, Ringgold, Resaca, New Hope church, Kennesaw mountain, Peach Tree creek, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Allatoona, and the skirmishes that attended Sherman's march through the state. When the war ended the state was ravaged.

But thrift, ambition and pride remained. The people of Georgia began to rebuild — a difficult job, a trying ordeal. But soon after the Civil war ended, Georgia resumed her enterprises in every industrial line, not even waiting for her reentrance into the Union, which came in 1870.

There never has been any question of patriotism and loyalty among Georgians. During the Spanish-American war, Georgia furnished more volunteers in proportion to population than any other state. The heroism of Georgia's sons in World War I and World War II has written brilliant exploits on history's pages. And in Georgia thousands of soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen were trained for their jobs in every theater of war.

Georgia is the largest state east of the Mississippi. From top to bottom its greatest length is 320 miles, and from side to side its greatest distance is some 260 miles.

Leads in Industry.

Georgia stands in the front rank of the southern states in the variety and value of its manufactures and the number of its manufacturing establishments. Its textile mills include cotton and woolen knitting mills and silk mills. Flour and grist mills, clothing factories, furniture factories, brass, steel and iron works, foundries, car shops and other manufacturing plants are some of its heavy industries Georgia has brick, tile and pottery plants, and its canning factories, creameries and numerous other processing plants utilize the state's raw materials.

Georgia's slash pine is made into paper, trees grown there reaching a growth in 8 to 10 years that would require 40 to 50 years in a higher, colder climate.

Georgia's marble is famous all over the world, and large quantities of granite and kneiss are found in many localities. Gold deposits are found in four belts in Georgia, and the mining of gold is an old industry there. Brown and red iron ores are found in many places, and copper, graphite, talc, barite, limestone, precious stones, marls, phosphates and many other deposits of minerals and clays are scattered throughout Georgia.

NATIVE GOVERNOR . . Born March 20, 1907, at Newnan, Ga., Ellis Gibbs Arnall has been an energetic leader of his native state. A former lawyer, he served in the state legislature and as attorney general before taking office as chief executive January 12, 1943.

Agriculture is Varied.

The slopes of Georgia's mountains are well suited for the grazing of livestock, and the state has an abundance of land, either rolling or level, for growing vegetables, fruits, corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, cowpeas, clover, timothy, grasses, cotton, peanuts, tobacco and dozens of other crops. The forest timbers are oak, pine, poplar, ash, beech, elm, chestnut, hickory, maple, walnut, ironwood, sugar berry and a score of others. Large quantities of turpentine are produced.

Georgia's resources are vast. Its climate and rainfall are conducive to all plant life, and pleasant for human beings. The gentle art of living is practiced in Georgia but there remains a deep-rooted determination to keep up the leadership, the progress, that began over two centuries ago when the Oglethorpe band landed at Savannah. Georgia is a state worth seeing, knowing—and watching!

Sitton's Gulch is typical of Georgia's scenic spots.

PAUL CLAIMS THE WORLD FOR CHRIST

LESSON TEXT — Acts 9:15; 19:21; 23:11, 28:28-31; Romans 1:13-16; 15:22-24

MEMORY SELECTION—I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the barbarians; both to the wise, and the unwise.—Romans 1:14.

The gospel is for the whole world God wants all men to hear and come to repentance (John 3:16; II Pet. 3:9).

For the establishment of the great missionary program with its world-wide sweep, he called a man gifted, prepared and anointed for that work, namely, Paul, whose life and ministry have been our interesting portion these three months.

Now we find him at the very center of the then known world to claim it for Christ. Politically, commercially, socially and religiously, Rome was the very heart of the known world which centered around the Mediterranean sea (the name of which means "the middle of the earth").

Having preached almost everywhere else, Paul had a longing to face heathendom at its very center and claim trophies for Christ and the gospel.

Our Scriptures present:

I. God's Plan and Man's Purpose (Acts 9:15; 19:21).

Choice involves the thought of selection because of certain qualities or abilities. The Lord had prepared Paul for just this ministry, and now he chose him to carry it out. That encourages us to believe that God is leading in the experiences of our lives, preparing us for the day when he will call and use us. Let us be yielded and ready.

Our second Scripture (Acts 19:21) tells us that the plan of God was put into operation by the purpose in Paul's heart. God does not have to depend on man to do his work, but he does just that! We may hinder his full use of us if we fail to purpose in our spirit to do his will, as Paul did. God wanted Paul in Rome. That was his plan, and that was the purpose of Paul's heart.

II. God's Confirmation and Man's Determination (Acts 23:11; Rom. 1:13-16; 15:22-24).

Man needs to have his good purposes confirmed by the Lord, and so it was in the case of Paul. He had been taken prisoner for the gospel's sake. His trial had resulted in an uproar. Things did not look too promising for him. Humanly speaking, there was a question whether he would get anywhere, let alone to Rome.

In man's hour of discouragement God stands by with a good word. "Be of good cheer," he tells Paul; "as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem so must thou bear witness also at Rome."

In his letter to the Romans, Paul expresses his determination to come to them. There were hindrances, there was a contemplated trip to Spain (which he probably did not make), but in spite of all these things he would come in due time.

The reason for that determination is tremendously interesting and pertinent to our own lives. He saw himself to be a debtor. The gospel had been committed to him, not as a deposit for his own good or pleasure, but as something he must give out to everyone who had not heard, including Rome.

We, too, who know Christ are in debt to a world which has not heard of him. That includes the cultured, whom we often forget, and the uncultured, the men of every race—everyone who has need of a Saviour.

The tremendous urge which moved Paul should be characteristic of every believer. Think what it would mean for the evangelization of the world if every Christian said: "As much as in me is; I am ready to preach the gospel" (v. 15).

III. God's Salvation and Man's Declaration (Acts 28:28-31).

A slight change in the arrangement of our Scriptures brings us to our concluding thought. God had sent salvation to the Gentiles and they would hear it (v. 28), even if the preacher had to come as a prisoner, for Paul came thus to Rome.

How wonderfully God arranged it all, for Paul was given the privilege, even as a prisoner, of living for two years under guard in a private house. Here he won his guards to Christ, many members of Caesar's official household (Phil. 4:22), and others who came and went as he preached and taught, "no man forbidding him" (v. 31).

When man declares the gospel of salvation which God has sent, mighty things are wrought for the glory of God and the good of men.

It is just that which we should be about with renewed zeal and diligence during the new year just ahead. We are in debt, and we must discharge our indebtedness by declaring to all that Jesus saves, keeps and satisfies.

Best wishes for a most blessed new year! It may well be the most important year in all history. Let us make use of it for the glory of God

Sun Tan Disappears Only As Skin Layers Are Shed

Sun tan itself does not fade away, either in skin that tans or skin that first reddens and gradually tans, says Collier's. In both cases, the brownness is imparted by the permanent pigment melanin which is produced by the exposure, and the coloration disappears only as the permeated layers of the skin are shed.

Penitentiary Has 'Business District' for Its Inmates

A "business district" within the walls of the federal penitentiary in Mexico City contains scores of rent-free stores and offices which are operated by the prisoners for their fellow inmates, says Collier's.

These businesses include a pet shop, a printer who makes "visiting cards" and a lawyer who writes petitions and appeals. Even a band may be hired to serenade a visiting sweetheart.

Cooperative Game Bird Program To Continue in 1947

Arrangements are being made at the State Game Farm at Boone to produce a maximum of 15,000 quail and 35,000 pheasants in preparation for the cooperative game bird distribution program for 1947. Under the program in cooperation with sportsmen's clubs the Conservation Commission ship two-weeks old chicks to groups to raise to a stocking age of eight to nine weeks. Declining pheasant populations have added impetus to next year's program and it is anticipated that more of Iowa's 225 sportsman's clubs will participate this year and that more birds will be released to the wild through the cooperative program than in the past. Although the Conservation Commission advocates stocking where seed stocks are necessary, game officials re-emphasize that cooperative game bird stocking and rearing program is of greatest benefit because of its public relations and invironment improvement phases.

Sportsman's groups wishing to participate in the 1947 game bird program may secure application blanks from local conservation officers or by writing to the State Conservation Commission, 10th and Mulberry, Des Moines.

IOWA'S TIMBER HARVEST $14 MILLION LAST YEAR

Ask the average farmer how many acres of corn, oats or other crop he's been growing and he probably can tell you. But ask him how much timber he's tending, and he probably won't be able to give you the answer.

One reason for this, says R. K. Bliss, of the Iowa State College Extension Service, is that we tend to think of Iowa and our farms in terms of grain and livestock. Another reason is that timber often grows in scattered areas on farms.

In a special report on Iowa timber, Bliss points out that timber actually has become a very important crop. Colorado, generally thought of as a timber state, cut only a fourth more lumber last year than Iowa. And Iowa produced a third as much lumber as Minnesota.

Total value of timber harvested last year was $14,402.00. Cord wood for fuel made up the greatest share; lumber was next Red Oak topped the list of trees in value for lumber, with cottonwood and black walnut second. Elm and white oak came next in order of value for lumber.

Bliss points out that the present timberland of the state is esimated at 2,248,000 acres. This is 6.3 percent of the total land area of Iowa. It's enough to make a forest 72 wiles long and 50 miles wide.

Bliss says Iowa foresters report that only about 10 percent of our timberland is under good management practices despite the high value of timber. And the foresters add that some 750,000 acres of our land that should be in timber is now being cropped and pastured.

Timber not only makes the most profitable crop which can be grown on some land, but it helps to halt soil erosion.

Youth Officers To Attend District Training School

Officers and members of Hancock County's Rural Young People's organization will attend a 1-day training school at Des Moines, January 8, Paul Henderson, county extension director, advisor to the group, said this week.

Hancock County will be represented by Norbert Dorow, Walter Anderson, Carol Fox, Leon Griffen and Ires Abele.

Delegates will study their jobs as officers, talk about their organization's program and discuss ways of strengthening rural youth activities. Topping-off the day's program will be an evening of recreation.

The 1-day district school—one of five to be held in Iowa—replaces a state meeting formerly held on the Iowa State College campus at Ames.

As the group swings into its program it will be divided into three sectons. One will discuss Why I am a Rural Youth Member;" another will talk about "Opportunities I Would Like a Rural Organization to Provide for Me;" and the third will explore the topic, "How Can We Interest More Young People in Rural Youth Programs."

Presidents and vice-presidents, secretaries and treasurers, and historians and news reporters will meet separately for training in the duties and responsibilities of their offices. Another group will be given to program planning and to activities in which rural youth groups may engage.

The training schools will be conducted by G. A. Lineweaver, in charge of Rural Young People's activities in the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service; Frank W. Ehman, in charge of youth work for the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, Des Moines; and Mrs. Pearl Converse, recreation specialists, and A. P. Parsons, extension youth editor, both of the Agricultural Extension Service.

WARM AUTUMN

The warm November and Oct. weather completely fooled a mulberry tree belonging to C. R. Brown of New Virginia. Recently he inspected the tree and found a second crop of fruit, some ripe and some green.

BEEKEEPERS WILL TRY FOR MORE PRODUCTION

Despite a somewhat disappointing season in '46, Iowa beekeepers will be back trying for the requested 10 percent increase in honey production next year, believes F. B. Paddock, Iowa State College bee specialist.

Paddock says Iowa honey production this year was only a little more than half of that in 1945, although the number of colonies was higher. The 256,000 colonies this year produced 14,336,000 pounds of honey compared with 25,630,000 pounds produced last year from 233,000 colonies.

On a colony basis, Iowa production dropped from 110 to 56 pounds in 1946. This 44-percent slump compares with a national drop of 10 percent.

Paddock says the low honey output resulted in spite of one of the brightest early summer prospects in history. Throughout last spring bees were working unusually well, Paddock reports. But a storm which swept through the state in early July started the decline.

The initial storm was followed by a weather cycle with rain every few days, and the bees began working irregularly. During the remainder of the season they never did get back on their regular working schedule, Paddock says. In many cases they used up much of the honey they had stored earlier in the year.

FIND FIRE LOSS WORST DURING JAN. AND MARCH

With fires already on wide-scale rampage of death and property loss this winter all Iowans were urged this week to maintain fire prevention measures around their homes and farm buildings.

Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agricultural engineer, said studies by tha Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that January, February and March are the most dangerous for fire outbreaks and losses.

Beaty said the operation of heating systems accounts for the prevalence of dwelling fires during the winter. As a safety measure he suggests making certain that the draft is open and the check is closed on the furnace or stove when the fire is started. And the damper and air-draft control be carefully checked before the fire is left for the night.

The engineer urged Iowans to avoid using gasoline or kerosene in starting or reviving fires and to keep ashes in metal containers, away from buildings. Oil stoves and lamps should be kept away from drafty locations, curtains and other inflammable materials. Fuel tanks should be filled in the daylight away from flames.

A little time spent observing these and other safety measures may not only save your life, but your home and farmstead Beaty said.

More than 30,000 new members have been enrolled in Iowa 4-H clubs this year. This figure sets a new record which exceeds the past record by more than 1,100 members.

SHOULD NOT SELL HOGS TOO EARLY

Best Policy Is To Hold Them Until They Reach 300 Pounds or More

The heavy early movement of the spring pig crop and the strong storage demand for pork and lard are both price-supporting factors in the hog picture this winter, says Lauren K. Soth, Iowa State college farm economist.

In view of this outlook, Soth believes the best marketing palicy will be to carry hogs along until they reach 300 pounds or better and not be stampeded into marketing on any temporary decline in prices.

These temporary declines may show up during some weeks in January and February if hogs pile up on the market. But the situation will be temporary.

Ahead of Schedule

The marketing figures show that farmers have moved a good many 1946 spring pigs to market ahead of the normal time. Average weights continue lighter than during the same period last year and lighter than any other recent years. During the first two months of the current hog marketing year, which began Oct. 1, farmers sold 28 percent more hogs than they did in those months last year.

Soth says only a small part of this increase was due to the hold-over of hogs which normally woud have been sold before the first of October.

FARM FAMILIES SHOULD DEVISE BUILDING PLAN

Farm families who are making plans now for remodeling, rebuilding or constructing new homes and buildings will do well to devise some system of priorty rating under which the work is to be done.

This is pointed out by C. H. Van Vlack, Iowa State College agricultural engineer. Cost, labor and materials available will play a large part in the priority given. Major building operations are the ones most logically postponed.

Non-critical materials can be used, however, along with home labor, to begin a long-time improvement, Van Vlack says. Concrete materials, for instance, are avalible and cost little more than prewar years. This means that foundations and floors can be put under farm buildings which are permanantly located. Where interiors need rearranging, the work can be done later.

Roofing materials also are available and can be put on with farm labor. Good roofs insure preservation of the building for later remodeling. Painting, too, is important if good-qualty paint can be obtained.

With those items given number one priority, Van Vlack says the next consideration should be such improvements as insulation and ventilation. Commercial insulation is available and can applied with unskilled labor.

Another item which should be a part of the farm improvement plans is provision for an adequate water system. This should include water piped into the home and an adequate supply of running water about the farm.

YULETIDE HAPPINESS

As Christmas draws near and as 1946 draws to a close, we pause a moment to think seriously of life, of what it means to us . . . of oys and its sorrow.

One of the great joys of life, as we see it, is its friendships. A true nd is a valued possesson.

What is true of our personal life is also true of our business life. like to feel that there is a spirit of friendship underlying each bus- ss transaction.

We like to think of our customers as our friends. We like to value business friends as we value our personal friends.

Traditions of Holiday Are Recalled

Christmas Abroad Stirs Memories of Yule at Home

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Christmas 1946! The second one in seven years when one could really talk about "peace on earth" without shamed and downcast eyes. While armies struggled, who could think of the message to the shepherds from the angels' chorus promising peace on earth for all men of good will?

Baukhage

My last Christmas word was sent to you from the ruins, where, one year ago, I experienced the saddest holy-day season of my memory. It was in shattered Nuernberg with my thoughts on its rubble and the ruins, ugly symbols of man's inhumanity to man, the negation of our Saviour's teachings. I had plenty of food and drink and shelter and was clothed in the uniform which is a reminder of a career of which I am proud despite its implications. But I was as homesick as any young soldier in a lonely outpost with the threat of battle about him, for I could picture my own hearthside and the little group about the happy tree, my own tinseled packages unopened, and my empty hands reaching out vainly over the oceans too wide to span. And all about me were the signs of anguish, cramped souls, pinched bodies and the wreckage of the handicraft blossomed in stone and canvas and parchment which has enriched the world through the centuries.

I stood in the desolate little square faced by the wreckage of buildings, thinking of what Rudyard Kipling called "Christmas past." You may know the poem, breathing the nostalgia of an Englishman still clinging to his boyhood memories of England, contrasting them with what he saw about him in India: "Oh the white dust on the highway! Oh the stenches in the byway! Oh the clammy fog that hovers over earth! And at home they're making merry 'neath the white and scarlet berry—what part have India's exiles in their mirth."

Nuernberg! In the shadow of her ancient castle grew a tradition which lived on to modern days; a tradition made eternal by the woodcuts and engravings of Albrecht Duerer whose 500-year-old house still stood only as a fragile ghost which soon must yield to demolition squads, a hollow shell despite the proud persistence of its storied façade; a tradition made by the Meistersinger whose memory was enshrined in the home of Hans Sachs—a house now only a shapeless pile of rubble.

For the second time I had occasion to recall the yearning in those unhappy Kipling verses. The first time was more than two wars before. We two lonely Americans looked down from the window of our little room in a pension on the Boulevard Montparnasse in the Latin Quarter on a snowless, aching Christmas in Paris. Below was a deserted convent garden. If only the figure of a single nun had broken the damp stillness curtaining leafless trees and withered flowers! But no, they were all deep in their devotions and not even the faint echo of the evensong or the moan of the organ reached us. Nor was there holly or mistletoe (no white or scarlet berry), for the Latin Christmas bears little resemblance to ours. Long months had stretched to years since I had seen a lighted Christmas tree, evergreen festoon or a bright-ribboned wreath, or listened to the ringing crunch of footfalls in the powdery snow, or sleighbells—no novelty then in our northern clime.

I thought then of Kipling's lament of the exile and understood him when he said, "faint and forced the laughter, and if sadness follow after, we are richer for one mocking Christmas past."

Today as Yuletide rolls around once more, despite the shadows that fall across many a hearth, and the postwar worries that beset us, we at least can glory in the heritage of an American Christmas in the land which the God of our Fathers has bequeathed us.

Almost a month before Christmas Day, John Lewis had a hint that reassured him, temporarily at least, that he would not spend this year's holiday in jail. Judge T. Alan Goldsborough spoke the comforting word. He said, in discussing the contempt charge against Lewis, that he believed "nobody's comfort would be disturbed whatever the outcome."

How merry this season will be for the man who defied the government and brought down the wrath of half a dozen nations upon his head is a question. It would be interesting indeed to be able to look beneath the brow adorned with the bristling eyebrows and thatched with the thick grey hair that was once so black and bellicose.

This season in the nation's capitol isn't as merry a moment as it is in most cities, for this is a city of transplanted folk, most of whose homes are too far distant to be reached on a short leave or via the restricted purse that is the portion of most government workers. As I write, the President expects to journey back to Missouri and his own family circle. Many of the officials will do likewise.

White House a Center of Festivity

In other years there have been more festive Christmases.

The little ceremony which became a custom during the Roosevelt regime when the President was driven out into the crowd about the municipal tree where he touched the button that illumined it has been discontinued. That event which drew many a lonely inhabitant to the crowded square served to bring a holiday touch to Christmas Eve and the knowledge that the President later on would be surrounded by children and grandchildren while he read the "Christmas Carol" was a rather cheering thought.

There is on record the time when two White House children, Charley and Robert, one of them now a presidential aspirant himself, cut a mammoth Christmas pie given to their father, William Howard Taft, by the International Bakers' association. It was 32 inches in diameter and weighed 92 pounds.

There was a grand celebration, too, when Theodore Roosevelt, et familia, spent his first Christmas in the White House. The White House police were not the least of the celebrants—the new president distributed no less than 87 fat turkeys among them, the messengers, ushers, gardeners and stablemen. This was credited as being the largest largesse ever distributed by a president. President McKinley always gave turkeys to the married employees, but not as many or as big ones; the Franklin Roosevelts always had some souvenirs for the White House staff. What President Truman's gift will be this year has not been announced at this writing.

Back in 1892 when Benjamin Harrison spent his last Christmas in the White House there was no prejudice against things German and the high point of the celebration around the tree in the library was the recitation of German poems, taught them by their governess, by the Harrison grandchildren, Ben and Mary.

That was a real children's hour and we have a careful account in the Washington Star of that date to authenticate it. (No nylons or mink coats were mentioned.) "There is a complete set," says the Star, "of real baby furniture, the bed quite big enough for little Mary Lodge McKee; a dressing case, with a glass just high enough for her to peep into and arrange her front hair, and the cutest little washstand, with all the toilet appliances, all from Mrs. Harrison, to her tiny granddaughter. A set of lamb's wool muff and tippet for little Mary was lying near, and a steam engine, fitted out with every modern appliance, and which will chase around in the liveliest style for little Benjamin. He has a hook and ladder, a complete outfit, a set of parlor croquet and a doll baby or two."

After all, it is the children who make Christmas, for Christmas was made for them and it is by their grace that we oldsters can relive it over through them.

Occupation Zones Merged; Trouble Brews in Greece

GERMANY:
Merge Zones

Merger of the U. S. and British occupation zones in Germany set a pattern for the economic recovery of the war-shattered reich and promised to relieve the Anglo-American countries of expensive relief burdens.

While merger of the two zones figured to cost both powers a billion dollars for administrative and other expenses over a three year period, the price was cheap compared with present outlays, chiefly for food. Relief alone has been running the U. S. 200 million dollars annually.

Among other things, the merger is expected to speed the economic recovery of central Europe, which depended heavily upon Germany for materials and finished goods in prewar years. Until the food-producing eastern region of Germany under Russian occupation is included in zonal unification, however, the reich economy will continue out of balance and remain a drag on the Anglo-American powers.

GREECE:
Red Pattern

Even as Premier Tsaldaris left Athens for New York to protest against foreign interference in Greece there were rumblings that Greek leftists were collaborating with Slav elements for self-rule of the northern province of Macedonia.

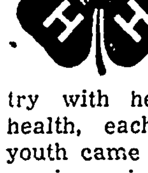
Development of an autonomous movement in Macedonia followed the pattern established last year in northern Iran, where leftist elements bearing Russian support succeeded in obtaining self-rule in an oil-rich region coveted by the Soviets.

Russian interest in Greece is as vital as in Iran since Greece stands as a Middle-Eastern outpost for Britain's imperial lifeline and Soviet control of the country would jeopardize Britain's Mediterranean interests. Cognizant of the danger, Britain has afforded Greece's rightist government strong military support and agreed to help arm new battalions.

TEACH AMERICAN PASTIME . . . Football, America's rugged pastime for body-building and fair competition, is introduced to a group of German youngsters by S/Sgt. Lewis Karker of Richmondville, N. Y., at a Bamberg, Germany, recreation center.

4-H:
Show Wares

To the 20,000 spectators assembled in the International Amphitheater in Chicago there seemed nothing like it.



Fourteen hundred strong, sturdy young boys and girls from rural America paraded in the arena, the cream of the 4-H crop in the U. S. Having pledged to give themselves to their club, community and country with heart, head, hands and health, each of the rosy-cheeked youth came to the annual congress a winner in agricultural or home-making competition.

The 1,400 were representative of the 1,700,000 4-H members the country over who harvested produce from 150,000 gardens in 1946; cared for 11,000,000 chickens and 750,000 head of livestock; canned 33,000,000 quarts of food and froze 10,000,000 pounds of products.

Grain Champs

Oldsters drew their share of honors during the week-long festivities in the Windy City.

Mrs. Amy Kelsey of Erickson, B. C., Canada, was crowned the first wheat queen of the Grain and Hay show, with her sample of hard red spring wheat. L. E. Peterson, Victor, Mont., won the reserve title with hard red winter Kanred.

Another Canadian won top honors when Gordon McArthur of Stayner, Ont., was adjudged oats king with his Beaver variety Garnet B. Rickard, Bowmanville, Ont., was named reserve champion with his Cartier strain.

Two Americans won first place in the corn and soybean competition. Newton L. Halterman of Rushville, Ind., became the 19th Hoosier to cop the corn crown while H. E. Stiegelmeir of Normal, Ill., capped 20 years of soybean cultivation on his farm when his samples were adjudged the best among those shown.

RADIO:
Clear Petrillo

James C. Petrillo, whose middle initial stands for Caesar, won his test of the Lea bill in the federal district court of Chicago, but the government promptly revealed it would appeal the decision to the U. S. Supreme court.

Under the Lea bill, radio stations cannot be forced into hiring more employees than are actually needed for conducting operations. The measure was passed after Petrillo's American Federation of Musicians sought to have broadcasters employ stand-by musicians where records were being used on programs.

EXTEND FARM FORMULA

'Parity' Pay for Labor Urged

WASHINGTON. — Nationwide use of a "parity" wage formula—patterned after the farm parity price formula — to maintain industrial peace and a high level of income for labor has been urged by the National Farmers union. Under such a formula, wages would rise and fall with similar changes in the cost of living.

In the case of the agricultural formula, parity prices—which are described by law as those equally fair to farmers and consumers—rise and fall with similar movements in prices of things farmers buy.

"We are inclined," the farm organization said, "to question very seriously the attempts to revise the Wagner labor relations act, to impose arbitration and otherwise to change the present basis of labor-management relations."

The organization made its recommendation in a statement submitted to the National Economic council, a government planning agency created by the employment act of 1946.

Expressing sharp opposition to a return to production control measures for agriculture, the union said full industrial employment at good wages would provide a market for practically all that farmers can produce.

It said future farm programs should provide for the establishment, through bargaining, of maximum and minimum prices in advance of the growing season, the permanent use and expansion of the production goal system now in effect; extension of the minimum wage law to agriculture, the purchase of large-scale farms as they come on the market and subdivision of these farms into family-type units

'Wife' Succeeds 'Grandmother' As Alibi for College Students

WAUKESHA, WIS.—Students still skip school, but the excuses nowadays reflect a new type of student, economic conditions and even the state of the family car, it is revealed in a survey of Carroll college alibis.

The traditional excuse, "my grandmother's funeral was yesterday," has been shelved as modern students concoct alibis more in keeping with the times.

"My wife had a baby," one former serviceman wrote, in an excuse typical of the increased number of married men and fathers among the G.I. students.

"My wife was sick and could not attend to the two children, who also were under the weather," another observed.

War injuries and war-incurred diseases, chiefly malaria, have been noted on some excuses.

A war refugee even came into the picture. One student said he had to "visit at home to see my aunt off to Scotland." She had been living in the United States during the war.

Taking no chance on any more lost records, another G.I. took off to convoy his file folder from Veterans' administration in Chicago to the Milwaukee office. He was believed to have had army experience on missing records.

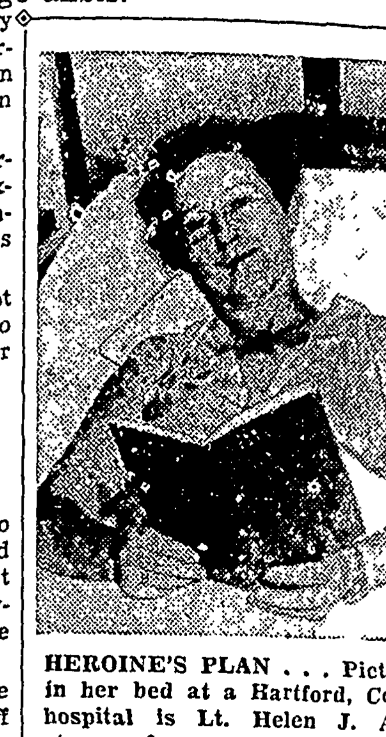
Indicative of the troubled housing situation, another sign of the times, were these excuses:

"I was absent because my presence was needed in court for eviction proceedings."

"I had to find a room in which to live."

Commuters' slips often contain mention of "car trouble."

Just for old times' sake, however, one student noted; maybe even honestly. "My grandmother's funeral was yesterday."



HEROINE'S PLAN . . . Pictured in her bed at a Hartford, Conn., hospital is Lt. Helen J. Armstrong, former army nurse, of Waterbury, Conn. She is the spark plug of a plan to build homes for completely paralyzed veterans in her home community. Her plan caught on in Waterbury, now may spread to communities throughout the nation.

Lighthouse Replica On Woman's Grave Fulfills Last Wish

SPRUCE HEAD, ME. — Fulfilling a deathbed wish made 54 years ago by Abbie Burgess, America's first woman lighthouse keeper, a band of pilgrims recently gathered at an ancient seaside cemetery here to place a miniature of the light she tended so long and faithfully on her grass grown grave.

The memorial was in the form of a small aluminum lighthouse, faithfully fashioned by Capt. Joseph Noden of Saugus, Mass., to represent Matinicus rock light, which at night can be seen from her last resting place, blinking 32 miles at sea.

As a girl of 13, Abbie first saw Matinicus rock in 1853. Her father had been named keeper. As the oldest of the children, Abbie helped tend the light while her father added to the family income by lobster fishing near shore.

Years later when a new keeper was named, Abbie remained to teach him the duties. She married his son and they set up housekeeping on Matinicus rock. Later while raising a family of four, Abbie officially was named assistant keeper. In time she and her husband moved their brood to White Head light near here. There her husband died and there Abbie, too, spent her last days.

In 1892, shortly before her death, she wrote a note: "If ever I have a gravestone, I would like it to be in the form of a lighthouse or beacon." It was this note, found by Historian Edward Rowe Snow, which led to the pilgrimage which placed the beacon on the lonely grave.

15 Million Evergreens Will Brighten Holiday

WASHINGTON. — More than 15 million Christmas trees will brighten the nation's homes this holiday season, officials of the forest service predict.

Selling Christmas trees is a big undertaking. Agriculture department marketing specialists are on the job trying to prevent any section of the country from having its market glutted.

Most of the trees come from the Northwest, Montana alone supplying one-sixth of them. Canada furnishes most of those used in the East, shipping about five million into the United States.

The forest service likes to see young evergreens utilized for the holiday trade, according to Forester Arthur M. Souder. The cutting, he adds, is really a weeding out process as most of the young growth is marked for eradication to prevent crowding salable timber.

Mother Goose Aids In Teaching Safety

OAKLAND, CALIF. — Mother Goose helps teach children safety in Oakland schools. A typical example of safety propaganda:

And said, 'What a smart boy am I'"

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

NEW VACATION LANDS

With the wraps still on Europe and the Orient, thousands of vacation-minded Americans with restless feet and loaded cameras now are pouring into Latin-America.

Airlines are making it possible to visit out-of-the-way attractions within a few hours, with plenty of time to relax on sunlit beaches washed by tropical seas.

New airplane schedules make it comparatively easy for tourists on a two weeks' vacation to visit almost any spot in Latin America, with Miami, New Orleans, New York, Brownsville, Texas, and Los Angeles as the "gateways."

As the good neighbor policy is cemented further with increasing tourist travel, old but gay Havana, Nassau and Mexico still remain high among the tourist ports of call. Nassau, however, is destined to lose part of its tourist traffic to nearby Great Exuma island and Grand Cayman island in the Cayman group, now available by plane.

Of all the South American countries, Brazil promises to become the vacationer's paradise. Its capital is rated one of the most beautiful cities in the world and wartime ties have stimulated interest among North Americans.

Dr. Louis Leonpacher, flying veterinarian of southwest Louisiana, finds that his plane permits him to provide veterinary service in areas where no veterinarian has ever tread before. AIDED VISION

Wartime fliers of the Royal Canadian air force improved their vision by drinking milk, according to Kenneth F. Fee, state milk control director at Albany, N. Y. After experiments conducted by Canadian experts showed that vision of airmen could be improved by feeding them riboflavin, fliers were receiving 24 times as much milk at the end of the war as at its outset.

URGES MORE REVENUE

Municipal officials were advised by Leigh Fisher, Detroit airport consultant, to give more attention to providing revenue-producing facilities at airports. High revenue return cannot be expected without providing facilities in which people can spend money, he said, adding that most airports today would more than double their revenues if such facilities were constructed. The airport, he insisted, is a potential commercial, retail and industrial area.

When Your Back Hurts—And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

History Has Been Made On New Year's Since Early Ages

JANUARY
Capricornus, the Goat

While January, Capricornus, the Goat, symbolized the nurse which cared for the young gods of the sun, the first month has furnished many of the important dates in the history of the world, and the first day of the year has been generous in its contributions. The Gregorian month of January is the namesake of Janus, the two-faced Roman god accredited wit hthe ability to look backward and forward simultaneously.

Following is a partial list of important events that took place on New Year's Day:

452 B.C.—First New Year's Celebration held.
38 B.C.—Era of the Caesars began.
1735—Paul Revere born.
1752—Betsy Ross born.
1776—First Union flag of 13 stripes unfurled by George Washington.
1792—Kentucky entered the Union.
1801—Union of Great Britain and Ireland.
1815—General Jackson repelled the British at New Orleans.
1863—Emancipation of Negro slaves proclaimed by President Lincoln.
1882—Greece gains independence from Turkey.
1898—Five boroughs of New York City corporated.

Debate of Solar Years vs. Calendar Years Continues

The earth evolves around the sun in exactly 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 46 seconds: consequently, Leap Years omitted haphazardly might result in the sun running away from the calendar and too many Leap Years would speed the calendar on ahead of the sun.

The Gregorian calendar, devised and presented to the world in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII, provides that years divisible by four—exclusive of the years numbering the centuries—shall have 366 days.

Calendar Revised Date Changed New Year's Day

In 1582 the Julian calendar was replaced by the Gregorian in a proclamation issued by Pope Gregory XIII. This established January 1 as New Year's Day. Our present calendar, known as the Gregorian calendar, is based upon Pope Gregory's revision of the Julian calendar and is more nearly in accord with the solar calendar—the error being reduced to only one day in 3,323 years.

Protestant states did not adopt the Gregorian calendar until the 18th century. It was not until the 20th century that Russia and others of the Balkan states decided to do likewise.

Scotch Handsel Monday Day of Gift-Giving

The Monday after New Year's is traditionally the "big day" for Scotch boys and girls; and, in addition to being the Scotch day of gift-giving, it is a day of feasting and gaiety. Families and friends gather to

"Drink a cup of kindness yet

Early Scots Used Bible for Fortunes

A glimpse into the future and the fortunes of individuals could be found in the Bible, the early Scots believed. The sacred book was laid upon the table, opened at random and a finger was placed on the printed page. The entire chapter was then read, and the message it held was believed to describe in some way the happiness or misery in store for the person concerned.

The King Trout

By M. CHRISTOPHER
WNU Features.

HE HELD the black, slender fish-pole in his left hand and the minnow pail in the other, and walked down the narrow path through the woods.

That was much the same. But that was only half. His dad wasn't tagging behind like he used to

He swallowed a couple of times and tried to face this new situation bravely, challengingly. It was awful lonely. Every little noise was a magnified sound to his young, alert ears

A partridge leaped up with a loud flutter of feathers from a dead, dried-up bush a few feet beside him, frightening him for an instant and he remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then. A cottontail scurried noiselessly across the path in front of him. Then suddenly ahead loomed the huge, oak-tree trunk, the marker that indicated the creek was near; and presently he could hear it, a soft, broken sound like distant thunder.

It was the trout he was after. The King, his dad had called it. That huge, green, orange-speckled fellow that was the biggest ever seen in the creek. His dad had caught it when he was on furlough several months ago, just before he was to be shipped overseas. He had held it out of the water for an instant while it thrashed and writhed at the end of the line, then lost it.

It had been his last furlough day, and he had to depart that night for camp But he'd said: "Don't worry,

He remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then.

Kim," with a persevering grin on his lips, "I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Now, that he wasn't coming back any more, Kim had decided he'd get the trout himself. He'd get it for his dad.

Time crawled, and the leaf shadows on the shore moved outward into the creek, where it lost its shape in the rippling unstill water.

He laid his pole on the side and unwrapped the sandwiches his mother had prepared for him.

He remembered the pitiful expression she had on her lonely, oval face, in her big, gold-flecked eyes that burned so much with tears when she had gotten the news. . .

He picked up his pole, baited it with a fresh chub, and tried again. An hour and a half went by, and suddenly he felt a tug at the end of his line. He tensed, every muscle in his young, husky body straining, his fingers individual vises gripped around the cork handle of the pole.

He jerked up on the pole. The middle bent into the shape of a scimitar, and the line tautened and quivered. He pulled harder. The line knifed through the water, then suddenly snapped out — empty!

"Missed him!" Kim exclaimed bitterly. His lips pursed, and he tightened his teeth. "But I'll get 'im! I gotta get 'im!"

The King had taken the minnow Kim rebaited the hook, cast the line out again. He waited.

Then suddenly, he felt that pull! It was strong—very strong. He jerked up on the pole. It curved sharply. The King Trout!

His heart swelled. A smile beamed on his face. He swung the pole up vertically and caught the flogging trout in his small, strong hand. He carried it back from the water and pulled the hook, with the chub-bait still on it, out of its big, round mouth.

And then—just then—he thought of his dad. Something queer came over him, a strange, peculiar feeling. He stared at the fish, and, as if from a distance, his father's words came to him, "Don't worry, Kim. I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Wait and see! The words struck him, now, and he began to see things in a different light. He felt ashamed of himself, as if he had taken something that did not rightfully belong to him. And suddenly he knew that was it. The King did not belong to him. . . .

Quietly, and unrestrainingly, he lifted the King high, and tossed it back into the creek.

Calmly, he picked up his fish-pole and minnow pail, and started up the bank for home.

WASHINGTON. — Speaking of holiday food, here is a prediction on various items on the housewife's shopping list and how long they will remain difficult to buy.

CANNED TOMATOES—Will continue to be short at least until next July. In the crop year ended with July, 1946, supplies were so short that we consumed 16 million cases of canned tomatoes, about half the normal demand. In the current crop year, ending July, 1947, there will be a slight increase to approximately 21 million cases, but this will still be far short of demands.

CHOCOLATE — Slight shortages of chocolate will continue for the next two or three years, due chiefly to shipping difficulties in trade lanes from Brazil and West Africa.

SALMON — The very unpredictable salmon continues to run late and short in the waterways of Alaska and our northwestern states. Normal salmon production in prewar years ranged between five million and eight million cases, but in the season which ended in September of this year, less than four million cases were packed for the American market.

TUNA — Fanciers of tuna fish salad will get all they want, due to a record-breaking production this year of over four million cases, 35 per cent above the 1945 tuna pack.

BANANAS — Shipments of bananas from Guatemala, Costa Rica and other Latin American sources will continue below normal for at least another year.

ATOMIC ENERGY VS. COAL

One thing the striking miners don't realize is that they are working for an industry which soon will be as out of date as the old sternwheeler of Mark Twain's Mississippi river days. Unfortunately, what they especially don't seem to realize is that their present strike is hastening the end of the coal industry.

A brief news item from the little town of Louisville, N. Y., tells part of the story. Its 150 families have converted to oil, making it the first completely oil-heated town in the USA. Others are bound to follow. Some industries had started converting to oil even before the strike. Natural gas piped east will further cut down consumption — especially as coal becomes more expensive and more uncertain.

However, this only tells part of the story. The rest of the story began on August 5, 1945, when a bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. Scientists have been working ever since on the problem of harnessing atomic energy. Already Poland is constructing an atomic energy power plant. In the United States the first atomic power plants should be completed in two years.

Naturally the coal, steel and oil interests are not anxious to encourage this. Nor are the big power companies, whose water power installations would be scrapped. These incidentally are the same interests which have blocked the use of natural gas in the Big Inch and Little Inch pipelines.

Science, however, can be retarded, but not stopped. And when atomic energy is used on a wide scale, scientists estimate it will be much cheaper than coal or oil. When that happens, coal mining will be just as obsolete as the journeymen wagon builders of 1800. And unfortunately for the coal miners, the more uncertain they make the supply of coal, the more they spur the development of atomic energy.

DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS FIGHT

Despite all the talk you hear about a "dog fight" in house Democratic ranks over the election of minority leader, you can write it down that John McCormack of Massachusetts, majority leader since 1940, will win out.

Inside fact is that Sam Rayburn of Texas, outgoing speaker, not only has informed McCormack by telegram that he intends to stick to his decision against running for the minority leadership, but also has assured McCormack he will back him to the limit for the post.

However, don't be surprised if Congressman Francis Walter of Pennsylvania is put in the field as a candidate against McCormack—even though Walter made the unpopular move of opposing use of natural gas in the government-owned pipelines. Some southern congressmen have been proposing Walter as a "compromise" choice to avoid a party "split."

Another minority leader prospect is statesmanlike Ewing Thomason of El Paso, Tex.

FROM THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

U.S.-British military officials in Rome, learning of a plan to scuttle the Italian fleet, have tried to decommission it — without success. Intelligence reports are that Italian officers are awaiting the British and French attempt to take over the fleet—then will sink it. . . . The Portuguese government has vetoed a new American proposal for permanent military bases in the Azores. The U. S. government considers the Azores even more important than Iceland.

Thanks a Lot

In this holiday season of friendliness, good will and good cheer, we want to express to one and all of our customers our appreciation for your confidence.

1946 has been a bad year to get merchandise but, our customers have been understanding, and for this we are sincerely grateful.

Even in this rich farming community most people prefere to buy on the installment payment plan, and when times are tough and payments are delayed, your friend the merchant has been known to walk the floor at night.

But, our customers were prosperous—1946 seems like everybody could keep up with their monthly payments, and thus even your friend the merchant could occasionally go home to his family with a smile on his face and a song in his heart.

A Joyous Christmas

That best part of a good man's life—
His little, nameless unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love.
—WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

Christmas is the season of the open heart and the open door. Let none stand out in the cold or be unremembered.

In this community of good fellows, where each helps share the other's happiness and all do their part towards making the Christmas season enjoyable for each and everyone, it is a privilege to be in a position to serve you. We take great pleasure in wishing you a Merry Christmas.

Christmas Abroad Stirs Memories of Yule at Home

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Christmas 1946! The second one in seven years when one could really talk about "peace on earth" without shamed and downcast eyes. While armies struggled, who could think of the message to the shepherds from the angels' chorus promising peace on earth for men of good will?

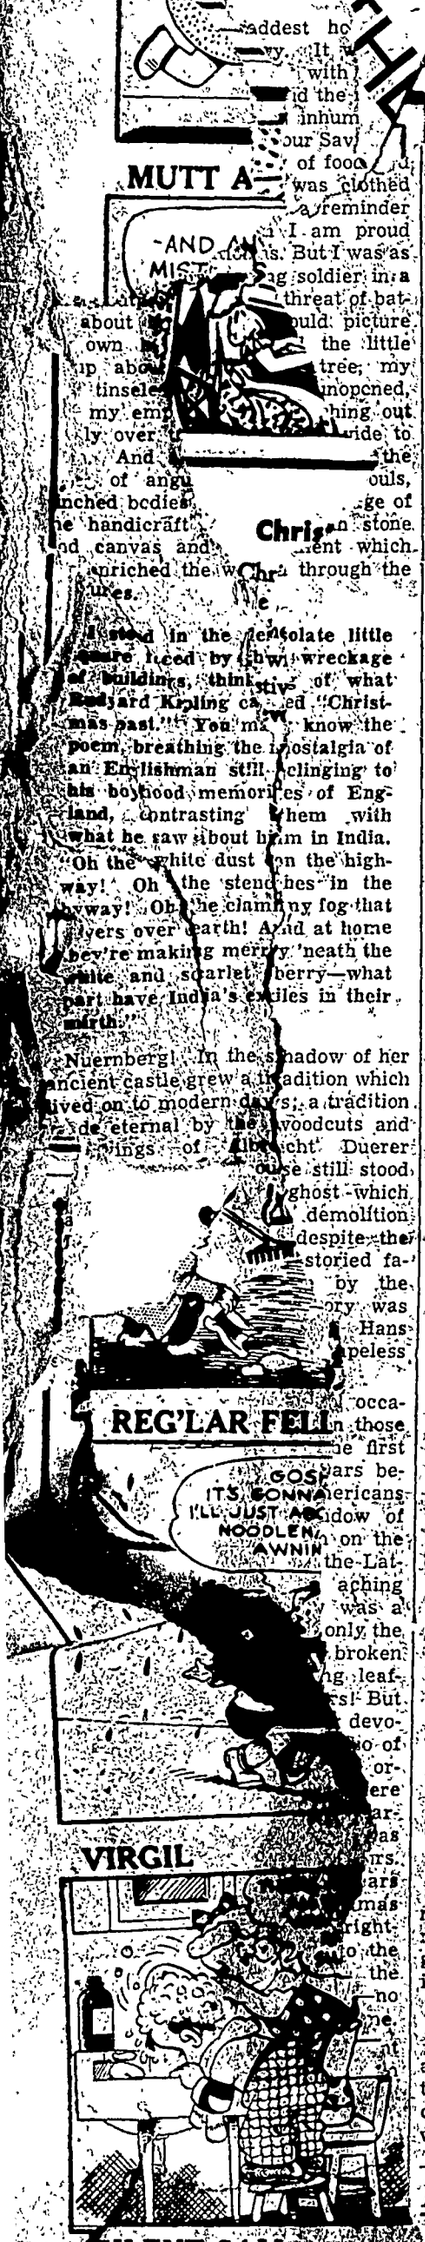
Baukh

Last Christmas the world was [illegible] from [illegible] were [illegible] addest ho[illegible] It [illegible] with [illegible] id the [illegible] inhum[illegible] our Sav[illegible] of food[illegible] was clothed [illegible] a reminder [illegible] I am proud [illegible]s. But I was as [illegible] soldier in a [illegible] threat of bat[illegible] about [illegible] ould picture [illegible] the little [illegible] tree, my [illegible] unopened, [illegible] my em[illegible] hing out [illegible] ly over t[illegible] ide to [illegible] And [illegible] the [illegible] of angu[illegible] ouls, [illegible] nched bodies [illegible] ge of [illegible] he handicraft[illegible] n stone [illegible] d canvas and [illegible] ent which [illegible] enriched the w[illegible] Chr[illegible] through the [illegible] ures.

I stood in the desolate little square faced by the shell wreckage of buildings, thinking of what Rudyard Kipling called "Christmas past." You must know the poem, breathing the nostalgia of an Englishman still clinging to his boyhood memories of England, contrasting them with what he saw about him in India.

Oh the white dust on the highway! Oh the stenches in the byway! Oh the clammy fog that hovers over earth! And at home they're making merry 'neath the holly and scarlet berry—what part have India's exiles in their mirth?"

Nuernberg. In the shadow of her ancient castle grew a tradition which lived on to modern days; a tradition made eternal by the woodcuts and paintings of Albrecht Duerer. The house still stood, a ghost which [illegible] demolition despite the storied fa[illegible] by the [illegible]ory was Hans [illegible]peless [illegible] occa[illegible] those [illegible]e first [illegible]ears be[illegible]Americans [illegible]dow of [illegible] on the [illegible] the Lat[illegible]aching [illegible] was a [illegible] only the [illegible] broken [illegible]g leaf[illegible]s! But [illegible] devo[illegible]o of [illegible] or[illegible]ere [illegible]ar[illegible]as [illegible]rs. [illegible]ears [illegible]mas [illegible]right [illegible] to the [illegible] no [illegible]ne [illegible]nt



That was a real children's hour and we have a careful account in the Washington Star of that date to authenticate it. (No nylons or mink coats were mentioned.) "There is a complete set," says the Star, "of real baby furniture, the bed quite big enough for little Mary Lodge McKee; a dressing case, with a glass just high enough for her to peep into and arrange her front hair; and the cutest little washstand, with all the toilet appliances, all from Mrs. Harrison, to her tiny granddaughter. A set of lamb's wool muff and tippet for little Mary was lying near, and a steam engine, fitted out with every modern appliance, and which will chase around in the liveliest style for little Benjamin. He has a hook and ladder, a complete outfit, a set of parlor croquet and a doll baby, or two."

After all, it is the children who make Christmas, for Christmas was made for them and it is by their grace that we oldsters can relive it over through them.

Would you say that even an inattentive criminal, if the court sentenced him to the gallows, might be credited with hanging on the judge's words?

deed to be able to look beneath the brow adorned with the bristling eyebrows and thatched with the thick grey hair that was once so black and bellicose.

This season in the nation's capitol isn't as merry a moment as it is in most cities, for this is a city of transplanted folk, most of whose homes are too far distant to be reached on a short leave or via the restricted purse that is the portion of most government workers. As I write, the President expects to journey back to Missouri and his own fa[illegible]cle. Many of the officials [illegible]ise.

[illegible]e a [illegible]stivity [illegible]s there have been [illegible]ristmases.

[illegible]eremony which be[illegible]stom during the [illegible]gime when the Pres[illegible]was driven out into the [illegible]owd about the municipal tree where he touched the button that illumined it has been discontinued. That event which drew many a lonely inhabitant to the crowded square served to bring a holiday touch to Christmas Eve and the knowledge that the President later on would be surrounded by children and grandchildren while he read the "Christmas Carol" was a rather cheering thought.

There is on record the time when two White House children, Charley and Robert, one of them now a presidential aspirant himself, cut a mammoth Christmas pie given to their father, William Howard Taft, by the International Bakers' association. It was 32 inches in diameter and weighed 92 pounds.

There was a grand celebration, too, when Theodore Roosevelt, et familia, spent his first Christmas in the White House. The White House police were not the least of the celebrants—the new president distributed no less than 87 fat turkeys among them, the messengers, ushers, gardeners and stablemen. This was credited as being the largest largesse ever distributed by a president. President McKinley always gave turkeys to the married employees, but not as many or as big ones; the Franklin Roosevelts always had some souvenirs for the White House staff. What President Truman's gift will be this year has not been announced at this writing.

Back in 1892 when Benjamin Harrison spent his last Christmas in the White House there was no prejudice against things German and the high point of the celebration around the tree in the library was the recitation of German poems taught them by their governess, by the Harrison grandchildren Ben and Mary.

IT'S COLD—BUT SCHOOL GOES ON . . . First and second graders at Cathedral school in Denver are shown getting their assignments in a frigid classroom. When the coal shortage forced a shutdown of the city's schools, the parochial institutions asked pupils to report for lesson assignments.

NEWS REVIEW

Occupation Zones Merged; Trouble Brews in Greece

GERMANY:
Merge Zones

Merger of the U. S. and British occupation zones in Germany set a pattern for the economic recovery of the war-shattered reich and promised to relieve the Anglo-American countries of expensive relief burdens.

While merger of the two zones figured to cost both powers a billion dollars for administrative and other expenses over a three year period, the price was cheap compared with present outlays, chiefly for food. Relief alone has been running the U. S. 200 million dollars annually.

Among other things, the merger is expected to speed the economic recovery of central Europe, which depended heavily upon Germany for materials and finished goods in prewar years. Until the food-producing eastern region of Germany under Russian occupation is included in zonal unification, however, the reich economy will continue out of balance and remain a drag on the Anglo-American powers.

GREECE:
Red Pattern

Even as Premier Tsaldaris left Athens for New York to protest against foreign interference in Greece there were rumblings that Greek leftists were collaborating with Slav elements for self-rule of the northern province of Macedonia.

Development of an autonomous movement in Macedonia followed the pattern established last year in northern Iran, where leftist elements bearing Russian support succeeded in obtaining self-rule in an oil-rich region coveted by the Soviets.

Russian interest in Greece is as vital as in Iran since Greece stands as a Middle-Eastern outpost for Britain's imperial lifeline and Soviet control of the country would jeopardize Britain's Mediterranean interests. Cognizant of the danger, Britain has afforded Greece's rightist government strong military support and agreed to help arm new battalions.

4-H:
Show Wares

To the 20,000 spectators assembled in the International Amphitheater in Chicago there seemed nothing like it.

Fourteen hundred strong, sturdy young boys and girls from rural America paraded in the arena, the cream of the 4-H crop in the U. S. Having pledged to give themselves to their club, community and country with heart, head, hands and health, each of the rosy-cheeked youth came to the annual congress a winner in agricultural or homemaking competition.

The 1,400 were representative of the 1,700,000 4-H members the country over who harvested produce from 150,000 gardens in 1946; cared for 11,000,000 chickens and 750,000 head of livestock; canned 33,000,000 quarts of food and froze 10,000,000 pounds of products.

Grain Champs

Oldsters drew their share of honors during the week-long festivities in the Windy City.

Mrs. Amy Kelsey of Erickson, B. C., Canada, was crowned the first wheat queen of the Grain and Hay show, with her sample of hard red spring wheat. L. E. Peterson, Victor, Mont., won the reserve title with hard red winter Kanred.

Another Canadian won top honors when Gordon McArthur of Stayner, Ont., was adjudged oats king with his Beaver variety Garnet B. Rickard, Bowmanville, Ont., was named reserve champion with his Cartier strain.

Two Americans won first place in the corn and soybean competition Newton L. Halterman of Rushville, Ind., became the 19th Hoosier to cop the corn crown while H. E. Stiegelmeir of Normal, Ill., capped 20 years of soybean cultivation on his farm when his samples were adjudged the best among those shown.

RADIO:
Clear Petrillo

James C. Petrillo, whose middle initial stands for Caesar, won his test of the Lea bill in the federal district court of Chicago, but the government promptly revealed it would appeal the decision to the U S Supreme court.

Under the Lea bill, radio stations cannot be forced into hiring more employees than are actually needed for conducting operations. The measure was passed after Petrillo's American Federation of Musicians sought to have broadcasters employ stand-by musicians where records were being used on programs.

TEACH AMERICAN PASTIME . . . Football, America's rugged pastime for body-building and fair competition, is introduced to a group of German youngsters by S/Sgt. Lewis Karker of Richmondville, N. Y., at a Bamberg, Germany, recreation center.

EXTEND FARM FORMULA

'Parity' Pay for Labor Urged

ASHINGTON.—Nationwide use "parity" wage formula pat[illegible] after the farm parity [illegible]la—to maintain indus[illegible] and a high level of [illegible] has been urged by the [illegible] farmers union. Under [illegible] formula, wages would rise [illegible] with similar changes in the [illegible] living.

[illegible]e case of the agricultural for[illegible] parity prices—which are de[illegible]d by law as those equally fair [illegible]mers and consumers—rise and [illegible] with similar movements in [illegible] of things farmers buy.

"We are inclined," the farm organization said, "to question very seriously the attempts to revise the Wagner labor relations act, to impose arbitration and otherwise to change the present basis of labor-management relations."

The organization made its recommendation in a statement submitted to the National Economic council, a government planning agency created by the employment act of 1946.

Expressing sharp opposition to a return to production control measures for agriculture, the union said full industrial employment at good wages would provide a market for practically all that farmers can produce.

It said future farm programs should provide for the establishment, through bargaining, of maximum and minimum prices in advance of the growing season, the permanent use and expansion of the production goal system now in effect; extension of the minimum wage law to agriculture, the purchase of large-scale farms as they come on the market and subdivision of these farms into family-type units

'Wife' Succeeds 'Grandmother' As Alibi for College Students

WAUKESHA, WIS.—Students still skip school, but the excuses nowadays reflect a new type of student, economic conditions and even the state of the family car, it is revealed in a survey of Carroll college alibis.

The traditional excuse, "my grandmother's funeral was yesterday," has been shelved as modern students concoct alibis more in keeping with the times.

"My wife had a baby," one former serviceman wrote, in an excuse typical of the increased number of married men and fathers among the G.I. students.

"My wife was sick and could not attend to the two children, who also were under the weather," another observed.

War injuries and war-incurred diseases, chiefly malaria, have been noted on some excuses.

A war refugee even came into the picture. One student said he had to "visit at home to see my aunt off to Scotland." She had been living in the United States during the war.

Taking no chance on any more lost records, another G.I. took off to convoy his file folder from Veterans' administration in Chicago to the Milwaukee office. He was believed to have had army experience on missing records.

Indicative of the troubled housing situation, another sign of the times, were these excuses:

"I was absent because my presence was needed in court for eviction proceedings."

"I had to find a room in which to live."

Commuters' slips often contain mention of "car trouble."

Just for old times' sake, however, one student noted, maybe even honestly. "My grandmother's funeral was yesterday."

HEROINE'S PLAN . . . Pictured in her bed at a Hartford, Conn., hospital is Lt. Helen J. Armstrong, former army nurse, of Waterbury, Conn. She is the spark plug of a plan to build homes for completely paralyzed veterans in her home community. Her plan caught on in Waterbury, now may spread to communities throughout the nation.

Lighthouse Replica On Woman's Grave Fulfills Last Wish

SPRUCE HEAD, ME. — Fulfilling a deathbed wish made 54 years ago by Abbie Burgess, America's first woman lighthouse keeper, a band of pilgrims recently gathered at an ancient seaside cemetery here to place a miniature of the light she tended so long and faithfully on her grass grown grave.

The memorial was in the form of a small aluminum lighthouse, faithfully fashioned by Capt. Joseph Noden of Saugus, Mass., to represent Matinicus rock light, which at night can be seen from her last resting place, blinking 32 miles at sea.

As a girl of 13, Abbie first saw Matinicus rock in 1853. Her father had been named keeper. As the oldest of the children, Abbie helped tend the light while her father added to the family income by lobster fishing near shore.

Years later when a new keeper was named, Abbie remained to teach him the duties. She married his son and they set up housekeeping on Matinicus rock. Later while raising a family of four, Abbie officially was named assistant keeper. In time she and her husband moved their brood to White Head light near here. There her husband died and there Abbie, too, spent her last days.

In 1892, shortly before her death, she wrote a note: "If ever I have a gravestone, I would like it to be in the form of a lighthouse or beacon." It was this note, found by Historian Edward Rowe Snow, which led to the pilgrimage which placed the beacon on the lonely grave.

15 Million Evergreens Will Brighten Holiday

WASHINGTON. — More than 15 million Christmas trees will brighten the nation's homes this holiday season, officials of the forest service predict.

Selling Christmas trees is a big undertaking. Agriculture department marketing specialists are on the job trying to prevent any section of the country from having its market glutted.

Most of the trees come from the Northwest, Montana alone supplying one-sixth of them. Canada furnishes most of those used in the East, shipping about five million into the United States.

The forest service likes to see young evergreens utilized for the holiday trade, according to Forester Arthur M. Souder. The cutting, he adds, is really a weeding out process as most of the young growth is marked for eradication to prevent crowding salable timber.

Mother Goose Aids In Teaching Safety

OAKLAND, CALIF. — Mother Goose helps teach children safety in Oakland schools. A typical example of safety propaganda:

Stood on the corner
Watching the cars go by.
He looked to the left,
He looked to the right,
And said, 'What a smart boy am I'"

NEW VACATION LANDS

With the wraps still on Europe and the Orient, thousands of vacation-minded Americans with restless feet and loaded cameras now are pouring into Latin-America.

Airlines are making it possible to visit out-of-the-way attractions within a few hours, with plenty of time to relax on sunlit beaches washed by tropical seas.

New airplane schedules make it comparatively easy for tourists on a two weeks' vacation to visit almost any spot in Latin America, with Miami, New Orleans, New York, Brownsville, Texas, and Los Angeles as the "gateways."

As the good neighbor policy is cemented further with increasing tourist travel, old but gay Havana, Nassau and Mexico still remain high among the tourist ports of call. Nassau, however, is destined to lose part of its tourist traffic to nearby Great Exuma island and Grand Cayman island in the Cayman group, now available by plane.

Of all the South American countries, Brazil promises to become the vacationer's paradise. Its capital is rated one of the most beautiful cities in the world and wartime ties have stimulated interest among North Americans.

Dr. Louis Leonpacher, flying veterinarian of southwest Louisiana, finds that his plane permits him to provide veterinary service in areas where no veterinarian has ever tread before. His territory covers marshlands and other areas accessible only by boat. Before the war Dr. Leonpacher had 100 to 150 landing flying places, where cattle were brought for vaccinations.

AIDED VISION

Wartime fliers of the Royal Canadian air force improved their vision by drinking milk, according to Kenneth F. Fee, state milk control director at Albany, N. Y. After experiments conducted by Canadian experts showed that vision of airmen could be improved by feeding them riboflavin, fliers were receiving 24 times as much milk at the end of the war as at its outset.

AWAITS TEST FLIGHT . . . First test flights are scheduled in December at Muroc flight test base in California for the army's SX-1, designed to fly faster than sound. Built by Bell Aircraft company, the plane is designed to fly at a top speed of 1,700 miles per hour at an altitude of 80,000 feet.

URGES MORE REVENUE

Municipal officials were advised by Leigh Fisher, Detroit airport consultant, to give more attention to providing revenue-producing facilities at airports. High revenue return cannot be expected without providing facilities in which people can spend money, he said, adding that most airports today would more than double their revenues if such facilities were constructed. The airport, he insisted, is a potential commercial, retail and industrial area.

When Your Back Hurts And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Pagans Also Sent New Year's Cards

Here in America the popular and ever-growing custom of exchanging New Year's greeting cards is of fairly recent origin, but actually the New Year's card antedates the more familiar Christmas card by several hundred years.

With Christmas our greatest national holiday, most of us are inclined to think of New Year's as a sort of happy afterthought. The fact is, it is one of the oldest of festivals, dating back to pagan times. In certain countries of Europe where Christmas is observed as a purely religious festival, New Year's takes the form of a real feast day and its celebration is marked by rejoicing and the exchange of gifts and greetings.

The earliest known New Year's "greetings" were medals marked with good wishes which date back to the reign of the Roman Emperor

Commodus (180-192). And while New Year's cards long have been a tradition in China, where the technique of printing was invented, the first European New Year's card we have record of is of German origin, dating back to the 1450s. It depicts the Christ Child and a chest overflowing with good wishes. Another card of the same period has a treasure ship as its central design.

Our present-day New Year's cards have an impressive history behind them. With their festive confetti-colors and "Baby New Year," "Father Time," bells and balloons, they serve as messages of the good will we feel toward our friends and neighbors, and of our hope for "A Prosperous and Happy New Year!"

New Year Antedates Birth of Christ

The celebration of New Years on January 1 began in 452 B. C., and therefore, contrary to logical reasoning, had nothing whatsoever to do with the birth of Christ.

After December 25 had been established as the day of nativity, the church made January 1 a religious festival honoring the circumcision of Jesus; the day being thus observed in the church.

History Has Been Made On New Year's Since Early Ages

JANUARY
Capricornus, the Goat

While January, Capricornus, the Goat, symbolized the nurse which cared for the young gods of the sun, the first month has furnished many of the important dates in the history of the world, and the first day of the year has been generous in its contributions. The Gregorian month of January is the namesake of Janus, the two-faced Roman god accredited wit hthe ability to look backward and forward simultaneously.

Following is a partial list of important events that took place on New Year's Day:

452 B.C.—First New-Year's Celebration held.
38 B.C.—Era of the Caesars began.
1735—Paul Revere born.
1752—Betsy Ross born.
1776—First Union flag of 13 stripes unfurled by George Washington.
1792—Kentucky entered the Union.
1801—Union of Great Britain and Ireland.
1815—General Jackson repelled the British at New Orleans.
1863—Emancipation of Negro slaves proclaimed by President Lincoln.
1882—Greece gains independence from Turkey.
1898—Five boroughs of New York City corporated.
1901—Commonwealth of Australia formed.
1907—U. S. Pure Food law became effective.
1912—Republic of China founded.
1923—USSR formed.
1942—United Nations' declaration signed.

Debate of Solar Years vs. Calendar Years Continues

The earth evolves around the sun in exactly 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 46 seconds: consequently, Leap Years omitted haphazardly might result in the sun running away from the calendar and too many Leap Years would speed the calendar on ahead of the sun.

The Gregorian calendar, devised and presented to the world in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII, provides that years divisible by four—exclusive of the years numbering the centuries—shall have 366 days.

Calendar Revised Date Changed New Year's Day

In 1582 the Julian calendar was replaced by the Gregorian in a proclamation issued by Pope Gregory XIII. This established January 1 as New Year's Day. Our present calendar, known as the Gregorian calendar, is based upon Pope Gregory's revision of the Julian calendar and is more nearly in accord with the solar calendar—the error being reduced to only one day in 3,323 years.

Protestant states did not adopt the Gregorian calendar until the 18th century. It was not until the 20th century that Russia and others of the Balkan states decided to do likewise.

Scotch Handsel Monday Day of Gift-Giving

The Monday after New Year's is traditionally the "big day" for Scotch boys and girls; and, in addition to being the Scotch day of gift-giving, it is a day of feasting and gaiety. Families and friends gather to

"Drink a cup of kindness yet
For Auld Lang Syne."

Early Scots Used Bible for Fortunes

A glimpse into the future and the fortunes of individuals could be found in the Bible, the early Scots believed. The sacred book was laid upon the table, opened at random and a finger was placed on the printed page. The entire chapter was then read, and the message it held was believed to describe in some way the happiness or misery in store for the person concerned.

The King Trout

By M. CHRISTOPHER
WNU Features.

HE HELD the black, slender fish-pole in his left hand and the minnow pail in the other, and walked down the narrow path through the woods.

That was much the same. But that was only half His dad wasn't tagging behind like he used-to

He swallowed a couple of times and tried to face this new situation bravely, challengingly. It was awful lonely. Every little noise was a magnified sound to his young, alert ears.

A partridge leaped up with a loud flutter of feathers from a dead, dried-up bush a few feet beside him, frightening him for an instant and he remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then. A cottontail scurried noiselessly across the path in front of him. Then suddenly ahead loomed the huge, oak-tree trunk, the marker that indicated the creek was near; and presently he could hear it, a soft, broken sound like distant thunder.

It was the trout he was after The King, his dad had called it. That huge, green, orange-speckled fellow that was the biggest ever seen in the creek. His dad had caught it when he was on furlough several months ago, just before he was to be shipped overseas. He had held it out of the water for an instant while it thrashed and writhed at the end of the line, then lost it.

It had been his last furlough day, and he had to depart that night for camp. But he'd said: "Don't worry,

He remembered the time he had shot his first grouse. Dad had been with him then.

Kim," with a persevering grin on his lips, "I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Now, that he wasn't coming back any more, Kim had decided he'd get the trout himself. He'd get it for his dad.

Time crawled, and the leaf shadows on the shore moved outward into the creek, where it lost its shape in the rippling unstill water.

He laid his pole on the side and unwrapped the sandwiches his mother had prepared for him.

He remembered the pitiful expression she had on her lonely, oval face, in her big, gold-flecked eyes that burned so much with tears when she had gotten the news. . .

He picked up his pole, baited it with a fresh chub, and tried again An hour and a half went by, and suddenly he felt a tug at the end of his line. He tensed, every muscle in his young, husky body straining, his fingers individual vises gripped around the cork handle of the pole.

He jerked up on the pole. The middle bent into the shape of a scimitar, and the line tautened and quivered. He pulled harder. The line knifed through the water, then suddenly snapped out — empty!

"Missed him!" Kim exclaimed bitterly. His lips pursed, and he tightened his teeth. "But I'll get 'im! I gotta get 'im!"

The King had taken the minnow Kim rebaited the hook, cast the line out again. He waited.

Then suddenly, he felt that pull! It was strong—very strong. He jerked up on the pole It curved sharply. The King Trout!

His heart swelled. A smile beamed on his face. He swung the pole up vertically and caught the flogging trout in his small, strong hand. He carried it back from the water and pulled the hook, with the chub-bait still on it, out of its big, round mouth.

And then—just then—he thought of his dad. Something queer came over him, a strange, peculiar feeling. He stared at the fish, and, as if from a distance, his father's words came to him, "Don't worry, Kim. I'll be back one of these days, and I'll get the King. You wait and see."

Wait and see! The words struck him, now, and he began to see things in a different light. He felt ashamed of himself, as if he had taken something that did not rightfully belong to him. And suddenly he knew that was it. The King did not belong to him. . . .

Quietly, and unrestrainingly, he lifted the King high, and tossed it back into the creek.

Calmly, he picked up his fish-pole and minnow pail, and started up the bank for home.

WASHINGTON. — Speaking of holiday food, here is a prediction on various items on the housewife's shopping list and how long they will remain difficult to buy.

CANNED TOMATOES—Will continue to be short at least until next July. In the crop year ended with July, 1946, supplies were so short that we consumed 16 million cases of canned tomatoes, about half the normal demand. In the current crop year, ending July, 1947, there will be a slight increase to approximately 21 million cases, but this will still be far short of demands.

CHOCOLATE — Slight shortages of chocolate will continue for the next two or three years, due chiefly to shipping difficulties in trade lanes from Brazil and West Africa.

SALMON — The very unpredictable salmon continues to run late and short in the waterways of Alaska and our northwestern states. Normal salmon production in prewar years ranged between five million and eight million cases, but in the season which ended in September of this year, less than four million cases were packed for the American market.

TUNA — Fanciers of tuna fish salad will get all they want, due to a record-breaking production this year of over four million cases, 35 per cent above the 1945 tuna pack.

BANANAS — Shipments of bananas from Guatemala, Costa Rica and other Latin American sources will continue below normal for at least another year.

ATOMIC ENERGY VS. COAL

One thing the striking miners don't realize is that they are working for an industry which soon will be as out of date as the old stern-wheeler of Mark Twain's Mississippi river days. Unfortunately, what they especially don't seem to realize is that their present strike is hastening the end of the coal industry.

A brief news item from the little town of Louisville, N. Y., tells part of the story. Its 150 families have converted to oil, making it the first completely oil-heated town in the USA. Others are bound to follow. Some industries had started converting to oil even before the strike. Natural gas piped east will further cut down consumption — especially as coal becomes more expensive and more uncertain.

However, this only tells part of the story. The rest of the story began on August 5, 1945, when a bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. Scientists have been working ever since on the problem of harnessing atomic energy. Already Poland is constructing an atomic energy power plant. In the United States the first atomic power plants should be completed in two years.

Naturally the coal, steel and oil interests are not anxious to encourage this. Nor are the big power companies, whose water power installations would be scrapped. These incidentally are the same interests which have blocked the use of natural gas in the Big Inch and Little Inch pipelines.

Science, however, can be retarded, but not stopped. And when atomic energy is used on a wide scale, scientists estimate it will be much cheaper than coal or oil. When that happens, coal mining will be just as obsolete as the journeymen wagon builders of 1800. And unfortunately for the coal miners, the more uncertain they make the supply of coal, the more they spur the development of atomic energy.

DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS FIGHT

Despite all the talk you hear about a "dog fight" in house Democratic ranks over the election of minority leader, you can write it down that John McCormack of Massachusetts, majority leader since 1940, will win out.

Inside fact is that Sam Rayburn of Texas, outgoing speaker, not only has informed McCormack by telegram that he intends to stick to his decision against running for the minority leadership, but also has assured McCormack he will back him to the limit for the post.

However, don't be surprised if Congressman Francis Walter of Pennsylvania is put in the field as a candidate against McCormack—even though Walter made the unpopular move of opposing use of natural gas in the government-owned pipelines. Some southern congressmen have been proposing Walter as a "compromise" choice to avoid a party "split."

Another minority leader prospect is statesmanlike Ewing Thomason of El Paso, Tex.

FROM THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

U.S.-British military officials in Rome, learning of a plan to scuttle the Italian fleet, have tried to decommission it — without success. Intelligence reports are that Italian officers are awaiting the British and French attempt to take over the fleet—then will sink it. . . . The Portuguese government has vetoed a new American proposal for permanent military bases in the Azores. The U. S. government considers the Azores even more important than Iceland.
